The General Ignorance Outside Germany.

(New York Press.)

The German ambassador, Count von Bernstorff, said at a luncheon at Jacob H. Schiff's cottage at Seabright: "To blame Germany for this war shows an ignorance of welt politik as excessive as the broker's ignorance of art. A banker said to a broker: 'I want you to come and spend the week end with me in the country. I want to show you a Murillo, a Bouguereau, and a Tintoretto that I bought last week.' 'Why, man, what a fool you are,' said the broker, 'to buy foreign cars in war time! Don't you know you'll never be able to get new parts.'"

Its thinness is in the movement

Come in and let us show you how it is that movement is the soul of watch value. The slenderness of the watch is but a natural result of the skill and ingenuity that produced superior movement.

Then you will understand how such words as "In your pocket like a silver dollar," are applicable to the highest standards of gentility and refinement.

Then you will know how different this genuine thin model thinness is from watches made to appear thin by such methods as scrunching the inside down somewhere near the back cover, or doubling a fusee into movement for the sake of a thin edged case's sake.

Before you buy any watch, be sure to come in and see this genuine thin model watch—the Queen Verité.

Still Rumours of This City As a Centre

Mr. Burnham's Statement in Regard to Possible Mobilization Here

Mr. Burnham said in answer to a question by the Examiner as to the truth of rumours of mobilization here that it was quite possible that the Department of Militia was enlarging its plans and consequently the scope of its mobilization, but that all he had heard of it so far was from a gentleman in the City, who told him that a certain officer had written to him telling him that Mr. Burnham was to be communicated with by an officer of the Department concerning the matter.

"No doubt that whatever is needed will be done," said Mr. Burnham. "All our facts and facilities are before the Minister. It is, however, to be regretted that such a thoroughly military matter as mobilization should be spoken of in such an entirely irregular and unmilitary way as to be the subject of comment in private letters by military men in the course of casual correspondence. We must concede some better degree of efficiency at such a time to such a department, and I do not wish, therefore, to discuss the matter further."

New Minister Was Welcomed

Unique Banquet Held Under Auspices of Knox Young People's Guild

While expecting to find more sauerkraut in Berlin than that which was found on the tables last night, the banquet under the auspices of Knox Young People's Guild, held in the city last night, was otherwise a grand success. The banquet was to celebrate the victory of the French army over the Russians in a very unique membership campaign and to welcome the newly inducted pastor, Rev. J. A. McKenzie.

For the past couple of months a very spirited and altogether successful membership campaign has been waged by the Young People of Knox Church on a military basis. Opposing armies were chosen under the French and Russian colours, under the leadership of Messrs. R. Hillier and K. Kenyon, respectively, each to start from the same distance on opposite sides of Berlin. The French, as victors, were supposed to be the guests of the Russians last night in Berlin.

About a hundred and fifty young people were present and enjoyed a very tasty supper and well chosen toast list.

There were many hearty expressions of welcome to Mr. McKenzie, and assurances of loyalty and assistance from the young people, and when the toast to The New Minister was proposed, Mr. McKenzie was greeted by a chorus "Hurrah, Hurrah," and three hearty cheers, to which he feelingly responded.

The presence of Rev. James Rollins and Rev. Robert Pogue, who were called upon in connection with the toasts to the King and Church, respectively added to the pleasure of the evening.

The toast list was as follows:

Chairman and Toastmaster—Mr. C. Williamson, president.

King and Country—Rev. James Rollins.

The Church—Rev. Robert Pogue.

Solo—"Rule Britannia," Mr. J. Smith.

The New Minister—Rev. J. A. McKenzie.

MOULT HOME CLASS BANQUET

Enjoyable Affair at Hastings —Royal Hotel is About to Change Hands

HASTINGS, Jan. 26—We are informed that the Royal Hotel is about to change hands, and that the present proprietor purposes moving to Lindsay.

Stock-taking is the order of the day and our local merchants are taking a retrospective view of the past year and planning greater things for the ensuing year.

Rev. D. A. Thompson was in Peterborough on Thursday of last week where he took part in the induction of the new Pastor of Knox Church, in that City.

The literary meeting of the League, on Monday night, brought out a good attendance, and everyone was well pleased with the programme, which was composed of vocal and instrumental music, readings, recitations, and a debate, which was well contested by some of the younger members of the Society and which showed a great amount of thought and real sense.

A baby boy has arrived to gladden the hearts and brighten the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Johnson.

Mr. Firman of Percey delivered at the G.T.R. station, here, on Tuesday last, two very fine hogs, about two years old, which weighed together 1,280 lbs., the heavier one tipping the scales at 645 pounds. They were shipped to Toronto by Mr. J. Stevenson.

Those who attended the banquet on Friday night in the S. S. room of the Methodist Church, under the auspices of the organized Adult Class, report a good attendance and a very enjoyable evening. The tables were tastily arranged and nicely decorated and were well waited on by the Committee in charge. After ample justice had been done to the inner man a good programme was given and every one present thoroughly enjoyed themselves. Mr. C. Jones is the capable teacher of the class, and is untiring in his efforts to make it a success.

Practice has begun for the entertainment to be given by the Ladies' Aid somewhere about the middle of February. The play is entitled "The Minister's Bride" and has been given with marked success in many places.

Friday last was a busy day around the G.T.R. station, caused by a large shipment of live stock, under the direction of Mr. Richard Walsh.

Mr. Doughty, head agent for the Empire Separator Co., spent a few days last week here in the interests of the firm.

Mrs. J. Greenley of Campbellford has been visiting her sisters here.

Mr. Fred Moar of Port Hope has been renewing acquaintances here, the guest of his brother, Mr. J. Moar.

Mr. Duncan Fife visited friends in Peterborough for a few days during the week.

Miss Cardwell of Westwood called on Thursday and made a short visit.

Mr. McKay of Montreal is in town advertising a new style of clothes-horse which is quite up-to-date.

Mr. James Hall of Peterborough is visiting friends in this district and was in Hastings on Saturday.

Mrs. Green of Colborne has been a guest at the home of Mr. W. Stenson.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Oakman and family are visiting in Moorefield, guests of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Oakman.

Mr. Bert Beavis of Campbellford spent Friday with friends here.

Miss A Sargent of Westwood was in town on Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. John Doherty attended a public auction sale at Keene on Wednesday.

Mr. Shorter took a trip to Peterborough on Monday to give his name as a volunteer.

Mr. W. Baker has purchased a driver from Mr. Lew Kelly.

Lovers of skating are taking advantage of the ice at the rink and making good use of their opportunities.

The price of eggs has taken a sudden drop from 35c to 25c per doz. This was rather unexpected at this season of the year.

RAILWAY WORK

What the completion of the Kettle Valley Railway will mean to transcontinental traffic, both freight and passenger, was explained by Mr. J. J. Warren, the president of the company, who has been spending a few days east. For years past the Canadian Pacific Railway has been wrestling with the problem of reducing grades in the Rocky Mountain section, and it is probable that it will continue to struggle for years to come. Even in days when expansion work is necessarily restricted and curtailed, orders are given, for example, to push the work on the Rogers Pass tunnel to completion. But with the Kettle Valley Railway in operation the Canadian Pacific will have alternative routes from the main line which should at once make much more economical the handling of trains to the Pacific Coast. The Kettle Valley line in Southern British Columbia, which links up with railways in the United States, and with the Canadian Pacific, which has running rights over it, will make an admirable alternative route by way of the Crow's Nest Pass, as its grades nowhere exceed 2 per cent., while the Kootenay Central has an average grade of less than 1 per cent. The Kettle Valley line will also be of great value to the fruit growers of the Okanagan Valley, as it touches Penticton and Summerland, and puts them into direct touch with the mining districts of Southern British Columbia. As a scenic route this line should prove attractive to tourists, as the southern end of the Okanagan Valley is by far the most picturesque portion of this favoured section of British Columbia. By early summer the full passenger service will be in operation, and Mr. Warren expects that a large volume of the transcontinental travel will be diverted to his line.

Tribute To Danny Simons

The Seattle Daily Times has the following:

"Danny Simons, styled on the Pantages theatre programme as the "Military Hobo," was the feature of the week's bill. His funny songs and stories caught the house immediately, and the imitation of Theodore Roosevelt, which he gave as an encore, brought down the house. From clown to character artist, from a buffon of the sawdust ring to the inimitable portrayer of more than 25 separate and distinct parts, cover the career of Danny Simons.

"For two years Mr. Simons built the foundation of his stage career with one of the early day circuses. From that he went into stock and there learned to play repertoire. Tramp, German, Hebrew, Irishman, are all the same to this veteran of the stage, and on more than one occasion he has filled in in stock in character feminine parts."

LADIES' AID CONCERT

A very successful concert was held at Park St. Baptist Church last evening under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid.

New Clerk Appointed

Politics in Municipal and Church Affairs in Burleigh

APSLEY, Jan. 27.—It seems that nothing can be done in municipal matters in Burleigh and Anstruther without politics or a little petty spite. It seems that after the general business of the first meeting of the council of that municipality for 1915, it was moved and seconded by two of the councillors that Dr. Shepherd be appointed clerk of the municipality and carried.

No cause was given why the clerkship should be taken from Mr. Gallon, who has been clerk since since Dr. Bell moved away in 1911, and he has been a resident and ratepayer of Anstruther for over thirty-five years, and [illegible] one who has only been in Apsley about ten months and has no other interest there than as a doctor. Besides a good practice he was getting a salary of $100 as M. H. O. They, (the council) to smooth it off a little, gave as an excuse that the doctor would take less salary as M.H.O. if he was clerk. Economy, you know, but a very lame excuse. Not only in municipal matters do politics play an important part, but is being brought prominently into church affairs and may, but it is hoped not, be the means of breaking up one of, if not the best, church choirs they ever had in Apsley.

German experiments have shown that ramie fibre and silk make better incandescent gas light mantles than cotton, which generally is used.

GERMAN CASUALTIES 3500 LEFT 1000 DEAD IN SMALL AREA

SPECIAL CABLE:

PARIS, Jan. 28—The fiercest and most sanguinary single engagement of the war, not even excepting the fight at Ypres, or the recent German dash at Soissons, was fought yesterday in the region between Soissons and Craonne, north of the Aisne. The conflict, mentioned briefly in yesterday's communiques, is enlarged upon in the official report of the French War Office.

At first the Germans held the upper hand, driving the French from a line of trenches in the Foulon wood, west of Craonne, but later in the day Gen. Joffre's men reformed and by a brilliant charge, recovered all that was tenable of the lost ground. So violent was the fighting that the Germans left 3,000 dead on a small part of the field, and, in addition, lost many prisoners, taken from all of the four regiments with which the enemy began the assault.

Launched Many Attacks.

Unable to make further headway at Soissons, the Germans assembled a great force on either side of that city and, on the nearest points in the line to Paris, launched attack after attack, displaying a desperate bravery that carried the day for them temporarily. It was not until the French infantry and the French gunners returned to the fray with an even greater fury and bravery that the tide was turned and the invaders were obliged to withdraw sullenly, and fighting at every foot.

The Battle of Craonne began early yesterday afternoon. It was preceded on the German side by a bombardment with heavy guns and hand grenades that could not have been exceeded in intensity. The sound of the great guns was still echoing across the valley of the Aisne when the German infantry came rushing across the open space before their trenches and up to the French first line. A storm of rifle shot met them and finally they were turned back, suffering enormous losses, except at La Creute where the closing up of a quarry by the explosions of big shells, put the French at a disadvantage.

Lost Two Companies.

Two companies of French troops were surrounded and captured. This destroyed the value of neighbouring trenches for the French, who were forced back on a considerable front. The Germans, believing they had gained their point, were establishing themselves in the ground they had won when in their turn the French foot soldiers leaped back to the attack.

Then ensued a hand-to-hand fight that continued for hours before the Germans fell back. At nightfall the French had recovered most of their trenches. Throughout the night there was no fighting, but in the morning the Germans came back to the battle, which proceeded throughout the day.

The German attack to the west of Soissons, in the region of Tracy-le-Val, was made last night. The enemy attempted to surprise the French troops, but did not succeed, although they destroyed 50 metres of the trenches, which they themselves, however, were unable to occupy. These events, together with an unsuccessful assault near St. Hubert, in the Argonne, are told of in their night communique.

German Casualties 3,500.

The afternoon communique gives some idea of the tremendous losses which the Germans have sustained as the result of their recent attacks at La Bassee and Ypres. The statement says that it was a full brigade and not a battalion which assaulted the British trenches at Ypres on Monday, and that consequently the German losses there and in yesterday's fighting at La Bassee were three and a half battalions, or 3,500 men.

TRY THEM FOR MURDER

Drastic Treatment Suggested for German Airmen Who Throw Bombs on Unprotected Towns

RUSSIA'S PROPOSALS

SPECIAL WIRE:

LONDON, Jan. 28.—Drastic treatment of German airmen who hurl bombs upon unfortified cities was proposed here to-day.

It was suggested that Germans captured in attempted air raids upon unprotected towns be treated as criminals and formally tried on murder charges, instead of receiving treatment usually accorded prisoners of war.

The proposal came from Petrograd. Russian officials, incensed over the latest German attempt to bombard Libau from a Zeppelin and a dirigible, have recommended that the crew of the Zeppelin, captured when the airship fell into the water, be brought before the military court on a charge of attempted murder.

..Novoe Vremya, a Petrograd newspaper, urged England and France to adopt the same method. ... ...

..The Petrograd paper declared this was the only satisfactory means of fighting "German savagery," and demanded that "Baby Killers" be executed if found guilty of killing noncombatants.

SIR DAVID BEATTY'S REPORT ON ENGAGEMENT IN THE NORTH SEA

But For Chance Shot Disabling "Lion" Victory Would Have Been Greater---Absolutely Disposes of Berlin Official Report.

SPECIAL CABLE:

LONDON, Jan. 28.—The Admiralty has received the following preliminary telegraphic report from Vice-Admiral Sir David Beatty regarding the naval action between the British and German squadrons in the North Sea on Sunday.

"A flotilla of destroyers patrolling about 7.30 o'clock in the morning sighted and attacked the enemy, whose force, according to the reports received, consisted of four battle cruisers, six light cruisers and some destroyers. Their position when sighted was approximately fourteen miles east-south-east of our battle cruiser squadron.

"Orders were given by signal to the destroyer flotilla to chase the enemy and to report their movements. As it appeared that they had at once commenced to retire to the east-southeast, the battle cruisers were directed to steer south-east, with a view to securing the lee position and cutting the enemy off if possible. The situation developed by degrees into a stern chase.

"Speed was worked up to 25 or 29 knots and the enemy were gradually being overhauled. At about 18,000 yards a slow and deliberate fire was opened and we began to hit at the range of 17,500 yards. Our fire was returned by the enemy.

Lion and Tiger in Front.

"The Lion and the Tiger, having drawn ahead of the remainder of the squadron, were in action about the same time and consequently were subjected to the enemy's concentrated fire, more particularly the Lion, which ship suffered more as a result.

"The other vessels, as the drew up, engaged the enemy. A German flotilla of destroyers was disposed on the starboard beam of their cruisers and an attack by them was driven off.

"At about 11 o'clock, unfortunately, a lucky shot damaged one of the Lion's feed tanks, causing the port engine to be stopped. At the same time enemy submarines were observed on the starboard bow and a course was steered in order to avoid them.

"The Blucher (German) was now in a critical condition, with her speed reduced, and the Indomitable, which had now come up, was directed to complete her destruction.

"The rest of the squadron were directed to attack the rear of the enemy. The Lion, with escort, steered to the north-west, steaming with one engine, and I transferred my flag to one of the destroyers, and subsequently to the Princess Royal. Through the damage to the Lion's feed tank by an unfortunate chance shot we were undoubtedly deprived of greater victory. The presence of the enemy's submarines subsequently necessitated the action being broken off.

Kolberg Reported Sunk.

"The result of the action was that the Blucher was sunk and two other battle cruisers were heavily on fire and seriously damaged. The German prisoners reported also that the Kolberg had been sunk by over-salvoes from our squadron.

"Subsequently the starboard engines of the Lion also developed trouble from the same cause as the port engines, and the Indomitable took her in tow and brought her into port. The damage to the Lion and the Tiger is in neither case serious, and repairs can be completed in a short time. The remainder of the squadron was not hit.

"The casualties were very slight. The death of Engineer-Captain Taylor, whose services have been invaluable, is deeply regretted.

"The behaviour of officers and men was only what was expected, and great credit is due to the engineroom staffs for the fine steaming of the squadron."

Mr. J. Davidson and wife of Fleetwood are moving into the house lately occupied by Mr. G. McAuley, on King street, west.

Mr. and Mrs. Vaughan are visiting the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Veale, before leaving for their home in Saskatchewan.

Mrs. R. Toole, who has been visiting with her daughter, Mrs. A. Courtney, near Port Hope, was in Town last week renewing old acquaintances She is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Henderson.

The concert given on Saturday evening by the Jubilee Singers was a decided success. Although the thermometer was below zero yet it didn't hinder the people from coming miles and miles to hear the coloured people sing, for we might say the hall was filled. The programme was nearly all sacred music, interspersed with Mr. Williams' comic readings, and should have delighted everyone present.

On Sunday evening Rev. Gerard Millar, the bass singer, occupied the pulpit in the Presbyterian Church and gave a pleasing and intellectual address to an over-crowded house. The Jubilee Singers also rendered several selections during the service.

RUSSIANS ARE PROGRESSING IN EAST PRUSSIA

Hard Fighting in the Northern Part of the Province—One Route Into Hungary Claimed to Be Retaken by Austrians

RUSSIANS HOLD SOLIDLY

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Jan. 28.—The official news from Petrograd lays stress on the Russian offensive in East Prussia. Four months of violent effort by the Germans in Poland have not served to weaken the Russian grip on the most northerly district of the operations in Eastern Europe, and the Russian general staff now makes public some details of an offensive movement which has taken on new strength.

Very hard fighting is going on along a battle front which stretches from the region of Pilkallen, 20 miles north of Gumbinnen, to Lasdehnen, 20 miles south of Gumbinnen. The Russians advanced on the line of Malvischken-Lasdehnen, attacking with the bayonet and capturing many of the field works and trenches held by the Germans. Gumbinnen is on the railway line which runs to Insterburg and Koenigsberg.

The Russians have held solidly about 25 miles of East Prussian territory and appear to be slowly increasing their scope of operations. They are more favourably situated, Petrograd despatches assert, than at any time since Gen. Rennenkampf's advance in August was thrown back by the strategy of von Hindenburg. While the movement is slow, the strategical gain is important, as Russian occupation of the East Prussian frontier effectively prevents the German forces in North Poland from flanking operations and may be useful at any time in supplying co-operation for a general invasion of German territory.

Offensive is Proceeding.

From the report transmitted to Petrograd by the Russian general staff it seems evident that the Russian offensive in North-west Poland is continuing to make headway. There have been no pitched battles. The Russian advance guards have been in contact with German rear guards and the fighting has been a series of small engagements. The Russian left wing, resting on the right bank of the Vistula, is cannonading German positions on the left bank of the river as it advances. On Monday a German position at Vyechprov was destroyed.

On their front west of Warsaw the Germans continue to attack, but the official report says that all attacks were repulsed with heavy losses to the Germans. The villages of Bozimow and Goumine continue to be the centre of operations on these fronts, while there have been heavy artillery engagements north-east of Skierniewice. In this area the Russians appear to be content to hold the Germans at bay while developing campaigns in East Prussia and North-west Poland.

There is no recent news from Russian sources concerning the situation in Galicia and Bukowina. According to despatches from Vienna to-night, the Austrians claim to have regained possession of the Uzok Pass, one of the imoprtant routes through the Carpathians between Galicia and Hungary. This pass has changed hands several times during the war, and was last taken by the Russians after sanguinary fighting at the New Year.

STUBBORN RESISTANCE

SPECIAL CABLE:

PETRORAD, Jan. 28.—Stubborn resistance has been encountered by the Russian army advancing toward Koenigsberg in East Prussia, it was admitted here today.

The Germans have posted heavy artillery on the best bank of Inster, north of Insterburg, and are attempting to block the Russian advance by breaking up the ice.

The Russian right, which has crossed Inster south of Lasdehn, is moving down the west bank with the object of making a flank attack upon the Germans west of Mallewischken. This attack, if successful, will force the Germans to retire from the river north of Insterburg and permit the passage of the entire Russian forces.

INCREASED ACTIVITY

By Kaiser's Airmen Causes War Office to Announce New Aerial Defence Plans

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, Jan. 28—Increased activity by the Kaiser's airmen, coupled with rumours of a Zeppelin raid on Paris, caused the War Office to announce new aerial defence plans to-day.

Aviators will be stationed by Paris upon the outskirts of the City, ready to take the air to engage invading sky warriors.

They will be supported by armed French dirigibles that will hover constantly over the City.

NEW HIGH RECORDS WHEAT STILL CLIMBS

The Old Levels Are Fast Disappearing and War Prices Coming Into View

CHICAGO, Jan. 28 [illegible] in wheat expanded rapidly yesterday, and high record war prices continued to be broken. Gains of nearly two cents a bushel, as compared with last night, were quickly made. July wheat which had closed at $1.30 1-8 to $1.31, jumped to $1.32 3-4. May climbed to $1.47 7-8. The highest point attained before by May since the beginning of the war, was yesterday—$1.46 7-8.

New uptourns in quotations at Liverpool and predictions of a cold wave possibly endangering the domestic winter crop, had much to do with the fresh advance here.

BOMBARDING MOSQUITO WITH A BEANSHOOTER

DUNKIRK, Jan. 27.—A British aviator writing from his post at the front says:—"There is only one way of stopping aeroplanes, and that is to have faster aeroplanes than the enemy." Trying to bring down an aeroplane with any existing gun "is about as useful as bombarding a mosquito one hundred yards up in the air with a beanshooter."

At Dunkirk the appearance of a hostile airman is invariably greeted with a tremendous expenditure of ammunition from ships, forts and groups of riflemen. On one recent occasion ten German monoplanes were under fir for nearly an hour without a single effective shot.

Cold Spell Is on the Way

Is Due in Peterborough Some Time To-day—Heavy Frost To-night

A wave of decidedly cold weather is bearing down on Peterborough from the North Pole, and is due to arrive some time to-day. By to-night Peterborough may be enjoying one of the coldest spells of the winter, if the weather man's forecast is accurate. The ship is belated as practically all the rest of Canada has been suffering. Winnipeg reports the coldest weather of the winter with a minimum of 36 below. Saskatchewan is even colder, as Prince Albert reports 42 degrees below zero. White River is comparatively cool at 24 below. Duluth has made a cold weather record of 24 below.

SPAIN RIDES HER TIME

Will Support the Allies at the Opportune Moment.

New York, Jan. 27.—A cable from Madrid to the Tribune says: Senor Perez Caballero, former Ambassador of Spain in Paris, declared in an interview to-day that the best interests of Spain required a firm policy of armed neutrality for the present time, but with the intention of joining the allies at the most convenient moment. Judging from the present situation, he said, it is impossible for Germany to win eventually, and that as Germany would not listen to peace proposals until she is defeated the only way to end the war in a reasonable time is to support the allies and help them when the moment for decisive action arrives.

"Wha-what do you wa-want?" he asks.

"I went tro dis house las' week an' got $10 an' a bum gold watch," explains the burglar, "an' de papers said dat you said your loss was $100 an' jooley to the amount o' five or six hundred."

"Ye-yes?"

"Well, make good, sport. Me pardner, dat was watchin' on de outside made me cough up de difference between what I got an' what you said I got. Now you got to make good. You can't beat me dat way."

FROWNED UPON BY KITCHENER

Volunteer Army for Home Defence in England Grudgingly Given Official Recognition

HAVE HAD HARD TIME

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, Jan. 28.—England's army of two million "volunteers for home defence frowned upon by Lord Kitchener for many weeks, and derided by "Tommy Atkins" is to-day clamouring for something more than mere official recognition.

The volunteer army wants the Government to provide them with arms and ammunition and permit their officers to assume their real titles. A deputation waited on Premier Asquith this morning.

The volunteers have had a hard row to hoe. When they first asked Kitchener for official sanction of their training corps, they were bluntly told if they wanted to drill, recruiting offices for foreign service were open.

Despite this, organizers plugged away. They bought their own uniforms of grey—green and some of their own arms and ammunition. They devoted their spare hours to long marches, rifle practice and drills. Gradually they worked themselves into a compact organization.

The "official recognition" grudgingly granted by the War Office carries only a slight solace to the volunteers. It would merely save them from being shot down as "franc tireurs" in case Germany invaded England, as they would be considered organized soldiers.

"THE BATTLE CRY"

Charles Neville Buck

CHAPTER XXVI.

Yet so long as the man understands that she is enthroned and pedestaled and that he looks up at her from the sweating hurly-burly of the ground level, she will consent to drift into independence on his companionship and take a place in his life which must always be a void without her.

As regularly as the sun went down in a wintry flare of sullen colour and the stars came out, so regularly did Anse Havey set his face across the ridge at nightfall to sit there before Juanita's hearth and watch the carmine and lake and orange flecks that played on her cheek in the leaping of the blaze. She thought he was interested in her talk and arguments, but the man was really hardly conscious of them. He listened to her theories, hearing only the music of her voice and fought with her over abstract philosophies only to keep her interested so that he might watch her face and devour her with his eyes. Had he been the mastiff, Danny, lying on the hearthrug and gazing up at her, he might have been equally absorbed in her mission. He would have loved her perhaps in something of the same way, except that the dog might have let his honest eyes speak for him, and Anse was under the necessity of keeping a screen between his heart and his pupils. He, too, was a great, sinewy creature at whose growl others trembled, but who was willing for this woman to fetch and carry and remain mute. The arrogance he wielded as his right became humbleness with her, because she held over him love's tyranny of weakness over strength. Some day, he told himself, the control he had set on himself would slip and she would know how he felt—and then she would send him away. But as yet her serene eyes looked at him across the hearth where she had grown accustomed to seeing him, with no suspicion that he was a man with a tortured and aching heart. He was a welcome fixture there and the affection in her own eyes was as little like the passion of mating love as it might have been for the mastiff. It never occurred to her that she was putting an irremediable crimp into the soul of a man. To her it was a splendid and dependable comradeship and only that.

Sometimes she was the girl again and he the boy, and they laughed and were drawn closer by nonsensical things, such nonsensical things as make life tolerable when graver matters grow burdensome. But always when a new gun came to her rack she led him proudly to see it, and demanded obeisance from him as a conquering princess might have done. With the mock humility of a captive in the arena, the man would bend low and say, "We who are about to die salute thee!" But his mocking eyes showed no apprehension. He did not regret her success—could not regret it because it was hers.

But little Dawn, who at first had been accustomed to staying in the room when Anse Havey visited it, knew in her unfolding woman's heart what Juanita herself did not know, and she no longer remained to turn "company" into a "crowd."

Soon after his arrival she would rise and slip quietly out, though she went with no trace of the sullen jealousy she had felt for the Eastern man.

"Dawn;" Juanita asked one day, "why don't you sit with us any more in the evenings. Don't you like Mr. Havey?"

The girl looked up and for a long time studied the face of her deity, then her eyes danced and her face broke into a smile.

"When two fellers comes to a cabin sparkin' the same gal on the same night," she said with unvarnished directness, "hit's the rule hyarabouts fer 'em to make her say which one she wants to stay—an' the other one goes home. I reckon if we asked Anse Havey which one of us must go away it wouldn't take him long to make up his mind."

"Dawn!" exclaimed Juanita. "That's absurd. Anse Havey doesn't come here 'sparking,' as you call it. He simply comes as a friend. Why, I don't think of him in that other light any more than I do any other mountain man."

Between these two girls there had never been a note of friction or any lack of harmony, yet now the native-born flushed and her voice held a hint of hardness.

"What's the matter with Anse Havey? What's the matter with the mountain men?" she demanded quickly. "Ain't they good enough?"

"Good enough?" echoed Juanita. "Why, dear, if I didn't think he was good enough I wouldn't let him come here. But friendship is one thing and—well, the other is quite different. With us it's just friendship, and nothing can be better than true friendship."

Dawn laughed with a silvery peal that carried a trace of mockery and a wisdom that belied her seeming childishness.

"Sometimes a man or a woman is the only person that don't know what's in their own hearts," was her cryptic response.

But after having guarded himself all evning, and sometimes after having forgotten, in the pure delight of the present, that the future held only a blind alley for his life, Anse would tramp back to the brick house and on these long walks he would taste the dregs of the wine he had been drinking. Then he would realize starkly what a hopeless love means and would think of the days when she should be gone until he sickened at the desolation of the picture. It takes the plummet of a deep pain to reveal the depths of one's soul, and on these homeward journeys Bad Anse Havey was sounding his own.

Sometimes in sheer self-defence against the misery of such thoughts he would permit himself wild dreams as the logs died to embers on his own hearth, but always when he rose at dawn and looked out on the cold mists of the gaunt ridges he shook his head and set his teeth.

"I reckon I ain't hardly good enough," he would tell himself, and as he would turn back to the dark room with an almost despairing groan in his throat, his outstretched hands would seek the battered copy of Plutarch's Lives or Shakespeare's Tragedies. In a low voice he would confess brokenly, "I reckon, old friends, we'll have to get along together somehow. I reckon a man's just got ter be glad when he can, an' sad when he must."

For her part, when he had gone, Juanita would sit alone, studying the fire with her brow drawn in deep perplexity. She was reflecting on what Dawn had said.

"If I thought he misunderstood," she would tell herself, "I wouldn't let him come. It wouldn't be fair to him. That sort of thing between us would be ridiculous; it would spoil everything."

Then she would rise and shake her head and laugh.

"But of course he understands," she assured herself. "He said so himself. Dawn is only an ignorant child."

Always as she lay down in her bed after such musings, this illogical postscript would steal into her thoughts.

One morning, as Anse sat over his breakfast at the kitchen table, his cousin, Breck Havey, rode up in hot haste to rouse him out of apathy and remind him that he must not shirk his role as leader of the clan.

The Havey from Peril came quickly to the point while Havey of the backwoods listened. "I was down ter Lexin'ton yesterday an' as I was passin' Jim Freeman's dead-fall I happened ter look in. Ther' war old Milt McBriar an' Luke Thimon with thar heads as clos't tergether as a pair of thieves. Luke hes done come back from the West, an' I reckon ye kin figger out what thet means."

Anse grew suddenly rigid and his face blackened. So his destiny was crowding him.

"What air ye goin' ter do?" demanded Breck with a tone of anxious and impotent pleading, and Anse Havey shook his head.

"I don't know—quite yet," he said. "Let's see, is the High Co'te in session?"

"All right. Tell Sidering to have the Grand Jury indict Luke for the McNash murder, an' Milt McBriar as accessory.

"Good God, Anse!" burst out the other Havey. "Does ye realize what hell ye turns loose when we tries ter drag Old Milt ter Co'te in Peril?"

"Yes, I know that. I'm not overlookin' nothin'." The answer was calm. "I'll give ye a list of witnesses. Tell Sidering to keep these true bills secret. I'll ride over an' testify myself, an' I'll tend to keepin' the witnesses quiet. I don't know whether we'll ever try these cases but it's just as well to be ready along every line—and, Breck, don't let these tidings get to young Jeb until I tell him myself."

"Anse," he said. "I hain't never questioned ye. I've always took yore counsel. Ye're the head of the Haveys, but next to you I'm the man they hearkens to most. If any man has got ter dispute yer, I reckon ye'd take it most willin'ly from me."

"What is it, Breck? I'm plumb willin' to listen to your counsel."

"Then I'll talk outspoken. Ter try ter convict these men in Co'te means to take a desperate chance. Ye can't hardly succeed, an' if ye fails ye've lost yore hold on the Haveys—ye're plumb, eternally done for."

"I don't aim to fail.'

"No; but ye mought. Anse, no man hain't never questioned yore loyalty till now. I mought as well tell ye straight what talkin's goin' round."

THE CHARM OF MOTHERHOOD

Enhanced By Perfect Physical Health.

The experience of Motherhood is a trying one to most women and marks distinctly an epoch in their lives. Not one woman in a hundred is prepared or understands how to properly care for herself. Of course nearly every woman nowadays has medical treatment at such times, but many approach the experience with an organism unfitted for the trial of strength, and when it is over her system has received a shock from which it is hard to recover. Following right upon this comes the nervous strain of caring for the child, and a distinct change in the mother results.

There is nothing more charming than a happy and healthy mother of children, and indeed child-birth under the right conditions need be no hazard to health or beauty. The unexplainable thing is that, with all the evidence of shattered nerves and broken health resulting from an unprepared condition, and with simple time in which to prepare, women will persist in going blindly to the trial.

Every woman at this time should rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism.

In many homes once childless there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy and strong.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Holland Stays Mobilized.

THE HAGUE, Jan. 27.—(Via London.)—"We must maintain under the colors our entire army, for at any moment incidents are possible which may render it necessary for us to make an appeal to arms," said P. W. A. Van Der Linden, Premier of the Netherlands, yesterday.

The statement was made in the second chamber of the Dutch Parliament when a bill for the extension of the military service was being discussed. The Premier added that the Government could not disclose the information it possessed concerning the foreign situation, because much of it was based on confidential documents.

STOCK YARDS CLOSED

Chicago and Pittsburg Tied up by the Disease Again.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28 — Orders closing the Pittsburg and Chicago stock yards because of new infections on foot and mouth disease, were given out yesterday by the Department of Agriculture. The yards probably will be closed a week.

Cattle may be still received at the yards for immediate slaughter, however, and the newest order merely stops outgoing traffic while there is danger of spreading the infection.

SHELLING AIRCRAFT

Soldiers in Trenches Hardly Think Aeroplanes Worth Watching

An officer in the Royal Engineers describing the use of aircraft in the war, wrote:

We see aeroplanes nearly every day, and generally they are being shelled. The aeroplane is surrounded with little puffs of white smoke, usually at a slightly lower level than the aeroplane itself. Each puff represents the burst of a shrapnel shell. Although I have seen at least a dozen of these performances I have never seen an aeroplane brought down. Apparently it is awfully difficult for the gunners to get the range of an object in the air, and in any case that object is moving very rapidly. There is an anti-aircraft section of the artillery, armed, I believe, with a sort of pom-pom which fires little one-inch shells in rapid succession.

The French and Belgian aeroplanes throw out little pencil-shaped rods, which will kill a man if they strike him on the head, provided they are thrown from 200 feet or over. Of course, the aeroplane is always much higher than that when flying over the enemy.

The chief use of aeroplanes is to direct the fire of the artillery. Sometimes they "circle and dive" just over the position of the place which they want shelled. The observers with the artillery then inform the battery commanders, and a few seconds later shells come hurtling on to, or jolly near to, the spot indicated. They also observe for the gunners and signal back to them to tell them where their shots are going to, whether over or short, or to right or left.

The men—in fact, every one of us—have got so used to seeing aeroplanes shelled fruitlessly that the sight of one surrounded with half a dozen little fat white puffs of smoke scarcely attracts a look. At first they all used to stop work, and often even exposed themselves in their anxiety to watch the show; now they look upward when they hear the shells bursting high up in the air, murmur something about "another blooming aeroplane," and take no further notice.

Makes Stubborn Coughs Vanish in a Hurry

Surprisingly Good Cough Syrup Easily and Cheaply Made at Home

If some one in your family has an obstinate cough or a bad throat or chest cold that has been hanging on and refuses to yield to treatment, get from any drug store 2½ ounces of Pinex and make it into 16 ounces of cough syrup, and watch that cough vanish.

Pour the 2½ ounces Pinex (50 cents worth) into a 16-ounce bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. The total cost is about 54 cents, and gives you 16 ounces—a family supply—of a most effective remedy, at a saving of $2. A day's use will usually overcome a severe cough. Easily prepared in 5 minutes—full directions with Pinex. Keeps perfectly and has a pleasant taste. Children like it.

It's really remarkable how promptly and easily it loosens the dry, hoarse or tight cough and heals the inflamed membranes in a painful cough. It also stops the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending the persistent loose cough. A splendid remedy for bronchitis, winter coughs, bronchial asthma and whooping cough.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, rich in guaiacol, which is so healing to the membranes.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex," and do not accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction goes with this preparation or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

LOST REGIMENTS

Records Exist of Whole Bodies of Men Vanishing From Human Ken

By far the greatest number of casualties in connection with the army come under the heading of "missing." Soldiers who stray too far afield, or whose retreat is cut off, leave no clue behind them as to their ultimate fate, though usually, if they do not struggle back to their comrades, they are eventually captured by their foes and made prisoners of war.

It is not often, of course, that a whole regiment vanishes in this way. Instances have occurred, however, in which vast bodies of men have marched away and have failed to return or in which they have temporarily vanished. During the Boer War an entire squadron of the 18th Hussars galloped out into the rain and the darkness, and disappeared from human ken for the better part of a week. It transpired that they had ridden too far and too fast, and had sped into the open arms of the advance guard of a new Boer army. Until their fate was learned, it was as though the ground had swallowed them up.

Another authentic record of the temporary disappearance of a British battalion comes also from the Transvaal. Early in December, 1880, the 94th left one station in the northern part of the territory in order to proceed to another some hundreds of miles distant. It never arrived at its destination, however, and for some weeks speculation was rife as to what had become of it. Eventually it leaked out that the regiment had been intercepted by a party of Boers at a place called Bronkhorst Spruit; that the colonel together with a number of his men, had been slain, and that the remainder, after being disarmed, had been turned adrift upon the veldt to fare as best they might.

Prior to the battle of Talavera, there existed in the British army a cavalry regiment known as the 23rd Light Dragoons. At the close of that stubbornly-fought engagement, when the muster roll came to be called, the corps could not be found. Nor did it ever again put in an appearance, and for the very best reasons. While gallantly charging an entire division of the French army, it had become entangled in a series of ravines, and utterly annihilated.

The 10th Hussars once lost an entire troop. It was in Afghanistan, in the winter of 1879. The night was pitch-dark and bitterly cold, and the men mistook their road and tried to ford the Kabul river at a point where it was some ten or twelve feet deep. The leading files were swept away into the turbid current; but the others followed like a flock of sheep, until, finally, not a man of them was left.

A wet and riderless horse, galloping wildly into the camp twenty miles distant, was the first and only intimation of the disaster vouchsafed to the rest of the regiment. Nor was it until long afterwards that the horrid truth was dimly guessed at. Then search was made, and forty-six bodies, all that could be found, were laid reverently in one large grave in the cemetery of Jellalabad.

A Frenchman has invented a submarine boat equipped with a heavy keel which can be dropped to permit the craft to rise to the surface of the water if disabled.

Have You That TICKLING IN THE THROAT SENSATION?

This trouble is most distressing, and caused from a cold which has settled in the throat. How many people have lost a good night's sleep by that nasty, tickling, irritating sensation in the throat? The dry, hard cough keeps you awake, and when you get up in the morning you feel as if you had had no rest at all.

What you want to cure the cold is Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. This valuable preparation is composed of the most soothing and healing expectorant herbs and barks with which is combined the virtues of the world famous Norway pine tree.

Thousands of testimonials prove that what we claim is true. All we ask you is that when you ask for Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup see that you get "Dr. Wood's," and not some no-account substitute.

Mr. Charles S. Chase, Shelburne, N.S., writes: "Coming to Nova Scotia from the State of Maine, I caught a severe cold which persisted for many weeks, and was accompanied by a bad cough and a constant throat irritation. After trying many remedies, a friend handed me part of a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. It helped me so much I bought another bottle which completely cured the cough and allayed the irritation. It is certainly the best cough medicine I have ever tried."

SCOTCH GENERAL SAVED KAISER'S LIFE

Sir Archibald Hunter, Trainer of New Army, Once Had Adventure in Which Emperor Figured

The Kaiser was once on his way to visit Lord Rosebery at Dalmeny, near Edinburgh, at a time when General Sir Archibald Hunter was commander of the troops in Scotland, and General Hunter found himself called upon to play the hero. It happened thus. As the Emperor was about to enter his carriage at the railway station his horses bolted and things began to look very serious for the war lord when Sir Archibald dealt one of the frightened animals a smashing blow on the nose and saved the situation. The Kaiser was very grateful. He gave his rescuer a standing invitation to the royal palace at Potsdam.

It is not on record that the General availed himself of this invitation, but it is known that Sir Archibald is anxious to send a million or two personal representatives to interview the Kaiser in Berlin, and for that purpose he is training the new army—the men who replace the killed and wounded on the firing line and augment the army that constantly grows in size regardless of German onslaughts.

General Hunter's father was a London merchant, and the future trainer of fighting men was born at Kilburn fifty-eight years ago. Of course he is Scotch—his father was a Scotsman and his mother one of the Grahams of Glenny.

Early Military Life

When he was but a lad his father died, and young Hunter went north to the Tweed, learned how to shoot grouse, hunted with hounds before he was in his teens, developed a great love for horses, indeed, pets of all kinds, and was duly sent to school at the Glasgow Academy. From there he went to Sandhurst, getting a commission in the 4th King's Own Royal Lancaster Regiment in 1874. He became adjutant, and after some ten years of regimental service joined the Egyptian army and made his name. He was fourteen years in the Nile Valley, and when he left it he was a Major-General, had a K.C.B., a D.S.O., and innumerable medals and mentions in despatches, as well as a brace of wounds. At Ginnis he was severely wounded in the left arm. The doctor wanted to amputate. Hunter said: "Take off my arm and put me on my legs and I'll blow my brains out." That speech saved his arm, although it is not a great deal of good to him now.

He was one of Kitchener's discoveries, and in Egypt he used to be called the point of Kitchener's lance. Where fighting was there were Hunter and his men gathered together, and that all might know where they were to be found an old flag used to accompany his force known as Hunter's Rag. Among the jobs he was given in Egypt were the governorship of the Province of Dongola, and afterwards of Omdurman.

Served in South Africa

He began the South African War as chief of the staff to Sir George White, and all he did to keep up the spirits of the sometimes despondent garrison during the siege of Ladysmith has passed into history. Incidentally he had a row with Admiral Lambton, criticising with an astounding flow of language the shooting of the naval guns. Lambton is said afterwards to have remarked: "What a loss a man with such a fluent tongue is to the navy." Hunter was the life and soul of the whole defence, and was responsible for planning the successful fighting at Lombard's Kop, Wagon Kop, and Cæsar's Camp. Also he led the little band that set out from Ladysmith and destroyed the Boer "Long Tom." Light shoes, revolvers, and no talking were the order of the day—or rather night. Silently the party crept in inky darkness over the hilly, broken ground right up to the Boer gun without being discovered. The work was practically over before the Boers knew it had begun. When the alarm was at last given Major Karri Davis shouted "Fix bayonets!" There was not a bayonet with the party. But the Boers fled. All returned to Ladysmith in safety.

Earned Mother's Gratitude

After the relief he commanded the 10th Division and had many notable successes. One was when General Prinsloo with 5,000 Boers surrendered to him. The Boers feared but respected him. When giving up their arms they never dared to palm off ancient weapons on him. They knew that he wanted their Mausers, and they had to give them to him. But he had time to think of kind actions, too. He returned Mrs. Delarey the horse on which her son had been riding when he met his death, which touched her deeply. For his services with South Africa he was promoted to Lieut.-General and received the thanks of Parliament. On his returning home the good people of West Kilbride wanted him to be present at a demonstration in his honor. He refused, saying it would ill become him to go to a scene of rejoicing when so many of his gallant friends lay dead on the battlefield.

After this he went to India, where Kitchener was Commander-in-Chief, and commanded successively the Western Army Corps and then the Southern. Probably the climate affected him, for one coming home he bitterly grieved and disappointed his chief, K. of K. by actually getting married. The lady of his choice was the widow of the 2nd Lord Inverclyde, and to show he was forgiven Lord Kitchener was his best man.

Now Hunter is turning Kitchener's cubs into an army. No one could do it better, but what heart-breaking work he has in front of him.

A WEAK HEART.

When the heart is weak or irregular in action, when the blood is thin and watery, remember the blood-forming qualities of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and by its use flood the system with rich, red, vitalizing blood. Farm and Dairy Market Report

Toronto, Monday, Jan. 25.—Has war benefited the farmer? A writer in a contemporary commercial paper sums up the situation so far as the Ontario farmer is concerned and answers in the negative. Cheese and grain, he admits, have advanced in price. So has hay, but in many sections farmers are consumers of hay this winter rather than sellers. Cattle are over $1 a cwt. lower than they were a year ago. Hogs too are down. Butter, potatoes, eggs and poultry are all selling at lower levels than they did a few months ago. At the same time, many of the commodities of which the farmer is a heavy purchaser have advanced in price; sugar and flour, for instance. The writer immediately draws the inference that if extra taxation is necessary, it must not be imposed any more severely on the farmer than on any other class. Is he not right?

A review of the situation in the past week shows grain steady to higher, cheese up, cattle slightly lower and other produce steady.

WHEAT

The increasing price of wheat is merely the result of war speculation. It is not known how much is still in the hands of farmers. It is doubtful if the quantity is sufficient, however, to make them the principal gainers as a result of the advancing quotations. In considering future prices the increased acreage being sown the world over must not be forgotten. Many competent observers believe that prices cannot safely go any higher than they now are. No. 1 Northern, $1.82; No. 2, $1.47½; No. 3, $1.47½; Ontario wheat, $1.35 to $1.35.

COARSE GRAINS

There has been a normal trade in coarse grains. Quotations in price being of minor importance. Oats, C.W., No. 2, 46½c; No. 3, 42½c; No. 1 feed, 46½c; Ontario oats, 34c to 35c; corn, 82c; peas, $1.35 to $1.90; rye, $1.09 to $1.10; buckwheat, 78c to 80c; barley, malting, 71c to 73c. At Montreal, Canadian Western oats, No. 2, are quoted 45c to 46c; No. 3, 43½c to 44c; local white, 35½c to 36c; corn, 84c; buckwheat, 87½c to 90c; barley, malting, 78c to 80c; feed, 72c to 73c.

MILL FEEDS

Quotations here are: Bran, $24 to $24; shorts, $27 to $28; middlings, $32 to $34; feed flour, $40 to $42. At Montreal bran is quoted $23; shorts, $27; middlings, $28 to $30; feed flour, $43 to $45.

POTATOES AND BEANS

The potato market this year illuminates the question brought up frequently nowadays—Do hay crops really benefit the farmer? A potato grower pointed out recently that this year's crop of potatoes is estimated to be 20 per cent greater than the crop of last year. Quotations are about 40 per cent more than they were a year ago. At present car load lots are quoted in Toronto at 55c and in Montreal, 57½c to 60c.

Beans are here quoted: Primes, $2.75 to $2.70; hand picked, $2.90 to $3. Montreal quotes three-pound pickers, $2.40 to $2.50; hand picked, $2.60.

EGGS AND POULTRY

The present cold snap will have a tendency to hold the egg market steady at recent declines, but it is not anticipated that the price will again advance. Competitive demand is not so great as it has been in some years, and from now on receipts generally increase. New laid in cartons are quoted here 35c to 37c; selects, 31c to 33c; storage, 25c to 26c. The Montreal market for fresh eggs is a trifle stronger, with fresh eggs quoted 40c to 45c; selected, 33c; and storage, 26c to 28c.

DAIRY PRODUCE

The mild weather which prevailed all through the first of January proved somewhat detrimental to the butter market, but lowering temperatures recently have tended to increase quotations. Storage stocks are being drawn on almost altogether now, and Montreal has become the important factor in the situation. Car lots of finest goods are there quoted at 32c to 32½c and smaller lots, 32c to 33c. Finest dairy butter has sold at 31c to 32c, choice prints bringing up to 32c to 32½c. Quebec, Toronto and Ottawa have all been buying Montreal butter, and advices from the West indicate that Winnipeg may require some Eastern butter before the winter is out. The Trade Bulletin estimates that several cars of butter have gone to various Western points since January 1st. Quotations on winter creamery run 27c to 28c.

The cheese season is just about winding up, even so far as the dealers are concerned, the largest recent sale being made to an English cooperative society that took over 5,000 boxes. Quotations range from 14½c to 15½c and for the best quality, 15½c to 16½c.

LIVE STOCK

On the whole, quotations at the Union Stock Yards this past week have dropped a trifle. As a result of recent declines, receipts of live stock have dropped off somewhat, but offerings are not so meagre as might be expected, considering the unsatisfactory state of the market. The high price of grains is responsible largely for the continued unloading of under finished cattle. With cattle down and grain up, it certainly is a difficult problem to decide whether to continue feeding or not. If the present unloading continues, however, it is inevitable that well finished cattle will command choice prices in a couple of months. Perhaps it was with this idea in view that Morris and Company recently paid a record price for distillery steers for May delivery. Quotations average about as follows:

Shipping steers, $7.60 to $7.90; handy choice steers, $7.40 to $7.60; butcher steers, com. to good, $6.25 to $7.40; heifers, $6.75 to $7.60; choice cows, $6 to $6.50; com. to good, $4.75 to $6; butcher bulls, $4.50 to $5.75; feeders, $6.25 to $6.75; stockers, $4.75 to $6.50; canners and cutters, $3.75 to $5.

Choice milch cows have been taken up readily at $75 to $90; com. and med. $40 to $60 and springers, $60 to $90. Calves are firm, running at $4.25 to $10.50.

Small meats are a strong feature of the market; light lambs, $8.50 to $9.25; med. to heavy, $7.90 to $8.60; culls, $5.50 to $7; light ewes, $6.25 to $6; heavy sheep and bucks, $4 to $5.25; culls, $3.50 to $4.

Hogs continue firm, but with packers showing an inclination to discriminate as to quality. They are now quoted $7.35 to $7.40 f.o.b. shipping point.

REVERSE BULLETS IN SHORT RANGE

Many of the French Soldiers Killed in a Strange Way

LONDON, Jan. 28.—The Daily News has the following from Paris: Here is an interesting passage from a letter received from a French soldier in Picardy: "Ambulance men have found some of our fellows killed in a strange way. Their wounds were shocking and almost suggested explosive bullets, but that was not the case. Inquiries of a German prisoner revealed what had happened. There had been much shooting at point-blank range. The Germans have discovered and practice the infernal trick of extracting a bullet from a cartridge and reinserting and reversing it. It is useless at any distance but a score or two of yards, but at close range the reversed bullet either comes at you big end first with results which can easily be imagined, or in an effort to fly point first it twists from the moment the bullet leaves the barrel end strikes sideways."

PROHIBITION ADDS TO SAVINGS OF RUSSIANS

LONDON, Jan. 27. a despatch to Reuter's Telegram Company from Petrograd says that Mr. Kharitonoff, Controller of the Russian Treasury, speaking before the Duma Budget Committee to-day, declared that owing to the great increase in the national savings due to prohibition, the extraordinary outlay occasioned by the war as yet had caused no great suffering in Russia.

As proof of this Mr. Kharitonoff said the national savings in December, 1913, which amounted to 700,000 rubles ($350,000), had increased to 29,100,000 rubles ($14,550,000) in December, 1914. He added that the total savings for 1913 amounted to 84,000,000 rubles ($17,000,000), as compared with 84,000,000 rubles ($42,000,000) for 1914.

German Emperor Fifty-six Soon Will Be Twenty-three

BERLIN, Jan. 28.—Two birthday decrees of amnesty were issued by Emperor William yesterday, the fifty-sixth anniversary of his birth. The first released the active military from the disciplinary punishment inflicted upon them by court martial within a limit of six months' imprisonment; the second decree annuls the prosecution of soldiers for offences committed previous to the receipt of their call to arms.

Here are a few facts about William II., German Emperor and King of Prussia: Born January 27, 1859. Said to be still afflicted with an arm weakened at birth. Was son of Frederick III., who reigned as Emperor 100 days, and Victoria, daughter of Queen Victoria of England.

Received a military education.

Married Princess Augusta Victoria of Schleswig-Holstein on February 27, 1881.

Two years later he dropped the pilot—dismissed Chancellor Bismarck, who had been virtual ruler of Germany for nearly 30 years.

Visited Palestine in 1898 and told the Turkish Sultan that Mohammedans might look to him as their friend.

Gave out the Weidmouth interview in 1908 in which he claimed to have furnished Queen Victoria with the English plan of campaign in the South African war.

Founded the present German navy in 1908, steadily increased the army, and called himself the "German war lord."

First visited England on the occasion of the marriage of his uncle, Prince of Wales, afterwards King Edward VII., and on frequent occasions subsequently.

Attended King Edward's funeral five years ago.

SNIPERS GET $12.50 FOR EACH BRITISH OFFICER

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Jan. 28.—The Manchester Guardian reports the remarkable speech delivered by Lieut.-General Sir Henry McKinnon at a dinner in Manchester on Monday. General McMinnon related a story told to him by a relative whose company in the trenches was much troubled by a sniper, who was located with difficulty. He was shot finally, and when his body was reached an order was found on him deputing him to snipe British officers.

He had on his body particulars showing he had killed no fewer than fifty officers, and it was apparently a rule of the German War Office to reward him for each officer killed when the claim had been scrutinised and allowed. The sniper was required to state the exact position where the officer was killed and give particulars about his regiment and so on, and no claim was allowed until it was tested by reference to casualty lists in the British newspapers.

In the case of this particular sniper only twenty-five claims were allowed, for each of which he had received a reward of fifty marks ($12.50).

Patricias In The Trenches For Stretch of Eight Days

LONDON, Jan. 28.—The Princess Patricia Regiment has been again in the trenches, ths time for an eight-day stretch, according to letters received from officers, and dated several days ago.

No mention is made in these letters of further casualties than those already reported.

The editor of Canada has been forwarded a cheque for $165 from headquarters at Salisbury Plain as the Canadian contingent's contribution to the Daily Telegraph's Belgian Relief Fund. A supplementary amount may be sent later.

A handsome brass plate, suitably inscribed, is being presented to Capt. Bradshaw, of the transport Lapland, by Col. A. W. Currie, of the 2nd Infantry Brigade, and the officers commanding the Fifth and Sixth Battalions of the same brigade, commemorating their historic voyage from Quebec to Plymouth.

Killed in Fighting.

OTTAWA, Jan. 27.—A list of casualties sustained in the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry in fighting on January 16 was issued tonight by the Militia Department.

Private James McNish and Private Norman McLeod were killed in this action, while Private William Thorburn died of his wounds on the following day. McNish's next of kin is a Mrs. Woodley, of Castle Douglas, Scotland. McLeod's nearest relative is Mrs. J. K. McLeod, of Edmonton, and Thorburn's is William Thorburn, of Edinburgh.

The death of Private Edward Roper, whose next of kin is J. F. Ladfer, of Calgary, also, is announced. Roper died January 2 in circumstances of which particulars have not been received.

Raw Materials Seized and Sent to Germany and 14,000 Made Workless.

LONDON, Jan. 28.—The Daily News correspondent at Rotterdam reports large removals of raw materials from Belgium to Germany. At Ghent at the occupation of the town on Sept. 8 the Germans, he says, agreed to allow the inhabitants their usual freedom on condition they supplied certain goods, principally foodstuffs, cigars, wine and cycles. Now, he says, all flax, cotton jute and metals in the factories have been taken and 14,000 work people have been thrown out of employment because raw materials of their industries have been removed to Germany.

In December, says the correspondent, 1,250,000 francs' worth of flax was taken. The owners received orders to give up all their stocks of flax and then saw their cotton, wool, flax, metals and leather taken.

The owners were informed that a commission had been appointed in Berlin to distribute their raw material among the manufacturers in Germany. Eighty thousand bales of cotton have been taken out of Antwerp to Bremen. Leather workers are out of work; as all leather has been removed to Germany. One merchant who ordered to give up stocks worth 1,200,000 francs ($250,000.)

French Amazed By British View of War As Sport

Many Cases of Swollen Feet Are Caused From Standing in Water-filled Trenches

TALK OF LOSSES AS OF SCORE.

Many Shoot Themselves in Hand but Examples are Made of Those Caught.

ARMENTIERES, Frans, Jan. 25—One of the American ambulance workers who had been with the British in the neighbourood of this town for a month, says the attitude of the British soldier is utterly incomprehensible to the Frenchman who is fighting beside him.

"To the French," he says "the British seem to take the war as a sport and talk of their losses like a score at cricket or football."

"I hear you lost two guns the other day," I heard one young English captain say to another," he continued. "Yes, rotten luck," was the reply "but Cecil lost ten, you know."

"I have again met officers who seem to take pride in their lack of knowledge of military matters. I inquired of one such how many guns there are in a battery. "I really couldn't say, you know," he answered. "I am of the Lancers."

He says the many cases of bad feet have been due not so much to cold as to standing about in water, which causes the foot to swell.

Laventie a Mass of Ruins.

"I first visited the trenches," he continues, "beyond Laventie, 15 kilometers south of Armentieres. Laventie is now a mass of ruins, having been shelled by the Germans in the first week of December. The populace left in a mad rush, leaving bed clothes hanging out of the windows and half-eaten meals on the tables. For nearly a mile from the trenches there was hardly a sign of life. A few cows were wandering about, anxious to be milked. The fields contained many dead animals of all kinds, dogs sheep, horses and even cats. Nearly every farmhouse was a wreck and the roads and the farm lands were marked by enormous shell holes.

"I remember seeing one grave of a soldier who was killed on December second. The name could not be deciphered, but I made out a tag that he belonged to the East Lancashires. The crosses became more and more frequent; then we came to abandoned trenches full of caps, canteens, and the coats of men who had been hastily buried.

"Finally we came on the mud-plastered fellows in the trenches and for several weeks I have lived wih them. There is an average of one man to each ten feet of trench and the nearest reinforcements are at La Gorgue and Esterre. The first day I walked about four miles along the trenches, and began to realise the significance of a remark I had previously heard, that a man could probably walk all coast of France to Switzerland without being taken out and shot in front of out showing his head above the ground.

Wounds Chiefly in Head.

"Anybody who is hit in the trenches nowadays is usually hit in the head by a bullet coming through a loophole and that means his death. During December in this part of the line there have been very few wounded. Most of the hospital cases are the dreaded bad feet. When a man's kit is taken away, as it is when he is brought to the hospital, it is pathetic to see what little souvenirs they save out of them. In some instances it will be a photograph, or some old letters; one fellow who had a shoulder wound clutched a half loaf of bread for which he had paid a franc and he would not give it up.

"A major of the medical corps told me it was scandalous how many cases there are of men who shot them selves through the hand in order to get out of the trenches. I personally saw some of these cases at Bethune among the Indian troops. I was told, though I do not know that it is true, that several men guilty of this had been aken out and shot in front of their fellows. On the main road from Esterre to La Bassee we met a soldier whose hand was swathed in blood-stained bandages. He said his rifle had gone off accidentally and the bullet had pierced his hand, but he was under arrest and escorted by a companion with fixed bayonet.

"I was in the trenches when news was received of the sinking of the German ships off the Falklands. A megaphone was made of wrapping paper and the report shouted to the enemy whose trenches were not over thirty yards away. I am afraid it was not believed, even if the English was understood, for the night before the Germans had announced in similar fashion a great victory for their fleet in the North Sea. There is a fraternal spirit here that seems strange, more as if one were in a shooting-box, or, as one officer explained it, behind the target at rifle practice."

EAT LESS MEAT IF BACK HURTS

Take a Glass of Salts to Flush Kidneys if Bladder Bothers You

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

SOME APSLEY PARAGRAPHS

APSLEY, Jan. 28—Our old friend, J. G. Hardill, has once more called on the Apsley merchans. We missed him one trip. One in eleven years. His car stalled on the way up that time, but at that time the roads were unusually bad; however, John didn't lose his orders, but got them by 'phone. Notwithstanding the dull times he secured fairly good orders to-day. Ernie says he can bring John through on time—no auto for him.

Mr. McColough, who made a contract with the Peterborough Lumber Company, and had a large cut of logs at the foot of Eagle Lake, is now putting in a large gang of men and teams to haul the same to the "dumps". There is no cry, as yet, of scarcity of feed for cattle, the back country being well provided in that respect by an abundance of marsh hay to help out with other feed.

GERMANS LOSE 20,000 IN THREE DAYS

THE DESPERATE ATTACKS ARE ALL REPELLED

DISASTROUS ATTEMPTS BY GERMANS ACCOMPLISH NOTHING

Infantry Attacks Ordered in Commemoration of the Kaiser's Birthday Resulted in Terrible Loss of Life---Hillsides Covered With German Dead and Wounded

FRENCH RESUME THE OFFENSIVE

PARIS, January 28.—3 p.m. Official.—The German losses in the last three days of the fighting in France and Flanders totals at least 20,000, the French war office claims. In the three days of fierce battling for the possession of the heights near Craonne, the Germans have lost between 7,000 and 10,000 in killed and wounded, according to the official despatches. The French have repelled a number of desperate attacks upon their positions in the hills in that region with a total loss it was stated of not more than 800. Equally disastrous were the German attempts to seize the strong positions held by the British west of Labassee. The Germans attacked at least a dozen times under a murderous fire, and lost from 2,000 to 3,000 in killed and wounded. So heavy were the German losses yesterday, when infantry attacks were ordered in commemoration of the Kaiser's birthday, that the hillsides in the Craonne region, and at several other points on the battle front, were covered with German dead and wounded. There was a consequent lull in the infantry fighting in these regions to-day while the ambulances carried the dead from the field. The resumption of the French offensive north west of Pont-a-Mousson, was announced to-day. The French advanced nearly a quarter of a mile, fighting their way through the woods. Gains in Alsace were also announced. The British artillery destroyed some German trenches in Belgium, along the Lys, forcing the Germans to abandon their attempts to concentrate their troops in the north for assaults on the allied lines. Artillery fighting is in progress near Arras and Noyon, north-west of Soissons.

LONDON, January 28.—The Admiralty to-day awaited further official reports before issuing absolute confirmation of its report that the small German cruiser Kolberg, in addition to the Blucher, was sunk by British gun fire. The Berlin claims that a British battle cruiser, and at least one smaller vessel, were sunk by the Germans, were ignored here.

LONDON, January 28.—In leading financial circles, here, the prediction is being made that the war will end much sooner than is commonly supposed, owing to Germany's inability to support the financial strain. Next May is mentioned as the probable date of the German collapse. The argument of these financiers who predict an early conclusion of the war is that when the three great allied powers find it necessary to combine in order to meet from their common resources the immense outlay required to carry on the war, Germany and Austria together cannot much longer continue to find the sinews of war. Germany, it is added, cannot hope to obtain outside financial assistance.

TORONTO, January 28.—Emil Nerlich, a Toronto merchant, accused of high treason in aiding a German reservist to leave the country, was to-day committed for trial on a high treason charge. It was stated that bail would probably be granted.

There was a good deal of suppressed excitement in the police court when Lieut. Arthur Zirzow, of the German army, was brought into court from the internment camp under guard of the Royal Canadian Dragoons, as a witness in the case against Nerlich.

Zirzow told how he had met Nerlich at the German Club here and at his residence, and had dined with him since the opening of the war at a local hotel. The only money given by Nerlich, he said, was to pay his laundry bill. Henry Peters, the former German Consul here, had given him $30, however, to pay his fare to New York. Zirzow made a visible impression by the frankness and manliness of his evidence.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., January 28.—Victor I. Berger, a former Member of Congress, and the head of the Socialists in the Middle West, in discussing the manifesto issued by the British Socialists against the spy system, said; "I fully agree with the British Socialists as to the evils of secret diplomacy. I am not afraid that the United States will go to war with England. The capitalist class of the United States is closely allied with the aristocracy and the capitalist class of England in business and in every other way."

WILL COST MORE TO OPERATE THE FIRE DEPARTMENT

Ald. Duffus, Chairman of Committee, Intimates the Estimates Will be Larger This Year Than Last.

COMMITTEE IN SESSION

The estimates for the Fire, Water and Light Committee will be higher this year than last. At least that was the trend of the opening remarks of Chairman Ald. Duffus at the first meeting of his 1915 committee, held yesterday afternoon. There were present Alds. Duffus (chairman), Green Stratton, Weir, Evens, Dobbin, Mayor Buller, Fire Chief Howard and City Clerk Armstrong.

Ald. Duffus, in referring to the matter of the estimates which have not been struck as yet, though there was nothing in the maintenance of the Department that would reduce the amount required from that used last year, and on the other hand, there were more expenses to be met this year. The Fire Department needed two or three new horses, and the natural increase in salaries of the Department would amount to practically $1,000. He thought, as a business proposition, the Council should give the matter of a sub-station their serious consideration.

Wants Assistant Chief.

A communication was read from Chief W. A. Howard, suggesting that the Committee should advertise for a suitable man to assume the duties of Assistant Chief. Engineer Jamieson felt that he was not capable of filling the position permanently. Chief Howard also recommended that Engineer Jamieson be paid at the same rate as provided for the Assistant Chief, while he performed those duties. The Chief pointed out that were he to become ill and there was not a competent man to take charge, the City would be in a serious position.

Ald. Dobbin asked if there was a local man who would suit and the Chief thought Mr. George Grange was about the only local man who was qualified. The appointment of an Assistant Chief was left to the Chairman and Chief Howard for their more serious consideration, and report with a view to appointing a local man if possible.

The appointment of a Wiring Inspector for the City was again before the Committee. Ald. Green said he felt backward at this time in appointing another city official. The matter will come up at a future meeting.

The Chairman will look into the matter of having all the lamps on George street lighted at once, the expenses for broken globes and broken lamps, also the difference in the cost of the extra lights when all are going and make a report to the Committee.

When the subject of lights came up Alds. Weir and Evans took the opportunity to put in their claim for better lighting for East City and fathered the following motion:

"That the attention of the Peterborough Utilities Commission be called to the fact that the Council has been having very few lights put up on the streets in the past few years, and that additional street lighting is needed and request the Commission to inform the Council, as soon as possible what system of street lighting they would recommend and what cost.—Carried.

New wheels and axles are to be purchased for the ladder waggon, which will also be painted and any other work done on it that it required.

Chief Howard was authorized to write to different manufacturers in Canada regarding the supplying of underground cable and get their prices and any other information available.

Before adjourning it was decided that the Committee should make a visit of inspection to the Fire Hall at a date set by the Chairman.

WANT TO END WAR

Switzerland Reports That Emperor of Austria is Endeavouring to Persuade the Kaiser to Make Peace.

NEW MINISTER SENT

Special Cable to The Examiner:

BASLE, Switzerland, Jan. 28—Emperor Francos Josef has sent his new Austrian Foreign Minister, Baron Burian VonRajeca, to Germany, to confer with Emperor William with a view to ending the war, according to private advices from Vienna.

Hungarian political circles are said to favour Austria concluding a separate peace agreement. Francos Josef, however, is obdurate. He refuses to listen to the opinion of Hungarian diplomats but desires to win the Kaiser over to an agreement for common peace.

From the same sources comes the information that the mobs in the dual monarchy have destroyed the placards calling out the last reserves, and that rioting is prevalent everywhere.

Mr. G. N. Gordon's Qualifications

Will be Questioned by the Board of Education—Meeting To-night

"I have nothing to fear," said Mr. G. N. Gordon to-day, when interviewed respecting the proposed intention of the Board of Education to investigate his qualifications as member of the Board. It is stated that the Board will ask the County Judge to determine whether Mr. Gordon's position as City Solicitor is sufficient grounds for disqualification; also as to the validity of his appointment as City Solicitor.

"It looks to me like a retaliative measure for my attack on a member who it is alleged, had received commissions from the Board. The matter will likely be discussed by the Board at to-nights meeting," was Mr. Gordon's comment.

THE STOCK MARKET

TORONTO, Jan. 28—Live stock receipts were light; trade dull. Choice veal calves $9 to $10.50. Spring lambs $7.50 to $9; hogs, off cars $8 to $8.10, other prices steady.

DEAL IN PETERBOROUGH

In the present time of stringency every municipality is being called on to solve its own problems. Besides the call for patriotic purposes the question of unemployment promises to be more or less acute this present winter. In dealing with this, Peterborough, like every other town or city, will be compelled to "paddle its own canoe." Since our own people must help our own people, the citizens should endeavour to keep as much of their money as possible in Peterborough. Patronize the home merchants, for every extra dollar they get will put them in so much better shape to assist in any charitable work that may be needed. The principle that in union there is strength, applies here with special force. It can be carried a step further. By asking for Peterborough made goods as far as possible, it will aid in giving work to Peterborough workmen. Let's stick together, for as George Washington remarked at the outbreak of the revolutionary war, "If we don't hang TOGETHER we may all hang SEPARATELY."

QUARTERS BURNED

INCENDIARY ORIGIN

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PARIS, Jan. 28.—The general headquarters of the Fifteenth German army corps at Strassburg have been completely destroyed by fire of an incendiary origin.

Important military documents were destroyed.

It is believed to be the result of an Alsatian plot against Germany.

CITY MAY UNDERTAKE STREET PAVING

On its Own Account—A Proposal to That Effect Was Brought in by Ald. McIntyre

TYPES OF PAVING

At last night's meeting of the Board of Works, Ald. A. A. McIntyre was successful in prevailing upon the Board to consider a proposal to have street paving undertaken by the City instead of letting it out by contract. Also to use a cheaper type of paving, such as concrete, in the outlying districts. As Ald. McIntyre pointed out, this would provide more employment and in the end be cheaper for the City.

WANTS MORE CONTRACTS.

Foley and Gleason wrote to the Board regarding prospective paving contracts for the season of 1915. They explained the trouble which arose in connection with the paving contract of 1913, which proved unsatisfactory. The company attributed the trouble to the rock, and promised to replace any pavement that turned out defective. Two blocks of this paving were taken up last fall and replaced. City Engineer Parsons thought that the whole of the 1913 paving would have to be replaced. The communication pointed out that the material which entered into the work was tested daily by qualified chemists, and that the fault which developed later was attributed to the brittleness of the rock used.

The City Solicitor's opinion will be sought in respect to the above matter.

Ald. Johnston thought that the Board should get together and decide upon the work to be undertaken this year.

To this Ald. Green agreed. He was of the opinion that if further paving was undertaken, it should be commenced early.

There is a petition on file urging the continuation of the paving on Hunter Street.

ALD. McINTYRE'S PROPOSAL.

"Is it necessary for us to let any more contracts?" enquired Ald. McIntyre. "He was of the opinion that the City could undertake street paving on its own account."

City Engineer Parsons said that a plant to lay the present type of pavement would cost anyway from $2,000 to $15,000, dependent upon the capacity of the plant. He pointed out that other forms of paving could be adopted that would not require a plant. Mr. Parsons favoured a cheaper grade of paving, such as cement, for the outlying districts.

PAVING IN EAST CITY.

Ald. Weir put in a word for East City. He suggested that Hunter Street be paved from Water to Roger Street.

It was remarked that the traffic was heavier on George Street.

"Bring in a petition," said Ald. Green, "and the matter will receive the consideration of this Board." He also suggested that an evening be devoted to the discussion of street paving and the form of paving to be adopted.

The Engineer was asked to bring in a report regarding different types of paving suitable for local use.

The existing contract calls for the extension of the pavement on Charlotte Street, from Bethune to the west side of Park Street.

Messrs. Foley and Gleason, paving contractors, asked the Board to release their bond of $12,000 concerning unfinished paving contracts, and retain five per cent., which would leave about $3,000 with the City. The matter will be turned over to City Solicitor Gordon for a report.

THE COMPANY'S PROPERTY IS VALUED AT $537,900

By the Simple Process of Multiplication—The Morning Session of the Board of Arbitration—Proceedings Adjourned.

MR. HAWKINS' STATEMENT

The arbitration that has been in progress between the city and the Peterborough Light and Power Company, came to an abrupt conclusion to-day at noon, when further proceedings were adjourned until the 15th of next month. The company's case is practically all in, and it now remains for the city to take the initiative in the last half of the first and last innings. The company's valuation of the system, which the city proposes to acquire by purchase, is in the neighbourhood of two hundred thousand dollars, which is double the amount that the city has paid into court for that purpose. The most interesting phase of this morning's proceedings was the statement submitted by Mr. W. C. Hawkins, managing director and consulting engineer of the Dominion Power and Transmission Company, Hamilton, which if accepted, would raise the value of the plant to nearly half a million dollars.

He said that the approximate revenue of the combined properties of the Peterborough Light and Power Company, the Peterborough Radial Railway Company, and the Gas Company, for the year ending October 1st last, when the city took over the distribution system was as follows:

Electric	$107,800
Gas	32,000
Street railway	47,515

Mr. Hawkins calculates the value at five times the gross annual receipts, making the local power plant worth, according to his figures, $537,900.

Witness corroborated the evidence of both Mr. Almert and Mr. Sayce, respecting the valuation placed on the local plant.

Mr. Almert's Evidence.

Mr. N. W. Tilley, counsel for the company, continuing the examination of Mr. Almert, former manager of the Valuation ad Appraisal Department of H. M. Byllesby and Company, of Chicago, brought out that portion of Mr. Almert's report dealing with the advantages that would accrue to the purchaser of the existing system of the Peterborough Light and Power Company, as against the reproduction of a comparative plant. Witness said that in making his computations he used the earnings and operating expenses as a basis. He also said that the company's gas franchise and street railway franchise would suffer as a result of the severance of the franchise represented by the electrical distribution system of the company, and that for economic reasons it was more advantageous to the citizens to have the three franchises operated under one head. In this case the company would suffer first and the public later. From the standpoint of management alone, the company would suffer a loss of at least $2,000 a year. One man could operate three departments as well as one. The electrical department of the company would be better able to withstand the extra expense.

Cross Examination.

Cross-examined by Mr. Cowan, witness stated that the valuation made by Mr Sayce was made under his instructions and supervision.

"Have you had experience with Canadian construction in Canada?"

"No."

"You think that there should be an 'omission' account for meters?"

"Yes."

"You didn't inspect any of the stock yourself?"

"No!"

"You accepted Sayce's valuation?"

"Yes."

"If the plant was a losing concern, what basis of value would you take?"

"There would be a reduction."

"And if there was a profit you would add something?"

"Yes."

"And if both ends met you would take the cost of reproduction as your basis, less the depreciation?"

"I think it would figure out that way."

"Will you say that this plant is worth more to the owners on the basis that it is profit earning?"

"Yes."

Following this Mr. Hawkins, of Hamilton was examined along the line indicated above, after which the board adjourned until Monday, the 15th of February.

DEEP SEA MISSION.

The public are not only reminded of the address of Mrs. (Dr.) A. W. Wakefield, in St. Paul's Church; but also urged to attend it. Mrs. Wakefield and her husband, who is now in the battle line in Europe, have spent a long time in intimate and practical association with the noble work among the deep sea fishermen of Canada, so intimately linked with the name of Dr. Grenfell. Her story will be full of thrilling interest, and the admission being free, there should be a large attendance of the public; and the incidental feature of a silver collection, will be in the material interests of a great work. In this time of war we obsessed, to a greater or lesser degree, with the idea that all our activities should have directly or indirectly, a military trend. Well, the deep sea fishers' mission is just in line with such an idea. Its object is to improve the health and living conditions, as well as the moral and spiritual character of these hardy fishermen—to make them more fit for naval service as well as for their perilous, yet important calling. When Canada, following the splendid lead of Australia, shall undertake the establishment of a Canadian navy, built, as Sir Robert Borden in one of his inspired moments said, "of Canadian material and by Canadian skill," we shall need men to man it. And we shall find in the hardy sea-trained, fearless fishermen of Canada, just the material we want for this purpose. Therefore, in patronizing the lecture of Mrs. Wakefield, we shall be morally and materially, if indirectly, promoting the one feature of our aid to the Empire in which we, unfortunately, fall short, though we are nobly strong in other respects to keep up to the mark.

AN EVIL ANNIVERSARY.

President Wilson of the United States is neutrally diplomatic in his formal congratulations sent to the Emperor of Germany on the occasion of his birthday. The text of his message of greeting is as follows:

"In behalf of the Government and people of the United States, I have the pleasure to extend to your Majesty cordial felicitations on this anniversary of your birth, as well as my own good wishes for your welfare."

Diplomatically the President could not well do otherwise, and diplomatically he could not say less to the Kaiser's pleasure than is expressed in his politely meaningless formula of felicitation. The President nominally speaks in the name of the people of the United States, but he does not express their full sentiments. If he had undertaken to express the real sentiments of the real people of the United States, the sane, sober and thinking people of the United States; if he had sought to speak the real spirit of greeting of the people of the United States, he would have sent a message in respect of the Kaiser's birthday of the tenor and of the spirit of the patriarch Job, who under the stress of his furuncular affliction, cursed the day he was born. Well might the President have put into the peoples' greetings, in respect of the Kaiser's birthday, the spirit of the exclamation: "Let the day perish in which I was born." The President sent his message to the Kaiser as a man, but he neglected to send fitting greetings to the monster the man has become; the enemy and the outrager of everything that the good hold sacred.

What the people of the United States, what the people of the world, are waiting for President Wilson to say, is something in the form of a flaying protest against the bad faith, systematic lying, the atrocities, the barbarities, with which the Emperor of Germany is cursing the world now; and, if he can realize his diabolic dream, will curse it hereafter. By a strong stretch of charity we can congratulate the Kaiser as a man on his birthday; a man that had the world's opportunity, and the opportunity of the ages, to be a blessing, and not a curse, to humanity. He was placed in a position of high responsibility and opportunity, in respect of a noble people and noble country. Instead of uplifting them, instead of placing them in the front rank of the world's civilization, as a beneficent and elevating influence, he has denatured them; he has degraded them to malevolent machines for working evil on the world. He has set up false gods—the gods of force and mind and "kultur"—and has made them fall down and worship them. He has opened the way for their national abasement. The German people, if they were in their right mind, might well, as they will do before long, invite the Kaiser to say of his birthday, with Job: "Let darkness and the shadow of death stain it," as the shadow of death is now staining the fair fields of Europe with blight and misery, that had their potential beginning when the Emperor William II. was born of a Christian woman, a British Princess Royal, at Berlin, on Jan. 27th, 1859.

AN OPEN SECRET.

His Majesty King George V., the despatches state, is to visit Ireland this year. And Ireland, is one part of the British Empire, which, Germany expected to see seething with rebellion this year, and expected to become a gigantic thorn in the flesh of Great Britain. Instead of that Ireland is a tower of strength to Great Britain and the Empire. Why? Because Ireland realizes that Britain has given, if long delayed, fair play and self-government, the foundation of trust and imperial strength. Germany expected to see the millions of India rise in rebellion. Instead she sees, India's millions solidly behind Great Britain. India is with Britain and the Empire for reasons that Germany cannot understand; because Britain has ruled India, not with a rod of iron, but with a regard of them as men, men with rights, men to be treated fairly; uplifted and helped. Great Britain has been a foster mother to her Indian people. With the highest diplomacy she has, while seeking to Christianize them, had respect for their religious and racial prejudices. And she has had care for hteir physical welfare.

Famine, with twin sources of origin—floods and droughs—has been one of the curses of India. Britain has aimed, and with great success, to avert or diminish this by works of irrigation supplemented by railways. There is said to be no country in the world where the irrigation engineer has accomplished such wonders against the stupendous difficulties presented by the forces and aspects of nature, as he has done in India. He has built dams greater than the wonderful works of the Nile or any on this continent. These engineers have invaded and occupied a field comprising an area of one and three-quarter million square miles, equal to the whole area of Europe excepting Russia, with a population of 316 millions, seven times greater than that of the United Kingdom, three times greater than that of the United States, and forty times greater than that of Canada.

What the irrigating engineeds had to overcome, and what they have largely overcome, were the ravages of famine. In 1877-78 the death rate through famine in India was 5½ millions in excess of the death rate in normal years. During these five years 83 millions was spent in relief. To correct this evil, irrigation works have been constructed with the result that India is enjoying a larger share of prosperity and greater immunity from famine than she ever knew before. By monster irrigation works millions of acres have been reclaimed, and millions of acres made productive by irrigation. The irrigating canals are not mere ditches. As an example the Great Ganges canal, with its distributing channels, is 9,900 miles long, the main canal 200 feet wide and ten feet deep. It serves a district 360 miles from its head words. It is carried over two rivers 200 and 300 feet wide, respectively, on masonry aqueducts. It crosses the Solani valley by an aqueduct and embankments 2¾ miles long. At this spot 7,000 cubic feet of water passes each second, and the waterway is 170 feet broad and 12 feet deep.

This is only one example of great works constructed throughout India, with others under construction, built at cost of millions, to benefit the people of India. In former wide and waste areas made fertile by irrigation there are thousands of thriving villages and thriving populations of millions.

With a splendid solicitude like this for the welfare of the people of India, it is no wonder that the people of India are behind Great Britain in this fight. In Egypt Great Britain is now drawing dividends for similar expenditure in the people's interests, in the shape of the fidelity and support of the British people in this great struggle, by the Egyptians, not to speak of the national benefits involved. There is no secret in all this compelling impulse to loyalty to Britain and the Empire, except the open British secret of being fair and treating men like men, a simple little formula, that is behind the magnificent solidarity of the British Empire. Irrigation canals, with the spirit they represent in India, are of a hundred times greater military value to Great Britain, than the Kiel canal is to Germany with the wasting and wanton war spirit behind it.

Herr Von Bethmann-Hollweg Is The Dunderhead Higher Up

Several months ago Count Bernstorff, the German Ambassador to the United States, displayed such utter lack of political sagacity in his defences of Germany's violation of Belgium's neutrality that his behaviour was called "the diplomacy of a dunderhead." The last two or three days have illustrated to all the world that in its diplomacy Germany has a dunderhead higher up. This time it is not an Ambassador, but the Imperial Chancellor, Herr von Bethmann-Hollweg, himself. He is surely the foremost dunderhead in the Chancelleries of Europe.

How a man, standing in the place of Bismarck, could imagine that the people of the United States would be impressed by the explanations of "the scrap of paper," issued three days ago in an authorized statement to "an American correspondent" for publication in the United States, passes ordinary comprehension. Still more incomprehensible is such juggling with facts long ago accepted in the United States, and such confusing of moral distinctions which to the English-speaking mind are absolute, when the Chancellor must have known that the keen lance of Sir Edward Grey would find the open joints in his harness. He was indeed a dunderhead if he dreamed that the American people could so easily be beguiled. More hopelessly dunderheaded was he if he dreamed that the British Foreign Secretary would leave one stone upon another of the defence he so precariously constructed. The two columns of Sir Edward Grey's retort in The Globe of yesterday, published all over the United States, did for Bethmann-Hollweg what long ago was done for Bernstorff, and Munsterberg, and Dernburg, and Heinrich Albert, and Hermann Ridder, and the whole "Fatherland" group of German apologists. There is not in all America one newspaper of high standing and reputation for impartiality and intelligence that would accept any argument or any statement of fact from any one of these gentlemen without independent non-German corroboration.

And why? Why is it these university professors and trusted spokesmen for Germany in the United States are not believed? If they were not dunderheads, as well as deceivers of the people, they would know. It is because they, every one of them, have subscribed to the moral philosophy that a lie told in the alleged service of the Fatherland has no moral obloquy. To them there are no moral distinctions where the nation is concerned. The diplomacy they approve is the accursed diplomacy of deceit that has bedevilled European statecraft for two generations. The American answer to this whole school of immoral moralists, like the Canadian answer and the British answer, is this: "Gentlemen, in matters of ethics we do not think the same thoughts or speak the same language. Good day!"

BRANTFORD'S EXPERIENCE WITH THE HYDRO ELECTRIC

Leaving aside altogether the question of the merits or demerits of the hydro-electric scheme as a whole, a question which now interests the citizens only insofar as if affects the Brantford hydro-electric department, The Expositor is pleased to be able to congratulate the local commissioners on the report which they last night presented to the City Council of the first year's operations of the department. It was, in all respects, a most satisfactory report and the fact that at the end of the first year, after setting aside the substantial sum of $6,000 for depreciation and meeting all charges, including interest on the original investment, the board was able to show a surplus of something over $2,000 demonstrates beyond question that the citizens were wise in their choice of commissioners and the commissioners in their choice of officials. Undoubtedly obstacles were met during the first year that are not likely to be encountered in years to come, now that the affairs of the department are in smooth working order, and there is every reason to hope that the already satisfactory surplus from this department of the city's affairs will grow year by year and that the citizens will reap the benefit either in the form of reduced lighting and power rates or the lightening of the general tax burden.

There is one item in the report that is, perhaps, open to criticism, and that is the charge for street lighting. Prior to the introduction of hydro-electric our street lighting cost in the neighbourhood of $15,000 a year, while the financial statement shows the cost for the past year to have been $21,724.64, or considerably more than half of the department's total revenue. There is no doubt but that the streets, both in the business and residential sections, are now better lighted than they ever were before and the extra expenditure may, in the minds of some, be justified on that account. Certainly we would not care to return to the old order of things, but there is just the possibility that we are, particularly in the central business districts, a little too extravagant with our light. Would not a lesser number of lights serve the purpose? Is it necessary in these times of financial stringency to maintain as many ornamental lamps as we have installed? Certainly we are getting all that we are paying for, but is such a flood of light necessary, especially during the long hours between midnight and sunrise when there are few people abroad? Can we afford the luxury at a time when the demands on the civic treasury are so heavy that even the mayor admits that the city is face to face with the greatest financial crisis in its history? The question is a debatable one.

However, if fault there is it does not rest on the hydro-electric commissioners, but rather on the City Council of 1913, which had charge of the installation of the street lighting system. The commissioners when they came into office had to deal with conditions as they found them and their first annual report shows that they have practiced the utmost economy, consistent with efficient service, in the management of the affairs of the department. May their report for 1915 show a surplus many times as large as that for 1914.—Brantford Expositor.

WORTH AN ARMY CORPS TO THE ALLIES.

For thirty years the Teuton has been proclaiming his greatness to the world, and many of us took him at his own valuation. The bald, foolish lying of the German newspapers first shook our faith. People could not be invincible who believed any fabrication that flattered their vanity, and the continually increasing absurdity of the lies is the best proof that things are going well for us. The editors of the German newspapers are, indeed, worth an army corps to the Allies.—London Express.

MONEY FOR A GOOD CAUSE.

An illustration of what can be done to raise money even in war time is afforded by the action of the Children's Aid Society at Brampton. There is need of a Children's Shelter in the county, and the committee decided to ask each ratepayer to contribute $1.00 toward this worthy object.

A printed envelope was delivered to each adult resident by the Boy Scouts with a message that some one would call for an answer in a few days. There were 4,000 persons billed in this way, and a week later when the collections were made the cash contributions totalled $3,900.

An interesting feature also was that even the poorest persons contributed something at personal sacrifice of simple pleasures, and it was all done with the utmost cheerfulness, no one being coaxed or pressed to contribute in any way against their inclinations. —Toronto Star.

THE RETURN OF PROSPERITY.

The trade of this country is recovering from the shock by the opening of the war, and the longer the war lasts the greater will be the improvement in general trade conditions. It is not unlikely that the upset that will be caused by the conclusion of peace will be even greater than that resulting from the declaration of war. Certainly new factors will make themselves felt which no man can estimate. Wheat is now marketing at a dollar and a half a bushel, and may yet reach the fabulous price of two dollars a bushel. Canada will have hundreds of thousands of acres in wheat next year more than she had this year, and the agriculturist, who forms the larger part of our population, will be sure of getting anywhere from fifty to one hundred and fifty per cent. above normal prices for all his products during the next year or two. The prosperity of the farmer naturally reacts on the manufacturers, and through him to all classes of the community. It is true that certain lines of trade will remain stagnant for some months, particularly those dealing in luxuries, but the huge orders for supplies being placed in Canada by the British authorities are bound to reduce the degree of unemployment now existent. — Toronto Star.

WILL MEAN BIG SACRIFICE.

Mr. Brooks Adams estimates that to turn the Germans out of Belgium will cost a million lives, and it does not appear that the British people fully realise as yet the magnitude of the task or of the sacrifice which England will have to make to accomplish it. Much depends upon the campaign which Lord Kitchener, if correctly reported, says will begin in May. Confidence in the ultimate starvation or bankruptcy of Germany is by no means so great as a few months ago, and it is seen that before settling the fate of German militarism it is needful to consider the problem of recovering Belgium for the Belgians. That will mean terrific fighting, but, as Napoleon said, one cannot make an omelet without breaking eggs.—Springfield Republican.

"Towel" of Hot Air.

In hotel, factory and public lavatories, where roller towels should not be used because of the danger of spreading skin disease and where the expense of furnishing individual paper or cloth towels is considerable, the electric hand drier may be used economically and satisfactorily. A sanitary hand drier described in the Electrical World consists of a sheet metal case with an opening in its top in which the hands can be inserted and dried by a current of hot air. A foot pedal operates a quick acting switch which starts a blower, forcing air through the electric heater. The hand drier is, of course, absolutely sanitary, as it is unnecessary to touch any part of the apparatus when using it. The hands can be thoroughly dried, it is declared, in from thirty to forty seconds, which is less time than is required to perform the same operation with a linen or paper towel.

BIRTHDAY CELEBRATED

Considerable Solemnity Marked Kaiser Wilhelm's Festivities.

LONDON, Jan. 28.—Emperor William's birthday was celebrated with enthusiasm in Berlin yesterday, although with a degree of solemnity which would not have been expected in times of peace. A Reuter despatch from Amsterdam transmits a telegram from Berlin describing the celebration. The city was decked with flags. Members of the diplomatic corps, court officials and representatives of the state and municipal governments attended a service at the cathedral. Crown Princess Cecilie and Prince August William attended the service and were cheered enthusiastically. A reception was held later in the city hall. The Emperor's birthday was celebrated generally in the other cities of the Empire.

Religious services were held at the headquarters of Emperor William, where he delivered an address expressing his satisfaction with the progress of the war and in which he asked his officers to continue to discharge their duties to the Emperor and the fatherland as they hitherto had done.

The Berlin newspapers, including the Socialist organs, publish warm eulogies of the Emperor and predict that he will emerge from the war not only victorious, but with his reputation considerably enhanced.

Empress Augusta Victoria sent a long, affectionately worded telegram to the Emperor. As a birthday present she forwarded him a cover for a field altar designed by herself.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

It was stated authoritatively yesterday that President Wilson will veto the immigration bill because of the literacy test.

Baron von Burian, the new Austro-Hungarian Minister of Foreign Affairs, has been decorated by Emperor William with the order of the Black Eagle.

Despite the announcement that the Boer uprising in South Africa has been completely crushed, the rebels in Bechuanaland are still fighting against overwhelming forces.

The Australian Government announced yesterday that it had a plan for the formation of a rifle reserve of half a million men, which may be used in Europe if the war is prolonged.

Provisional President Roque Gonzales Garza of Mexico arranged yesterday to authorize a loan of fifteen million pesos to pay the expenses of war and of the pacification of the country.

N. E. Hagel, K.C., died yesterday in Winnipeg after a long illness, aged 68. Born in Oxford county, he was called to the Ontario Bar in 1872. He practised in British Columbia and the Yukon.

The latest casualty in the Canadian Expeditionary Force is the death on Jan. 26th of No. 27519, Pte. Charles R. MacKenzie, 15th Battalion, at No. 1 Canadian General Field Hospital, Netheravon, from bronchopneumonia.

Infantry Training

The Matter in This Column is from the Official Manual 1911 and is Published According to Orders of the Home Guard

2. REAR FOURS—COVER. If required to halt or to mark time before the whole squad has wheeled into the new direction, the fours which have not yet wheeled will cover off by moving to their places in rear of the fours which have wheeled, by making an incline to the right or left.

3. Forming squad when moving to a flank. On the RIGHT (or LEFT) FORM—SQUAD. The squad will first form two deep, and will then act as a squad marching in file (see Sec. 44, 2).

FOR—WARD. The squad will move on in line in the direction in which it was originally marching in fours.

49. Dismissing with or without arms. DIS—MISS. The squad will turn to the right, and, after a pause, break off quietly and leave the parade ground.

Notes. 1. If the squad is under arms, arms will be sloped before the squad is dismissed (except in Rifle Regiments).
2. If an officer is on parade the men will salute together as they break off.

PART II. 2.
SQUAD DRILL WITH ARMS.
RIFLE EXERCISES.

50. General Rules.

1. Recruits, before they commence the Rifle Exercises, are to be taught the names of the different parts of the rifle and the care of arms as laid down in the "Musketry Regulations, Part I."

2. The rifle exercises will not be performed at inspections, and will only be practised by units larger than a squad for purposes of ceremonial.

3. Instruction in the rifle exercises should be combined with "Firing Instruction" ("Musketry Regulations, Part I," Secs. 46-50). The recruit should be accustomed to regard his rifle from the first as his chief means of destroying the enemy, and not merely as an implement to be carried at drill and manoeuvre.

Squad drill with arms should be practised occasionally in extended order (see Sec. 88) to accustom recruits to handle their arms steadily and correctly when separated from their comrades.

4. The following instructions apply to the Short Lee-Enfield, Lee-Enfield, and Lee-Metford rifle. A special note is made when the instructions for the Short Lee-Enfield rifle do not apply to the Lee-Enfield or Lee-Metford rifle.

5. The recruit having been thoroughly instructed in the rifle exercises by numbers, will be taught to perform them in quick time, the words of command being given without the numbers, and executed as detailed in the following sections, with a pause of one beat of quick time between each motion.

6. Arms may, if desired, be sloped from the stand easy on the command SQUAD—SLOPE—ARMS. When the squad is at the slope, it will be taught to go through the motions of the order, stand at ease and stand easy on the command STAND—EASY.

7. Squads with arms will be practised in the different marches, and variations of step, described in the foregoing sections.

The disengaged arm will be allowed to swing naturally as described for marching in quick or double time without arms respectively.

51. Falling In With Arms at the Order (Pl. V).

The recruit will fall in as described in Sec. 30, with the rifle held perpendicularly at his right side, the butt on the ground, its toe in line with the toe of the right foot. The right arm to be slightly bent, the hand to hold the rifle at or near the band (with the L.E. or L.M. rifle near the lower band) back of the hand to the right, thumb against the thigh, fingers together and slanting towards the ground.

When each man has got his dressing he will stand at ease.

Note. The procedure is the same with or without bayonets fixed.

53. The attention from stand at ease. SQUAD—ATTENTION. The left foot will be brought up to the right and the rifle returned to the order.

54. The slope from the order. SLOPE ARMS—ONE. Give the rifle a cant upwards with the right hand, catching it with the left hand behind the backsight and the right hand at the small of the butt, thumb to the left, elbow to the rear.

AFTER travelling a certain distance the electric wave which carries the human voice along the telephone wire becomes attenuated and speech becomes too faint to be heard.

Just as in the old stage-coach days fresh relays of horses at regular intervals along the way, enabled the traveller to continue his journey with undiminished speed, so by means of the newly invented "loading coils" inserted at proper intervals, the electric waves are strengthened and long distance telephoning is made easy.

We have lately finished the "loading" of our long distance lines and speech transmission has been very greatly improved. This is especially noticeable on extra long talks. Our "long-haul" transmission is better than ever.

Begin the New Year by making systematic use of the Long Distance Telephone in your business. It will save you time and labor, as well as much money in the shape of travelling expense.

Pleading Of Men In The Ranks Urged Servia To Great Victory

LONDON, Jan. 22—The sudden Servian right about face which transformed seeming defeat and rout into victory and the recapture of Belgrade was ordered by the Servian staff as a result of the pleading of a committee of private soldiers, according to letters just received here.

"When the Servian retreat began in November," writes an officer who was present at the recapture of Belgrade, "and we had to abandon town after town before the vastly superior forces of the Austrians, there was great discontent throughout the rank and file of the army. When the heart of Shumadia was reached several regiments were actually on the brink of mutiny.

Then one regiment sent a deputation of private soldiers to the Commander to urge the retreating tactics be abandoned. They argued and pleaded at great length with the General Staff. 'These are our homes,' they insisted, and we must defend them. If the Austrians are to take these, let it be over our dead bodies. We cannot retreat any further.'

"Before they left headquarters they had prevailed, and they returned to their regiment with the assurance that the retreat would be stopped at once.

"That very night the fighting began. No quarter was asked nor given, and the toll of dead, both Austrian and Servian, was terrible. Worst of all, the fighting, despite all our efforts, was indecisive.

"Then it was that Prince Alexander and General Putnik decided to put into execution a plan they had conceived some time before. Unexpectedly King Peter appeared in the trenches. He spoke to the soldiers as if they were children; he told them stories of Servian prowess in the days of old; he declared his intention of fighting by their side.

"'Here, my children,' he said, 'we must defend our country, our homes, our fields. He who cannot or will not fight to the uttermost should leave the ranks and throw away his gun. He has my permission to return home. Here in these trenches every man must be the bravest. Our lives are nothing, but let us sell them dearly.'

"The quiet eloquence of the King always created great enthusiasm. Not a man but was stirred and when the order came to advance the Servians threw themselves upon the Austrians fiercely. A few moments before the battle was to begin the soldiers were praying fervently. Then they advanced, singing and cheering, and the Austrians gave way before that onslaught."

Had Heart Trouble FOR YEARS.

Now Weighs 138 Lbs.

Miss Beatrice Lougheed, Staples, Ont., writes: "I feel it my duty to tell you what Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have done for me. I had heart trouble for quite a few years. I doctored for it, and altogether my bill amounted to $400, and still no cure. One day when very sick I was lying on a couch close to where some almanacs were hanging. I took one down, and was reading about what Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills cured, and thought I would try them. I got six boxes to start with; have only taken three boxes and I never felt so well in my life as I do now. I only weighed 87 pounds when I started to take them, and now I weigh 138 pounds. I hope all poor sufferers will be benefitted by them as I have been."

Wherever there is any weakness of the heart, Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will strengthen it and build up a strong healthy system.

Court House Is The Scene Of Unusual Activity These Days

County Council Progressing Steadily and Big Arbitration Case is in the Main Test—Treasurer's Report—Plight of Girl Confined in Jail.

CONSOLIDATION OF SCHOOLS

The sombre old walls of the main rooms at the Court House are listening this week to the deliberations of two assemblies of personages, great and not quite so great. In the grand chamber you find a galaxy of legal luminaries whose attendance demands from $30 per diem down to at least $10, according to their magnitude in the legal firmament. Here you see an arbitration board in action, with an armament ranging from 42 centimetres all the way to hand grenades and a personal array from staff officers to camp followers. The "coal boxes" speak only at rare intervals, but the "75 millimetres" maintain an incessant bombardment upon each other, and especially upon the rival forces that are pushed into the advanced trenches, represented by the witness box. While some of these artillery pieces are covering the advance (in evidence) of their first line troops the latter are under fire from the enemy, with only slight advantages apparent either way to the citizens who imagine they are following the proceedings with the complete comprehension attributed to the Arbitration Board. While no communiques are issued, either side might send out the notice, "Our forces gained slight advantage along the entire front to-day, although the enemy put up a stout resistance at every point." This action, it might be remarked, costs the combatants at least $1200 a day.

In the minor chamber the County Council represents the near great. Theirs is constructive work, applying, more or less, to the entire county. Here you find "Bob" Shaw and "Charlie" Coben, the men who, it is claimed, invented County Councils, or at least were acquainted with the man who invented them. Here, also, are the Reeves of Lakefield, Havelock and Fitzgerald, who during their week in the city are probably never approached by representatives of the city with any object of solidifying the various units of the county. Not so decorous as the assembly under the eyes of Judge Hucke, Mr. Ross of Montreal, and Wallace Nesbitt, K.C., for in an attempt at relaxation a reeve or deputy-reeve may swing a leg over the corner of his desk during a moment of abstraction, still the County Council wades through a mass of detail concerning the rural sections of Peterborough. And don't forget that they, too, receive some emolument in the may of expenses, etc., most of which is deposited at the Munroe House, the official convening centre for many years of Councils.

ROBT. SHAW,
The Popular Reeve of Harvey, and a Veteran Member of the County Council.

A Girl's Plight.

Dr. Morgan, jail surgeon, laid before the Council this morning the facts regarding a female inmate of the gaol who was committed as a vagrant some time ago to the Mercer Reformatory. The authorities of that institution refused to accept her because of approaching confinement. She had not been sufficiently long in residence in this city to be sent to a hospital at the city's expense, and Dr. Morgan asked the Council what was to be done for her. The County has no responsibility in the matter as the girl had lived in the city. Apparently there is nothing but the county gaol for the girl, who is about eighteen years old. It is understood that the jailor could permit the girl to go an hospital if some one would agree to pay for her reception there. To express it mildly, the County Council does not consider the case appropriate to the uses of a county gaol, but they will probably expect the city to assume the responsibility of caring for the young woman.

CONSOLIDATION OF SCHOOLS

The consolidation of rural schools in districts where it is believed the ratepayers would benefit by this scheme was once more presented to the Schools committee by the County Council yesterday afternoon by Inspectors Lees and Broderick.

This question has been up so often in recent years that it might well be placed on the programme as a fixture. Last year it was explained at length, for both the inspectors feel there are several sections in this county which, if they would adopt this idea, would at length regret their present opposition or, rather, diffidence.

The word itself explains itself. In a sparsely settled rural community it is inevitable that the school attendance will be comparatively small. The ratepayers will not be able to pay a high salary to a teacher and as a result they will have to content themselves with the services of one whose certificate is nothing much more than a scrap of paper. In most cases it follows that a teacher of limited qualifications is capable to giving the pupils very ordinary training. This condition is found in adjacent school sections, and by a system of consolidation one school would be erected for the accommodation of the children from the several schools. Consolidated taxes would permit the engaging of properly qualified teachers, first class teachers if necessary, and the pupils would directly benefit from the lessons received. The idea essentially aims to provide teachers of experience and academic training. It strikes at the holders of permits and third class certificates, and offers a means of giving the children in the remote sections an education equal to that obtained in the more thickly settled and richer sections.

In order that the children may reach school easily special vans covering a specified route are secured. They are protected for winter use, and where this system has been put into operation have given good service.

One of the objections to the consolidation scheme is of course that the school will be quite near for some children and will be more remote for others, no matter how centrally it may be located. Farmers who might possibly be situated at a distance will entertain doubts about the van service and will prefer the smaller schools under the old system.

From conversation with several of the Councillors on the committee there is no doubt but that they fully understand consolidation system and what it would offer, but there is no strong likelihood of its being essayed in this county, at least for the present.

The trustees claim that it would not only provide better teachers for children who now require them, but it would bring direct results that would be noticeable in attendance. In their Inspectors' reports already published it has been shown that the attendance is not all it should be. The scheme has been proving a success in parts of the west. Attendances have been made more regular, but there have been heavier enrollments apart from the higher quality of pedagogy offered to the pupils.

NOTES

At this afternoon's session of the County Council Mr. Bervis, caretaker of the House of Refuge, asked for advice regarding several minor matters. It was decided to let Mr. Godfrey, an inmate who recently created a disturbance that got him into trouble, ramble for himself. Another man who also wanted to leave, and who had been in for a month with a broken arm, was permitted to go. He claims he can earn his own living.

The Council then went into Committee on County Property with Reeve Squire of Norwood presiding. The Grand Jury's address was read and received.

The group photograph of the 1914 Council has been received from the Roy Studio with Mr. Shaw as Warden, and will be hung in the Council Chamber.

Gift Cigars.

The Councillors have received several boxes of cigars during the past few days. Yesterday Deputy-Reeve Forster of Monaghan and Mr. W. H. Dunsford of the Bank of Commerce each presented a box of "smokes" that were much appreciated.

The members have a joke on Reeve Brown of Asphodel which was going the rounds to-day. Details were withheld but when Reeve Walsh of Douro said "Clerk for one night only," there was a hearty laugh in which all the members joined, as if they were fully aware of the facts.

Reeve Griffith of Belmont and Methuen is one of the younger members of the Council and appears to be a "comer." He is a big, husky young man, takes a keen interest in municipal affairs and should be a strength to the County body.

J. A. Jobe, Deputy of Smith, and F. J. Bullied of Chandos are two other younger members who are fitting in well with the older and more experienced members.

The Chairman of the County Council, and Warden of Peterborough County. He is Reeve of Havelock and one of the Younger Members of the Council.

ACTION SOLVES DIFFICULTY.

Britain Can Now Stop All Food For Germany, Says Globe.

LONDON, Jan. 28. — The decision of the German Government to seize stocks of flour and grain makes them absolute contraband instead of conditional contraband, as they were heretofore, argues The London Globe in a leading articles printed yesterday.

"We permitted food to be imported by Germany," the newspaper says, "provided it was intended for the civil population alone, but now that it is to be treated as Government property it becomes absolutely contraband, and vessels carrying food supplies to the enemy's ports, or to neutral ports, from which these cargoes are to pass into Germany, will do so at the peril of capture."

The editorial argues that in view of the new status of flour and grain the American steamer Wilhelmina, which sailed from New York, Jan. 22 with a cargo of food for Germany, has no right to land her supplies at Rotterdam.

An extremely sensitive automobile fire alarm has been invented which relies on the expansion of heated air to close an electric circuit and ring a bell.

Heroism in Modern War Rivals Feats Recorded by Historians

History does not tell of any more courageous heroes than those to be found on the battlefields of the warring nations in Europe to-day, according to an article printed in a recent issue of the Figaro.

'Here we have incidents of daring, both of officers and soldiers, for in these lists all ranks are put together," the Figaro says. "These are extracts from the reports, magnificent military literature which surpasses the writings of Aeschylus, Plutarch and the Lives of the Saints. I have said Aeschylus. You will remember of the Athenian soldier who kept hold of a Persian ship at the battle of Salamis even though his hands were cut off. Read this, then:

"'Grimault, a sergeant in the Seventieth infantry, who has lost three fingers, refuses to abondon his post.'

'I spoke of Plutarch. He used to refer to all kinds of daring. Here are several instances of courage:

"'Barrois, a soldier in the 306th infantry, having been fatally wounded cried out before he fell: "I have been hit, but I would that I had another life to give. Vive la France!"'

"'Flamand, captain of the 298th regiment of infantry, showed great bravery and rare qualities as a leader in the fighting of September 6 and 7. At the point of bayonets on the 7th with his company he took a trench of the enemy, making twenty-six prisoners and himself captured a German flag. Wishing to take the second line, in which the enemy had taken shelter, he charged at the head of his men, crying: "One more effort boys, and we'll take them." Mortally wounded, he gave orders to the soldiers who would have tended him to let him alone and keep up the advance. He died a few minutes later where he had been laid, stretching out his hand after his men, as if to urge them on.'

"'Blandin, a captain of the 140th infantry, at the head of his regiment, seriously wounded in the attack which he was making with his 400 men, refused to be carried to the rear, saying to his lieutenant: "The firing of this company is very important. Take the command and lead them on."'

"I spoke of the Lives of the Saints. Read of this incident:

"'Faivre, an officer in the Eleventh regiment of dragoons, during an attack on foot on a village, October 10, was sent to take a message from the colonel to a more exposed position at the front. Having completed his mission in safety he took his place in the rear of the line of marching scouts, completely worn out by the work. Then, in the course of a difficult retreat, seeing two of his companions fatigued, he gave to one of them his own cloak.'

"Saint Martin did not give more than half of his. One woman, speaking of these reports, said, "They are all heroes.' But why not do something to perpetuate the name and fame of these brave men? And here is a plan suggested by an enthusiastic man who has read the lists of bravery:—Why not in each of the villages and towns where the men were born give to some street the name of one of these men who served his country so well? The families of those who are dead will gain perpetual consolation in their grief. Children will read the inscriptions and older citizens will tell them of the undying homage which the fatherland pays."

JUVENILE FORESTERS INSTALLED OFFICERS

Monthly Meeting of Court White Lily No. 86, Juvenile Branch, A.O.F., Held Last Evening

Court White City No. 86, Juvenile Branch, Ancient Order of Foresters, held its monthly report last night, January 27th, in the S. O. E. Hall. Chief Ranger T. Hendry was in the chair. A large gathering of the members turned out, it being for the installation of officers.

After the usual business was transacted District Chief Ranger Tom Hendry proceeded to install the following officers

Past Chief Ranger—Bro. H. Morton.
Chief Ranger—Vincent Miller.
Sub-Chief Ranger—A. B. Hendry.
Secretary—Arnold McWilliams.
Treasurer—A. Laws, Sr.
Sr. Woodward—S. A. Lawes.
Jr. Woodward—Percy Dallin.
Senior Beadle—Gordon Boyce.
Chaplain—Bro. Halliday:

One candidate was initiated and propositions for two more were received. The prospects for 1915 are good and the boys are displaying great energy in their quest for new members.

The boys then sat down to a heavily ladened table of good things which soon disappeared in the usual boyish fashion, after which the Chief Ranger Bro. V. Miller, in a neat little speech, advised the members to come out to the meetings and work for more members. A song by Bro. R. Hendry took the boys off their feet, and "Tipperary," sung in chorus, helped to put away the big feed and leave room for fruit, which caught the eyes of the boys. Bro. J. Marshall sang "The Maple Leaf" in great style, followed by Bro. Ball, with a recitation. Bro. Harrison rendered a song, "The Busy Bee," after which the members formed a circle and sang "Auld Lang Syne," finishing with three cheers for Branch White Lily.

REASSURED.

'I say, old chap, I'm in shocking luck. I want money badly, and haven't the least idea where I can get it."

"Well, I'm glad to hear that. I thought perhaps you had an idea you could borrow it from me?"

The CRESSMAN Company Limited

"THE BONEYARD OF THE PETERBOROUGH LIGHT AND POWER COMPANY"

Is the Appellation Used by Mr. M. K. Cowan When Referring to the Company's Pole Yard—The Preservative Qualities of the Soil in and Around Peterborough is Vouched For by Chicago Experts, But Discounted by the City's Legal Expert--The Arbitration Between the City and the Peterborough Light and Power Company

From the standpoint of the evidence adduced yesterday at the afternoon session of the arbitration that is being waged beween the City and the Peterborough Light and Power Company, it would appear that the soil in and around Peterborough possesses exceptional preservative qualities. The "reproduction" experts who were brought here from Chicago to estimate the cost of reproducing the distribution system of the Peterborough Light and Power Company, claim that the life of a pole in Peterborough is many years longer than in any place they had heard of. This might be a good thing to insert in the next issue of the Board of Trade booklet dealing with Peterborough and its "unsurpassed possibilities". Archibald Herbert Sayce of a Chicago appraisal firm, estimated the life of a pole, in Peterborough, at thirty-three years. In this he was corroborated by another witness who originally worked for the same firm. Mr. Sayce was subjected to a severe examination at the hands of Mr. M. K. Cowan, counsel for the City, which was intensified when the extent to which Mr. Sayce had conducted the inspection of the poles in the Company's pole yard was before the Board. Mr. Cowan remarked that he had heard that this yard represented the "boneyard of the Peterborough Light and Power Company." Mr. Sayce admitted having made only a cursory inspection of the poles that were in the yard. He would not go so far as to admit that there were any "culls" there. "Line hardware," "scrapped" copper wire, and matters pertaining to salvage entered largely into the examination. Judging from the nature of the examination it is evident that the City's legal representative is of the opinion that the Company's valuation of the materials entering into the system is high, likewise the averages credited to the life of poles, etc. This tends to increase the value of the plant and may have some bearing on the award of the arbitrators unless it is successfully contested by the City's experts.

The Life of Wire.

"What do you put the life of copper wire at?" inquired Mr. Cowan, continuing the examination of Mr. Sayce.

"I figure on a depreciation of two per cent. each year," the witness replied.

"How many years did you figure the life of this wire?" asked Mr. Cowan in reference to the wire that formed part of the inventory of the Peterborough Light and Power Company.

"I figured it out on a percentage basis, having due regard to the salvage value."

"Am I right in putting the life of the wire at ten years plus salvage value."

"Yes."

"What do you allow for taking down, cleaning and packing wire as salvage?"

"I figure that the practical life of the wire is more than ten years. This can be credited to the cost of scrapping the wire."

"What do you think it is worth in dollars and cents?"

"About two cents a pound."

"I would like to state here that the insulation of wire is a matter of public opinion. A non-insulated wire is just as good for the purpose of transmitting current," added the witness.

"So that real or imaginary, the insulated wire is the best for public safety?" inquired Mr. Cowan.

"Public opinion," corrected the witness.

"That's what you have in Peterborough?" observed Mr. Cowan.

"Wonderful Soil."

"Getting down to the question of poles, how do you arrive at the conclusion that the life of a pole in Peterborough is thirty-two years?"

"From what I have seen."

"I don't say that thirty-three years is the life of a pole in every place. Peterborough is an exceptional place."

"Do you know of any authority that exceeds twenty years?"

"I am not certain. I recall having read an article on depreciation in which the life of a pole was placed at twenty-five years."

"And you looked at the poles in Peterborough and put the life at thirty-three years?"

"Yes; they have go wonderful soil here. Even if you used chestnut poles they would last a long time."

Groundmen's Wages.

"In your contraction cost what rate of wages did you allow?"

"I allowed three dollars a day for men, twenty-five cents an hour for linemen, and two dollars and seventy five cents a day for horse and vehicle."

"What did you allow for groundmen?"

"I mean by 'groundmen' the men who are on the ground. It is a term that is used by line companies. I don't mind telling you I got it from the C.P.R. and the Great Northern in a certain case."

"How old are you?"

"In 1905."

Cost of Service Meters.

"Now let us get down to the cost of service meters for a while. What is the life of a service meter?"

"About twenty years."

"Where did you get that?"

"I know that the Wisconsin Public Service Commission allow that."

"You will be surprised to learn that the Service Commission of which you speak only allow sixteen years, according to the information that I have before me. Some authorities put the life of a service meter as low as twelve years. Now where did you get your authority?"

"Oh, I see."

The Company's 'Boneyard.'

"What about the poles you said you inspected;; were they good poles or mixed poles?"

"They looked to me to be first-class poles."

"I am advised that this is the boneyard or graveyard of the Peterborough Light and Power Company and has been for years. Were there any crooked poles or culls of any kind?"

"They would stand inspection."

"What percentage of them were straight enough to pass inspection?"

"I would say tha practically all of them would pass."

"Were any of them rotten?"

"I did not see any."

"I am advised that there are many culls among them. Some of them have been used and discarded. Did you see any poles that would answer to that description?"

"I wouldn't say anything as to that."

Contingencies.

"In making up this list you have $179,342.42 representing reproduction value. You have added ten per cent. for contractors' commissions?"

"Yes."

"In this list you refer to contingencies. What does that mean?"

"Unforseen difficulties that are apt to arise in connection with the work of construction."

"If you give the contractors ten per cent. on the cost price what have you got to do with contingencies?"

"If you let the work for a lump sum you have to take risks as well as the contractors."

"Have you had any contracting experience in Canada?"

"No."

"Have you had any, any place?"

"Yes. In Wilkesbarre we—"

"I don't want to know what "we" did; I am talking about Sayce," said Mr. Cowan, addressing the witness.

Mr. John Littlejohn, treasurer of the Peterborough Light and Power Company, with headquarters in Toronto, was the next witness called. He submitted a statement of the earnings and the operating expenses of the Company, which is given in another column. Mr. Cowan ceased to examine the witness when he was assured that he would be permitted to examine the Company's books in Toronto, particularly the books dealing with the original purchase of the system at issue and the subsequent additions.

A Versatile Expert.

The Board was regaled with a some what descriptive and extended account of the theoretical and practical qualifications of the next witness, who gave his baptismal name as A. Almert, and his birthplace as Chicago. He started out by digging post-holes and climbing poles, until now he holds the position of Consulting Engineer on his own account, and as such is engaged upon the valuation of public utilities in various parts of the universe. He also studied law for four years. He spoke of valuating plants that represented millions in money.

"A Jack-of-all-trades" was Mr. Cowan's comment.

Witness was formerly employed by the Chicago Company with whom Mr. Sayce is now employed. He had charge of the Appraisal Department, of which Mr. Sayce is a member.

To Mr. Tilley, counsel for the Company, witness corroborated the evidence of Mr. Sayce. He recalled the time when he had delegated Mr. Sayce to make the valuation. Referring to the questions of poles, Mr. Almert said that the life of a pole was unusually high in Peterborough. He had been shown poles in Peterborough that had been in the ground for twenty-five years and, in his judgment, they would last ten or fifteen years longer. Respecting a ten per cent. commission which Mr. Sayce allowed for contractors, Mr. Almert said that all things considered, such as waste of materials, etc., a contractor would earn the ten per cent.

"You mean that a contractor would save a Company of this size that amount?" inquired Mr. Tilley.

Witness—"Yes."

Presentation To Mrs. Sawers

Is Honoured by the Members of St. Luke's Women's Auxiliary

Yesterday afternoon, at St. Luke's Rectory, the members of the Woman's Auxiliary of St. Luke's Church made a presentation to Mrs. Sawers, their First Vice-President. VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

KEP "BENEVOLENT" IN THE NAME

Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—I notice outside the entrance to the new rooms of the Protestant Benevolent Federation on George Street, a printed notice of the opening ceremonies of these rooms. As a member, I would like to point out that the heading reads, "Protestant Federation." Now the right and true name is Protestant Benevolent Federation. I suppose the real reason for the omission is really want of space, but I feel that the word "Benevolent" should be kept in. We are a Protestant Benevolent Federation and should say so in order not to mislead. Thanking you, Mr. Editor.

DISAGREES WITH THE DEBATERS

Editor Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I read with interest the account of the debate held in George Street church on the subject, "Resolved, that Christianity sanctions wealth rather than poverty." I think that the regiments presented show that very little thought has been given to the subject by the speakers on either side.

The affirmative asserts that it man's duty to make the best of his talents. 'Tis true, but is the acquisition of wealth making the best of his talents? Does the acquisition of wealth conflict with the teachings of Christ? All wealth is but representative of expended energy. Now if our talent is used in the amassing of wealth which has been produced by the toil of others and not giving in return the equivalent in that which has been produced by our own toil, we surely are acting dishonestly in the sight of God, and are breaking the commandment, "Thou shalt not steal."

When the rich young man came to Christ and asked, 'What must I do to be saved?" the answer was not, "Endow an orphan asylum or contribute to the building fund of a church," but "Sell ALL you have and give to the poor." Here is taught that through life as well as at birth or in death all men should be of the same estate, providing of course that they used what ability was theirs in the interest of all people.

If plucking the fatherless from the breast, taking a pledge of the poor, causing him to go naked and taking away the sheaf from the hungry," is using talent as Christ would have it used, why did the disciples when the church was organized after the day of Pentecost, and when the memory of the "Man of Sorrows" was yet fresh in their minds, incorporate in its constitution the following, "Neither was there any among them that lacked, for as many as were possessors of land or houses sold them, and brought the prices of the things that were sold and laid them down at the apostles' feet, and distribution was made to every man according as he had need." (Acts, 4: 43-35.)

Too many adherents to modern Churchianity "have the faith of our Lord Jesus Christ with respect of persons," catering in their assemblies to the "man with a gold ring and goodly apparel," and despising 'the poor man in vile raiment," being governed solely by the spirit of acquisitiveness, which is really amiasal nature in all its nakedness, being not yet transformed by the Spirit of Christ nor influenced by His command to "Love your neighbour as yourself."

Long Route Marches and a Sham Battle Are Features

The following letter has been received from Private E. Shrimpton, of the 57th detachment of the 21st Battalion at Kingston:

"As you see we are still in Kingston, but word is going around that we are to go to Toronto next week, and the 3rd contingent will be stationed here. We get some long marches now. Last Tuesday we went sixteen miles after dinner, and Tthursday we went over twenty miles, the transport bringing our dinner out. There was a military funeral on Friday and 300 of us were picked out for the firing party. We marched at the slow march for two miles from the church and three miles at the quick, and fired three volleys over the grave. There is another one to-morrow, with the same firing party. On Saturday we were out all day at Barrifield, having a sham battle to get rusty. We have the new hat badges, in the shape of a maple leaf. We also have the new Ross rifle, which is two inches longer and two pounds heavier than the others.

FIGHTING IN EGYPT

British Force Meets Turkish Vanguard at El Kantara.

ENEMY PROBABLY SCOUTS

Advance Detachment of Kurdish Horsemen Are Engaged About Sixteen Miles From Suez Canal —Other Turkish Detachments Sighted to East of Waterway —Djemal Has 120,000 Men.

CAIRO, Egypt, Jan. 28.—An engagement occurred Tuesday to the eastward of El Kantara, in Egypt, presumably with the advance guard of a Turkish army, although details are lacking. The Egyptian losses were one officer and four men slightly wounded. Only a comparatively small number of men were engaged in the fighting, which was in the nature of skirmishes.

Detachments of Turkish troops have been sighted at three other points to the east of the Suez Canal, but no fighting has resulted except that in the vicinity of El Kantara. In this engagement the Turks opened fire at long range with mountain guns. The British replied with machine guns and rifles.

Advices from Athens say that three Turkish army corps (120,000 men), under command of Djemal Pasha are engaged in the movement. British troops and warships are being assembled near the Suez Canal and civilians are leaving the scene.

Late reports say the British casualties are one officer and four men slightly wounded. The enemy showed no disposition to come to close quarters and apparently suffered fairly heavy losses. The troops later returned to camp, as the enemy could not be drawn forward. Small bodies of the enemy also have been seen at several other points east of the canal, but these have not yet come into touch with our forces.

El Kantara is about sixteen miles from the Suez Canal, and is the terminus of the caravan route from Rafati, the border station between Egypt and Syria. The distance from Rafati to El Kantara is 143 miles, and, as the British had filled in all the wells along the caravan route, the invaders would have had to carry their own water. Even El Kantara is supplied by a pipe-line from a fresh-water stream which runs under the Suez Canal.

It is believed the fighting of the British forces was with the Arab or Kurdish horsemen employed by the Turks as scouts for the main army under Djemal Pasha, which consists of three army corps, and which is believed to have hardly had time to cross the desert. The British have a strong force with which to guard the canal.

Great military activity prevails here. Troops and warships are being assembled, and all civilians are leaving the vicinity of the canal. Important reconnaissances are being made.

Success Near Baghdad.

LONDON, Jan. 28.—The War Office says: "With regard to the recent statement by the German Official War News Bureau, as coming from Constantinople, to the effect that the British offensive against Turkish troops near Kerna had been repulsed with heavy losses, the true account of these operations has now been received. A reconnaissance from Menera discovered a Turkish force to the south of the Ratta Canal. The Turks were driven across the canal with severe losses, and the British force shelled their dhows and camp, driving the enemy back in disorder. The British casualties were about fifty."

The points mentioned in the foregoing are near the junction of the Euphrates and the Tigris rivers in Mesopotamia, and the British force is the one which landed at the head of the Persian Gulf and is engaged in the conquest of the Euphrates Valley, Baghdad being its first objective of importance.

Woodrow To Wilhelm.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28. — Birthday good wishes by President Wilson were extended to the Kaiser yesterday in the following cablegram:

"In behalf of the Government and people of the United States I have the pleasure to extend to your Majesty cordial felicitation on this anniversary of your birth, as well as my own good wishes for your welfare."

Rushing Troops To Border.

CHIASSO, Jan. 28.—Austria and Germany are growing daily more alarmed at Italian war preparations, and are augmenting their troops along the Italian frontiers. Germany is pouring regiments from Bavaria into the Tyrol, it being understood that the German General Staff are controlling all Austrian military plans.

Good Work Done by Local Branch of Industrial Association

The following letter is self explanatory:

The Industrial Association of Ontario,
Peterborough Branch, 'Phone 1089.

January 26, 1915.

Basil Hall, Esq.,

Dear Sir,—I know you will be deeply interested in the result of our efforts in dealing with this unemployment problem.

Since Oct. 14, 1914, work and positions have been secured for 217 applicants registered. I have kept careful track of the earnings of these people during that period. The total sum is $3,201 dollars. I am well within the mark, because many have procured work and not notified me.

This money faithfully earned has come back to the city for the purchase of food, clothing, rent, fuel, etc., and in many instances the means of paying back old scores.

I hope you will be convinced that this Association of which you were chief sponsor has not failed in its efforts to grapple with this question and will also meet with the appreciation of your colleagues.

I am distressed to lose the co-operation of my wife. She was invaluable in handling girls, women, boys and some men. We both take a deep interest and delight in this work and sincerely hope it has proved beneficial to the city and meets their approval. I could tell you several cases of heroic women, who have stepped into the breach, saved the situation and "kept the pot boiling." Also strong men doing good work "for their board only." Shame on the farmers who take advantage of these men. I have them down.

I remain, dear sir,

Yours faithfully,
"EDWARD LANGLEY."

P. S.—There could be an increased power for usefulness if a small fund could be created to relieve acute cases of distress which would not appeal to the Relief Officer, such as furnishing small sums for transportation for applicants to reach their jobs. In several cases I have paid the fare and only in one instance the fare, $1.25, has been returned to me (fare for a domestic to Woodville.) Another case I paid the man's fare, 50c. He forgot to go to the station and liquidated the fare at the Munro House. That was money well laid out. He haunted me for weeks for a job and then disappeared. I cannot pay any more fares. In the last week I have sent 5 men to Farmer Windover, Lakehurst, to cut down timber. One could not pay the stage fare. Mr. McElhiney advanced him the money. His feet were on the ground. I furnished him with a strong pair of rubber and felt boots which I have no use for at present. I have also supplied two overcoats, one suit of clothes and several with old boots. My extensive wardrobe is now depleted. One man I gave a buck saw, which enabled him to earn dollars. Another a step ladder to fix pipes and earn money. Any cast off clothing or small sums of money would be thankfully received and I would keep a record of my stewardship.

It is very interesting to watch the seamy side of human nature in hard times, especially when you have the possibility of dispensing some relief.

Yours faithfully,
"EDWARD LANGLEY."

INVESTIGATING NURSES.

Prevalence of Spying In Hospitals Causes Comment In Britain.

LONDON, Jan. 28. The Nursing Mirror, one of the organs of trained nurses in Britain, calls attention to the danger of spies masquerading as nurses, and adds that Lord Kitchener himself is aware of this menace, and caused an investigation to be made at one of the Southampton hospitals some weeks ago. There he found, according to the journal, that four women had been indiscreet in the matter of discussing subjects relative to the army. While they were not spies, they showed so little common sense that they were dismissed.

On the other side of the Channel the state of affairs has been more serious. Two nurses were recently found to be out-and-out spies. Both were Americans with German sympathies, according to The Nursing Mirror, and both, it says, were "effectually dealt with." Just what this implies was not made clear.

Stock Yards Closed.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28. — Orders closing the Pittsburg and Chicago stock yards because of new infections of foot and mouth disease, were given out yesterday by the Department of Agriculture. The yards probably will be closed a week.

Cattle may be still received at the yards for immediate slaughter, however, and the newest order merely stops outgoing traffic while there is danger of spreading the infection.

Using Captured Steamers.

LONDON, Jan. 28.—Eight large steamers belonging to the enemy, which have been detained in the United Kingdom since the outbreak of war, are to be employed in trade between Britain and India, and will be placed under control of the Indian Government. The vessels have a gross tonnage of more than 44,000 tons.

LADY JELLICO'S APPEAL FOR OUR SAILOR LADS

Mr. Justice Hodgins would like it to be known to all contributors that both Lady Jellicoe and the Ladies' Emergency Committee of the Navy League have written acknowledging in the warmest terms the money for boots and oilskins, and the comforts for the sailors already sent.

They both desire to express their thanks, and have asked to have this widely known.

Nine cases containing 3060 woollen articles, and $539.50 in money, have already come from Toronto, and others have sent direct. The comforts are distributed to the ships by the Ladies' Committee, presided over by Lord Charles Beresford. They despatch nightly 50 to 100 bundles to the various ships, whose whereabouts are confidentially made known to them. The money goes direct to Lady Jellicoe for sea-boots and oilskins.

These Canadian offerings, though only "a drop in the bucket" are aiding in the continued well-being of the North Sea Fleet, every ship of which is stripped bare, and keeps one-third of its complement always on watch. Some idea of the task confronting the British navy—"whereon," according to the Articles of War, "under the good providence of God, the wealth, safety and strength of the Kingdom chiefly depend"—may be formed by considering its extent.

It is compelled (1) to watch with increasing vigilance, night and day, the two outlets from the North Sea—many hundreds of miles apart—the English Channel to the south and the wide stretch of several miles between Scotland and Norway to the north; (2) to maintain a patrol or line of scouts from Denmark to Holland, so as to prevent a surprise attack; (3) to stop and examine all merchant shipping passing through those waters; (4) to convoy English troops, and supply ships to France; (5) to chase and destroy German commerce raiders; (6) to watch all neutral ports in which German merchant ships are lying; (7) to prevent the invasion of England by Germany by guarding a tremendous length of English coast line so that the menace to the German fleet, transports, and supply ships will be so great that raids will be few and far between and so that the time spent by the raiding fleets will be insufficient to land troops, artillery and supplies; (8) to prevent the Belgian ports from being used as submarine bases, and to assist the extreme left of the Allies on the Belgian Coast; (9) to keep several hundred trawlers engaged in dragging for mines laid by ships flying a neutral flag, and to lay mines themselves off the German Coast.

Any further contributions, either in comforts or money will be gladly forwarded by Mr. Justice Hodgins, if sent to him at 9 Dale Avenue, Toronto.

Verdun Has Been Off Attacks And Illustrates Practicability of Forts

PARIS, Jan. 7 (by mail to New York)—I have just returned from Verdun, the most closely watched fortress city in all France.

Correspondents were told, almost without exception, that a trip to the besieged city was out of the question. A newspaperman might reach Verdun, they were told, but he would find himself bottled up until the end of the war. Yet my credentials carried me into the city itself and out again and on a tour of the entrenchments beyond which the army of the German crown prince steadily continues its attack.

The city itself is amazingly guarded. Every path and byway leading into the town is patrolled by ring after ring of pickets. A commissioned officer accompanied me through this cordon and to every section of the entrenchments. Telegraph, telephone and railroad lines were keeping the defenders in close touch with Paris. Supplies and mails were arriving regularly.

There seems to have been some mystery why the crown prince's army has not already broken. After a round of the French entrenchments the reason is plain. The Germans are not close enough for effective work. They were closer on September 8 than at any time. Even then, they succeeded in landing shells only in the outermost ring of fortifications.

The French learned a lesson in the fall of Liege and Namur. When the crown prince's army formed for the attack on Verdun, the French forces didn't settle back behind the forts and wait until the German mortars battered the walls in upon them. Instead they set up field works miles from the outskirts; works of such formidable character that the army of the crown prince had not succeeded in penetrating even the most advanced of these fortifications when I left Verdun. The only shells that have fallen upon the city were dropped by aviators. These did some damage but no lives were lost. The German aviators meeting their match in a crack aerial squadron of which Pegoud, of "loop-the-loop" fame, is a member.

The show place in Verdun's defences is a steep hill at the southern most point of the fortifications. From the crest there is a magnificent view of the battle line. When I was there the sun was just sinking. A French battery to our left was plugging away of the Germans, masked in a clump of trees. After the flashes came the steady "boom, boom, boom" of the pieces.

To the right and some four or five miles distant, highly coloured flashes over the tree-tops and booms of a different shade told of another kind of artillery fighting. French shells were sprinkling the woods with shrapnel. The German guns were booming back in reply.

As we stood on the crest the booming swelled into a crescendo. At first only the battery to our left was in action, then came the shrapnel fire from the right, and—finally as we watched and night came on, the whole horizon to the light, left and front, was punctured by the light flashes. The cannonade became general. The incessant roar of artillery rent our ears. "Fireworks" filled the air—the most gorgeous I have ever seen. It was a general artillery duel.

A YEAR INDOORS.

"For thirteen months I was so bad with chronic indigestion that I could not go out of doors. Nerves were unstrung, the heart bad and smothering feelings came on till I thought I would never recover. Every treatment failed me, so I began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which I thank for my present good health. I am now doing my housework and have a family of ten."

WILL PLAY HOME AND HOME GAMES FIRST HERE MONDAY

If Peterboro' Beat Bowmanville To-morrow Night and Ties Up the District They Will Meet Picton in Two Games For the Group Championship.

In the event of Peterborough beating Bowmanville to-morrow night and tieing up the district, Secretary W. A. Hewitt of the O. H. A. will order the teams to play home and home games to decide the group championship. The first game will be played in Peterborough on Monday night next, and the return game in Picton on Wednesday night, the majority of goals, of course, deciding the winner. The Petes will have a hard game in Bowmanville to-morrow night, but should win and make a play-off necessary. There will be a record crowd in Brock Street rink on Monday night for the first game of the group final.

LINDSAY vs. PETERBORO' GAME TO-MORROW NIGHT

There promises to be a big crowd at Brock Street rink to-morrow night when the old rivals, Lindsay and Peterborough juniors meet in an O.H.A. game at Brock Street rink. In order to stay in the running Lindsay must beat Peterborough here, and as the local youngsters are determined to win here to show the fans that they are as good as any team in the district, it promises to be a real old time battle. Lindsay will have a crowd of supporters which will add to the excitement. The game is called at 8.30 o'clock sharp

FINAL GAME IN GROUP AT BOWMANVILLE TO-MORROW

The Peterborough intermediates journey to Bowmanville to-morrow for the final game in the group schedule. A win for the blue and white will mean that the district is tied up with Picton ,each having a record of 9 wins and 1 loss. On the other hand, a defeat will put the Petes out of the running. The team had a good workout last night and are in the best of shape for the hard battle before them. The players will leave on the 11.40 G. T. R. train to-morrow morning.

PICTON WON EASILY FROM BOWMANVILLE TEAM

BOWMANVILLE, Jan. 27—Picton again lead this district by defeating Bowmanville by 11 to 4. In the first period each team made 2 goals. The vistors came back strong next period, and notched five goals, while the locals made two. Condition told, and in the final period Picton got four more goals. The play was closer than the score indicates, but the winners recovered the puck by quick back checking.

Taft and Hudgin starred for the winners, while Higginbotham, R. Williams and Jones were the pick of the locals. A request came from Peterborough yesterday offering Bowmanville Clug $50 to default their game here Friday night, but Manager Taylor refused to entertain such a proposition, although the local team has no chance to win the district. The largest crowd of the season witnessed the game here to-night, and a record crowd is expected Friday.

Referee—Chad Toms, Toronto.

HOCKEY

St. James' Guild vs. the Bible Class.

The boys of St. James' church showed some fine hockey playing last night at the Sacred Heart rink, when the Guild played the Bible class, the latter winning seven goals to three. Everyone was in fine shape and the game was very interesting until the second half, when the winners started their fast play and gave the Guild their death blow. The stars of the evening were Rehill, Freeburn, Geofries and Henry, with Rootes making some fine stops for the Bible class. The line-up was as follows::

Another interesting game is expected in the near future.

SOME EARLY SEASON BASEBALL COMMENT

"Gabby" Ivers, the husky first sacker of last year's ball team, is the first of the old players to remit his signed contract to the local club. Gabby's contract came in yesterday, and was a welcome spring sign. It has been carefully locked up in the strong box in President Garthwaite's office.—Hamilton Spectator.

Tom Nelson and Roy Brown., owners of the Brantford Canadian league club, were in attendance at the Woodstock-Hamilton hockey game, last night. Both are interested in the next meeting of the Canuck league, being somewhat eager to know what is going to be done with a couple of the clubs. Tom Nelson thinks that it would be wise to chop off Toronto and Erie and go through with six clubs. Ray Brown is also of the same thought.

Rube Deneau will likely be in charge at Brantford. Nelson thinks that Rube is his own private property and that the big fellow can come through with a winner this season. He will have a chance again, anyway.

It is likely that the Brantford club will be taken over by a strong stock company. Several of the leading Brantford fans favour such a move and Nelson and Brown are quite willing to do their part. The Canadian league owes a lot to the Brantford magnates, who are always doing their part to further the interests of the organization. The least that the Brantford crowd could do is to form a stock company, for in that way the best interests of the game in the town will be preserved. Stock companies prevail in nearly all the towns now.

After Retiring.

London, Ont., Jan. 27—At the annual meeting of the London Canadian league baseball club yesterday it was unanimously decided to again offer the management of the team to Dr. Frank Reisling of Caldwell, Ohio, who piloted the locals last season.

A. E. Somerville was elected president, succeeding ex-Mayor Sam Stevely, who takes a place on the executive. The honorary president is Hon. C. S. Hyman. Dr. H. T. Beason is vice-president and G. B. Patterson, treasurer. F. C. Bunnell is retiring as secretary, but will continue in the position until a successor is named. Confidence in the outlook for next season was expressed by the directors.

O'Connor is Busy.

Erie, Pa., Jan. 26—President Thos. O'Connor of the local baseball team, is in Youngstown to-day, where he, with President Heilbroner, of the Central League, is meeting the promoters of a baseball club in Youngstown with a view of adding Erie and Youngstown to the Central circuit. Youngstown has subscribed a fund of $3,000 for a baseball team, but as yet has not posted the $2,000 necessary to obtain a franchise in the league. Unless this is done prior to February 1st the club will not have the right to send out contracts.

TO-NIGHT'S GAMES IN CHURCH HOCKEY LEAGUE

The following games are scheduled in the Senior Church League for to-night: Murray Street vs. St. John's; St. Paul's vs. George Street; St. Luke's vs. St. Andrew's.

Last Thursday night considerable interest was shown in the three hard fought games, and to-night, with the above teams so well matched, there should be some fine hockey. Make things exciting by coming and cheering for your own church team.

The first game is scheduled to begin at 8.15 p.m.

St. Andrew's will line-up to-night as follows: Goal, H. Lees; right defence, M. Swanston; left defence, A. McWilliams (capt.); rover, A. Sharpe; centre, J. Brown; right wing, Henry; left wing, McDonald.

	Won	Lost	To Play
St. Lukes	3	0	3
George Street	1	0	5
St. John's	1	1	4
Murray Street	1	1	4

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 27.—Futures opened unchanged; in the first ten minutes of business, however, prices were run up over former records and at about noon May was at $1.45¾ and July at $1.46¼ bid.

The bullish sentiment prevailed and responsible brokers, speaking on the subject, said it was a difficult matter to explain the basis of these conditions. There were few or no export sales worked here, but in the south contracts were being fixed for August exports. Oats eclipsed wheat in record-breaking, as yesterday's records were put in the shade this morning entirely. Both months opened at new records, May selling at 68¾c and July at 67¾c. Further advance took place later. The cash demand for Nos. 2 and 3 northern wheat was good, but offerings were light. A considerable amount of cash wheat has been sold during the last few days.

Inspections yesterday were 142 cars, as against 351 last year, and in sight today were 115.

Wheat futures closed 1¼c to 1⅝c higher. Cash closed 2¼c to 2⅝c higher on contract grades. Oats closed ⅝c to ¾c up on the futures and 1c to 1¼c for cash. Flax closed unchanged to 1c to 1⅛c lower.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Jan. 27. — Cables on Manitoba spring wheat were stronger today at an advance of 3d to 6d per quarter, but owing to the continued upward tendency of prices in the Winnipeg market and the limited demand from foreign buyers the volume of business done was small. There was no further change in prices for coarse grains in the local market, but the feeling is still strong and higher values are anticipated in the near future. Demand for oats was somewhat quieter, but on the whole a fair trade was done. The market for spring and winter wheat flour is strong at the recent advance in prices with a fair trade doing. Demand for millfeed continues at firm prices. A more active business was done in cheese. Eggs are firm and higher.

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, Jan. 27.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 769 cattle, 1502 hogs, 398 sheep and lambs and 49 calves.

Hogs.

Selects, weighed off cars, sold at $7.90 to $8; selects, fed and watered, $7.60 to $7.75, and $7.90 to $7.90 f.o.b. cars at country points.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Jan. 27.—At the C.P.R. live stock market owing to the limited number of cattle offered the market was firmer and prices were slightly higher. Demand was fair, but sales were principally in small lots to fill actual wants. A few good steers sold at $7.50, and the lower grades at from that down to $6, while butchers' cows brought from $5 to $6.60, and bulls from $5 to $6.50 per cwt.

Sheep and lambs unchanged. Ontario lambs sold at $8 to $8.25 and Quebec at $7.50 to $7.75 per cwt., and sheep at $5 to $5.50.

Then you will understand how this watch can "fit your pocket like a silver dollar," yet maintain the highest standards of precision timekeeping.

Then you will know how different this practical thin model timekeeper is from watches made to appear thin by such methods as omitting the inside dust protection cap in the back case, or making a flimsy, thin movement for the centre of a thick edged man's case.

NO CONSCRIPT COMMANDMENTS HERE

In a democracy like Canada manufacturers and consumers meet on a common level. Each looks to the other to do his part in this made-in-Canada campaign. We need no paternal government to advise us. We need no ten commercial commandments as they have in Germany. This is a land of liberty. We think and speak as we like in loyalty to the Crown and to ourselves. We buy where and what we like in loyalty to our own commercial interest. If we don't recognize that buying things made in this country is good for our pockets, our homes, or our businesses, we naturally buy things made somewhere else. It's because we are finding out for ourselves without any paternal commandments from the supreme bureau, that it pays in every way to buy Canadian goods, that we are entering a campaign to do it. The German decalogue treats German consumers like a pack of children. The business sense of the average liberty-loving Canadian demands to be treated like a full grown man. We don't need to be told that it's good for Canada that we buy goods made by Canadians. We know that; the same as we know that fresh air and good food are beneficial to the health. We don't even call it patriotism. It's just ordinary everyday, selfish business instinct.

A DEFINITION.

The class had taken up the subjects of the rulers of the world. The President of the United States, the King of England, and their powers and functions had been discussed.

Suddenly the teacher said: "Now, Willie, what's a Kaiser?"

"A Kaiser," replied the absent-minded Willie, whose strong point was geography instead of political history, "is a stream of hot water springing up and disturbing the earth."

THE RELIEF COMMITTEE WANTS WORK

For the Unemployed—Board of Works Will Take Action in Respect to the Matter

COMMITTEE APPOINTED

A committee composed of Mayor Butler, Aldermen Johnston, Dufus, Weir, McIntyre, Green and City Engineer Parsons will confer with the Relief Association at a meeting to be held on Saturday evening to consider ways and means of providing employment for those who are seeking relief. The Relief Committee propose to finance the scheme to the extent of expending three dollars for every soldier expended by the City. One of the proposals that was considered at last night's meeting of the Board of Works was the leveling down of the Water Street frontage of the Hilliard Farm. Ald. F. H. Dobbin, who is acting on the Relief Committee, contended that the City might just as well provide work for those who are seeking relief, even though the relief funds were used to carry out the work as to provide relief, and get nothing in return. A report respecting this matter will be made to the City Council on Monday evening next.

THE OUTFALL SEWER.

Ald. Johnston was in favour of leaving the matter with City Engineer Parsons.

Ald. Saunders suggested that John Thirnbeck, who is at present engaged on the outfall sewer, be given a holiday and Martin Neary put on in his place for a while.

City Engineer Parsons said that owing to certain conditions this would be impracticable. It would cost between two and three thousand dollars to duplicate the present plant.

The City Engineer was asked to register the names of all teamsters and divide the work among them as much as possible.

Mr. Davidson, Homewood Avenue, is willing to purchase a strip of land situate on Babb's Lane, which was purchased by the City in anticipation of widening the street. The matter was referred to the City Engineer for a report.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mrs. George Hall of Montreal is visiting Mrs. T. C. Elliott, 112 McDonnel Street.

Miss O. B. Cavanah, London Street, has returned from Toronto after a pleasant visit with her friend, Miss Lillian Cox.

Hon. J. R. and Mrs. Stratton are guests at the Arlington Hotel at Arkansas Hot Springs. They purpose making an extended stay at the "American Carlsbad."

GANG WAS CHANGED TO-DAY

The gang employed on the outfall sewer was changed to-day. In anticipation of this event, the office of City Engineer Parsons, was inundated with applications for work. Between twenty and twenty-five men were given employment. Only those who had never previously worked on the job were taken on.

Thirteen plants, with a total capacity of 90,000,000 cubic feet of ozonized air, have been installed in a London underground railroad to ventilate it.

GERMANY NEEDS THE SCHELDT AND MAY EMBROIL HOLLAND

CHICAGO, Jan. 27.—Taken in conjunction with yesterday's declaration of the Premier of Holland that "incidents are possible which may render it necessary for us to make an appeal to army," the presence of Admiral Beatty's strong squadron of battle cruisers off the coast of Holland and in the path of the German squadron appears significant to some students of war matters, especially as only the day before the Netherlands Government professed to have information which was too important to divulge. A representative of one of the allied Governments now in this country has furnished to the News the following statement, which he asserts is based upon reliable information from foreign Governmental sources:

Germans Want Antwerp.

"The German military and naval authorities are planning to use Antwerp as their main base for naval operations, particularly for submarine operations against Great Britain in the North Sea and the English Channel. They have practically given up hope of capturing the French Channel ports of Dunkirk and Calais, which they fought for so desperately for weeks. The small and narrow port of Zeebrugge, north-east of Ostend, is continually exposed to the destructive fire of British heavy naval guns. Therefore the same plea of necessity under which Germany violated the neutrality of Belgium is about to be advanced in the case of Holland which commands the lower reaches of the Scheldt river, upon which Antwerp is situated.

Holland in Danger.

'It is generally known among the higher officers of the allied armies and navies that Holland's neutrality is about to be violated. If Holland declines to submit peacefully to the violation of its neutrality by the passage of war vessels up the Scheldt and the fight of aeroplanes over Dutch territory, it will presently find itself at war with the German empire. In that case Germany would at once occupy the southern part of the Dutch provinces of Zealand, from Breskens on the lower Scheldt to Graauw, northeast of Antwerp. Breskens and Terneuzen, on the south bank of the waterway, are fortified and a number of secondary batteries are emplaced at various points of vantage, but they would be of little worth against German siege artillery.

Reduce Dutch Forces.

"As the channel of the Scheldt, about eighty-six miles in length, has its greatest depth along the north shore, doubtless the Germans would take possession of this strip of territory, which would require the reduction of the forts at Bath, Borssesien and Flushing. Further, in case the Germans should enter upon this adventure, presumably they would also put themselves in possession of the waterways of the lower Rhine and of the Meuse, together with the Zuider Zee, from the base of Emden. This would provide ideal lines of communication toward the unrivaled sea bases of the Netherlands.

The intention of Germany to violate Hollands neutrality may be correct, but Sunday's naval battle was not the result of a German-planned raid on the Netherlands, for although the engagement concluded off the Dutch coast,' it began, apparently, only about 30 miles from the English coast.

"We're From Canada"—Chorus of a new Canadian marching song which is "taking on" rapidly in Canadian cities where the second and third contingents are mobilising and being trained for overseas service. It is British-Canadian, through and through, the sentiment is patriotic and the air catchy. It was composed and set to music by Miss Irene Humble of Toronto.

LUCKY TORONTO DOCTOR.

First to be Under Fire and Secure Many Trophies.

A correspondent writing from Boulogne-sur-Mer, France, states that Major Perry G. Goldsmith, of Toronto, is regarded as the luckiest man who came over with the contingent. He was not only the first to reach the continent, but the first to reach the front. In fact, Dr. Goldsmith had been in France only for a short time when he was within three miles of the firing line, and since then he has returned twice to the danger zone.

On each occasion the Doctor was luck enough o be chosen to relieve another medical officer to go up with an empty train and return with a load of wounded men.

The Major has collected quite a number of war trophies, despite the presence of numerous souvenir seekers. He has secured two German helmets and a blue grey skull cap with the hole made by the bullet which killed its owner plainly visible. Rifles, bayonets, sabres, knapsacks, water bottles, darts and badges, etc., are also in his possession.

Major Goldsmith has sent these trophies to London for shipment to Canada, and arrangements have been made for placing them on exhibition immediately upon their arrival. The Major believes that they will help to bring the war home to the people of Canada in addition to being of value from an educational point of view. Undoubtedly it is the most complete collection gathered together by a Canadian.

Dr. Goldsmith formerly lived in Peterborough.

IN TEUTON UNIFORMS.

Marits Followers in South Africa Dressed as German Soldiers.

LONDON, Jan. 28.—The South African rebels under Col. Maritz, who were overwhelmingly defeated in a second attack on Upington Tuesday, were dressed in German uniforms, says a despatch from Cape Town. The force under Col. Maritz, the last of the rebels in the Union of South Africa, made their escape into German territory after their defeat on Oct. 27, and the attack on Upington, just across the border into Bechuanaland on Monday, was their first aggressive movement since that time.

The fire of the Cape artillery was magnificent. Nine of the rebels were killed and the rest surrendered.

OPENING OF THE NEW FEDERATION HALL

Is Scheduled For To-morrow Night —Large Crowd is Anticipated.

To-morrow night the formal opening of the new Protestant Federation Hall will take place. An elaborate programme has been prepared a large crowd is anticipated. The opening of the new hall will mark a new era in the work of the organization in that it will provide ample accommodation for the continuance of the work on a larger scale than has been attempted in the past. Much expense has been entailed in the rejuvenation of the premises so that when they are formally thrown open for public inspection to-morrow night, visitors may be pleasantly surprised at the well appointed and spacious rooms which have been secured by the association for their use. The hall is on the third floor of the Bradburn block, and the main part is what was once the Bradburn opera house, and later a bowling alley.

Now it has been renovated, seated, and brightened, and is capable of accommodating one thousand people, if need be. It will be available for dances, socials, concerts and public performances, at moderate rates, terms to be arranged by the trustees, who have a five year lease on the rooms. Committee rooms adjoin it, and also the Orange lodge rooms.

There is ample space in the hall for almost any kind of large public function, and the trustees have not spared expense to make their quarters inviting and attractive. All new seats have been installed and there are more yet to come.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

The first skating carnival of the Boys' Department will be held to-morrow night, commencing at eight o'clock. A large number of the boys have their costumes complete, and are confident of carrying off some of the prizes.

A special feature of the carnival will be the skating races for boys 12 years and under, 14 years and under, and a senior race 16 years and over.

Saturday afternoon the members of the Boys' Department will meet at Jackson Park for afternoon games. Bring your skis and snowshoes. A large turnout of all grades of the Boys' Department is asked for.

THE RUSSIANS DESTROY A GERMAN SUPPLY STATION

Again Tells of Meinself und Gott

BERLIN, via London, Jan. 29.—Emperor William, speaking to the war correspondents at the general headquarters in the field, said:

"Good morning. I pay you my compliments. You write famously, and I thank you for it. You accomplish excellent things, and I read your articles very gladly. Your reports have a high patriotic tone, and it is of great value to our men in the trenches when we can send them such matter.

"And now one thing more, and note this, gentlemen. My principle—and it applies to this war also—is the word of old John Knox, the reformer in Scotland, that 'one man with God is always in the majority.'"

The Emperor's birthday was observed at headquarters Wednesday with a simple divine service in the field. The auditors included Prince Oscar, the fifth son of the Emperor; Prince Friedrich Leopold of Prussia, Prince Waldemar, the eldest son of Prince Henry of Prussia, General Falkenhayn, the chief of staff; Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg; Admiral Von Tirpitz, the commander-in-chief of the naval forces, and other officers.

MOTHER! IF CHILD'S TONGUE IS COATED

A laxative to-day saves a sick child to-morrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish; stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is oftimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

ENEMY HURLING FRESH REGIMENTS TO ATTACK

Chagrined at Inability to Take French Trenches on the Plateau of Craonne, Germans Are Renewing the Assault Despite Heavy Losses.

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PARIS, France, Jan. 29.—Chagrined at their failure to take the French trenches of the plateau of Craonne, the Germans are hurling fresh regiments to the attack, according to advice received here to-day.

The region about the shell-wrecked village of Hurtebise is the scene of some of the most sanguinary infantry fighting of the war.

Saxon regiments, renewing an assault on the elevated French positions, are being mowed down by the French light artillery, supporting the foremost line of French trenches.

Despite heavy losses, the Saxons are returning to the attack hourly. According to the latest advices from the battle front, the number of German dead and wounded on the fifth day of the battle is now estimated at nearly ten thousand.

Bomb proof caves shield their reserves from the steading pounding of German shells.

A renewal of German attempts to capture Ypres and to press westward from LaBassee on the road leading to Bethune is forecasted in despatches from the north to-day.

Large bodies of German reinforcements are moving to the battle line in Belgium. Aerial scouts reported an important movement of the enemy's troops through Lille in the direction of LaBassee.

HAS MET ALL ITS ENGAGEMENTS

Statement Regarding Financial Condition of Belgium Government

PARIS, Jan. 29.—One of the highest personalities in the Belgian government, according to a Havre despatch to the Havas Agency, speaking in reference to a German news agency's statement that Belgian finances are in a pitiable condition, said:

"It is evidently difficult for the government to dispose of its resources, since the Germans have laid hands on everything. Nevertheless, up to the present time it has met all its engagements. When the Germans evacuate the country its situation naturally will not be brilliant, for everything will have to be built up again, notably the factories, which constitute one of the principal resources of the country."

THE TORTURES OF RHEUMATISM

are always aggravated during damp, changeable weather and ordinary treatments are often useless.

Such conditions need the oil-food in Scott's Emulsion to reduce the injurious acids and strengthen the organs to expel them.

Scott's Emulsion, with regular diet for one month, often relieves the lame muscles and stiffened joints and subdues the sharp, unbearable pains when other remedies have failed.

YOUR DRUGGIST HAS IT.

Magnets in Use

PARIS, Jan. 29th.—In the hospitals of France magnets have been developed that will draw fragments of shrapnel to the surface fro ma depth in the flesh of even six inches, and steel-jacketed bullets have been drawn out from a depth of more than two inches.

At the Invalid's Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y., are many as wonderful electric machines, high frequency currents, X-ray, violet rays. Then Dr. Pierce has equipped the Sanitarium with every known device to aid the sick and in the Surgical Department every instrument and appliance approved by the modern operator. The permanent cure of rupture is accomplished here without pain with local anaesthesia. Stone in the Bladder and Gravel are removed in many cases without pain and the patient can return home cured in a few days.

Dr. R. V. Pierce, nearly half a century ago, devised and used two prescriptions which were almost unfailing. They were made without alcohol or narcotics, extracted from roots and herbs by using pure glycerine and the ingredients are made public.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a tonic and blood purifier that cures pimples, blotches, sores, humours, eruptions and diseases of the skin.

Nothing stands as high to-day in the estimation of thousands of women as Dr. Pierce's Favourite Prescription—this is a soothing nervine which cures the functional derangements and painful disorders of women. For girls about to enter womanhood, women about to become mothers and for the changing days of middle age Dr. Pierce's Favourite Prescription should always be on hand. In liquid or tablets. SUCCESSES REPORTED

Official Austrian Communication Says Fighting in the Passes Has Been Successful

GAINS MADE

Special to The Examiner:

VIENNA (by Wireless to London) Jan. 29.—The official Austrian communication issued to-day reports successes in the fighting in the passes leading into Northeastern and Northwestern Hungary. The statement follows:

"In the valleys of Ung, Latorcza and Nagy-Szamos the enemy has been forced to evacuate some important heights after repeated and fruitless counter attacks which cost the enemy heavy losses."

A later official statement issued here reports the recapture of Uzsok Pass, in the Carpathians, which has been in Russian possession since January 1. The text of the statement follows:

"Yesterday evening the Russians had been driven back in the upper Ung valley from their positions on both sides of Uzsok Pass. This is one of the most important of the Carpathian passes, for the possession of which during the course of the war many violent engagements have been fought. Since January 1 it has been occupied by the Russians. It was strongly intrenched and stubbornly defended in several good positions, one behind the other. It is now again in our possession after three days of fighting.

"To the northwest of Uzsok Pass and in the Latorca and Nagya valleys fighting continues.

"In West Galicia and Poland there have been artillery duels of only minor importance owing to the snowfalls."

British At Suez Stop The Turks

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Jan. 29.—The first skirmish of the war in the Egyptian arena occurred on Tuesday near the outposts of the British force guarding the east side of the Suez Canal. The advance guard of the Ottoman army invading Egypt reached the outposts and after a sharp exchange of firing retired.

From the official report it is apparent this was a small affair, only one British officer being wounded, but despatches from Cairo say the invaders suffered severely from the naval guns of the British troops.

The despatches do not disclose the size of the Turkish force, but say that the engagement took place to the east of El Kantara, which is right on the Suez Canal and is the terminus of the caravan route from Rafati, the border station between Egypt and Syria. The distance from Rafati to El Kantara is 143 miles and as the British had filled in all the wells along the caravan route, the invaders would have to carry their own water. Even El Kantara is supplied by a pipe line from a fresh water stream which runs under the Suez Canal.

It is believed the fighting of the British forces was with the Arab or Kurdish horsemen employed by the Turks as scouts for the main army under Djemal Pacha, which consists of three army corps and which is believed to have hardly had time to cross the desert. The British have a strong force with which to guard the canal.

A Terse Description.

(London, Express.)

"Everybody knows how difficult it is to grasp an impression, and more so to give a terse and vivid description of a battle," writes a Paris correspondent. "It would be hard to beat the following picture, given me by a wounded British soldier. I asked him what he could tell me about the battle in which he was hit and this was his answer:

"'First, you 'ears an 'ell of a noise, and then the nurse says, "Try" and drink a little of this 'ere.'"

TWO RUSSIAN ARMIES MENACING KOENIGSBERG

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PETROGRAD, Jan. 29.—Two Russian armies are now menacing Koenigsberg, the capital of East Prussia, according to official despatches received here to-day.

Moving down from the north, a force is descending upon Tilsit, sixty miles north-east of the city, and already has driven back the Germans and destroyed their supply station at Pogegan, three miles north of Tilsit.

A second army, whose advance upon Koenigsberg was officially reported two days ago, continues to press westward along the line extending in a south-westerly direction from Lasdehnen to Maliwishken, a few miles north-east of Insterburg.

The Germans will be squeezed between two Russian armies and forced to give ground in the direction of Koenigsberg.

German attempts to check the advance of the Grand Duke's army upon Thorn, along the lower Vistula by attacks near Kikol, have been repulsed, it was officially reported.

Shot Girl Because She Was Going To Marry Another Man

Girl Not Likely to Recover---Five Shots Take Effect--Intended to Kill Others

SPRINGFIELD, Jan. 28 — Joseph Kaplyn shot and probably fatally wounded Alice Washkevity, aged 18, of Hastings, N.Y., an attractive Polish girl, at Great Barrington, about 2.30 Tuesday afternoon. He fired seven shots, five of which took effect in her body. Kaplyn was seized by the girl's friends and was being roughly used when Chief of Police Oschman arrived on the scene and placed him under arrest for assault with intent to murder. A remarkable feature of the affair was the fact that when the shooting began the girl was holding a baby, which escaped unharmed.

About 2.30 yesterday afternoon a Polish man ran into the centre of the village calling out that a girl had been shot. Chief of Police Oschman and a number of citizens immediately started for the place, and within a few minutes were at 19 River street. As they neared the place there was great commotion and several men were seen holding on to Kaplyn and beating him. Chief Oschman had a little difficulty in getting the men away from Kaplyn long enough to place the irons on him.

Dr. John S. Beebe was soon on the scene, and it was found that Alice Washkevity had been shot. The physician made a hasty examination of the wounds and then a hurried call for the ambulance was made and she was taken to Fairview Hospital. Seven shots were fired but the physician found that only five had taken effect and the girl would probably die. One bullet entered over the right eye, one passed through the throat, 1 through the left wrist, another took effect in the jaw and the other entered over the right breast.

Jealousy the Cause of Shooting.

The cause of the shooting was jealousy and the refusal of the girl to marry Kaplyn. She came to this country from Russian Poland about a year ago, and since then has been working as a housemaid for a family in Hastings, N. Y. A few weeks ago she went to Great Barrington in company with Kaplyn, with the intention of marrying him, but after a visit with her brother she changed her mind and was soon to become the wife of Joseph Mawley of Great Barrington. She returned to Hastings, but went back to Great Barrington a few days ago to remain until the wedding took place, within a few days.

Kaplyn called at the house of John Sewall on River Street, where she was staying at about six o'clock yesterday morning. He was refused admittance and went away. About 2 in the afternoon he appeared at the house again and, finding that a party was being held, he went in. The shooting took place a few minutes later.

Called Girl Into Another Room

Kaplyn called Miss Washkevity into a small bedroom away from the other guests and she sat on the bed holding the infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Sewall. What took place between them is not known, but Kaplyn took out a revolver and began to shoot at the girl. When the first shots were fired the girl dropped the child which fell to the floor out of the way of the remaining bullets.

The shots and the girl's cries drew the guests at the party to the room and though Kaplyn ran out of the house in an endeavour to escape he was caught and overpowered in the yard.

Intended to Kill Others.

Kaplyn used a 38-calibre revolver, which he had purchased early in the afternoon. He told the Chief of Police that he had spent $300 or $300 on the girl and that he had bought the gun with the intention of killing her. He also said that he intended to shoot himself. John Sewell, in whose house the affair took place, was shot through one finger in disarming Kaplyn. There were four witnesses detained in the case, but they will be released as soon as surety is furnished. Kaplyn has recently been in the employ of G. A. Sevens at his lumber mill.

The girl was reported to be in a very serious condition, but the physicians thought in spite of her many wounds there was little hope for her.

We always have it in the house, and recommend it as the king of all medicines. I was formerly completely cured of protruding piles by using Dr. Chase's Ointment."

GREAT ORANGE CROP PROMISES FINE FRUIT

With an anticipated output of 43,000 cars of oranges and 5,600 cars of lemons from the state of California, citrus fruits promise to be conspicuous during the present season and available at very low prices. The new navel crop now coming on the market is the finest fruit ever seen at this time of the year. The lemon harvest will double that of last season and in a few years Californians expect to produce a crop of sufficient size to eliminate the necessity of foreign importation.

Since 1890, when the California Fruit Growers' Exchange was organized, the citrus industry has been developed from a hazardous undertaking to a profitable enterprise. During the past decade, while the population of the United States increased 21 per cent., the consumption of California oranges increased 74.6 per cent. The aim of the Exchange shippers is to make the name Sunkist a guarantee to the purchaser of the quality of the fruit. In other words, by careful grading and selection they aim to maintain such a high standard that the name Sunkist on citrus fruits will convey the assurance of the term Sterling on silver.

The California Fruit Growers' Exchange, which packs the Sunkist brand, is made up of 7,000 growers who are voluntarily affiliated and aim to market their fruit at the lowest possible expense. This gigantic federation has succeeded in reducing the marketing cost to 1 3-5 per cent. on the gross sales, which is the lowest of that on any agricultural crop in the world. It accumulates no profits and declares no dividends.

The influence of packing a dependable quality of fruit is clearly reflected in the increased demands for citrus fruits. Last year the Sunkist people shipped 61.9 per cent of the crop of oranges, or 10,156,724 boxes. In addition they handled about 75 per cent. of the lemon output or 1,106,461 boxes, making a total of 28,195 carloads.

Scientific cultivation, efficient marketing, the elimination of unnecessary rehandling and the ability to handle in tremendous quantities are the main factors which have made it possible for the Sunkist people to place their fruit in practically every store in the country at prices which render them available to rich and poor alike.

"THE BATTLE CRY"

Charles Neville Buck

Anse stiffened. "What is it?" he demanded.

"Some folks 'low that ther Haveys don't mean as much ter ye now as ther furin' school-teacher does. Them folks'll be pretty apt ter think ye ain't tryin' ter please them so much as her—if ye attempts this."

"What do you think, Breck?"

"I'd trust ye till h——l froze."

"All right. Then do as I tell ye, an' if I fails I reckons you'll be head of the Haveys in my place."

Down at the school there was going to be a Christmas tree that year. Never before had the children of the branch-water folk heard of a Christmas tree. The season of Christ's birth had always been celebrated with moonshine jug and revolver. It was dreaded in advance and oftentimes mourned over in retrospect.

Now in many childish hearts large dreams were brewing. Eager anticipations waited the marvel. The honoured young fir tree which was to bear a fruitage of gifts and lights had been singled out and marked to the axe. Anse Havey and Juanita had explored the woods together, best on its selection. Perhaps Juanita and Dawn were as much excited as the children, but to Dawn it meant more than to anyone else. She was to accompany Juanita to Lexington to buy gifts and decorations, and would have her first wondrous glimpse of the lights and crowds of a city.

Milt was there at college and would be returning about the same time, so the mountain girl secretly wrote him of her coming. Now even facing so grave a crisis, Anse Havey thought of that tree and hoped that Luke would not come back before Christmas.

That night while he was sitting with Juanita and the fire was flashing on her cheeks from the logs he said moodily, "I'm afraid ye'll have to start despisin' me all over again."

She looked up in astonishment.

"Why?" she asked.

"I've got to kill a man," he announced briefly.

"Kill a man!" she echoed.

"God knows I hate to do it." He, too, rose and stood before the hearth. "But I reckon it had better be me than Jeb."

"Do you mean—" she broke off and finished brokenly—"that Fletch's murderer is back?"

"He's comin'. He's comin' to kill somebody else. . . . Most likely me. It's the question of choosin' between the life of a murderer that kilt Fletch for a ticket West and a hundred dollars . . . or lettin' young Jeb McNash go crazy and startin' the feud all over again. I reckon ye sees that I ain't got no choice."

She came nearer and stood confronting him so close that her low, tense voice came to his ears from a distance of only a few inches: "Suppose he kills you?"

"He'll have his chance." said Anse Havey shortly. "I ain't 'lowin' to shoot him down from ambush."

The girl leaned forward and clutched his hands in both her own. Under the tight pressure of her fingers he felt every nerve in his body tingle and leap into a hot ecstacy of emotion while his face became white and drawn.

"Don't risk your life, Anse," she pleaded. "Your people can't spare you, I can't spare you. Not now, Anse, I need you too much."

"Ye needs me?"

"Yes, yes," she swept on, and for an instant he was on the verge of withdrawing his hands and crushing her to him, but something in his face had warned her. . . . She dropped the hands she had been holding and said in an altered tone, "It's not of just me, it's bigger than that. It's my work. We've come to be such good friends that I couldn't go on without you. My work would fail."

For a while he was silent; then he said very slowly and very bitterly, "Oh, it's just your work that needs me?"

"But, Anse," she argued, "my work is all that's biggest and best in me. You understand, don't you?"

He shook his head. "I don't hardly know whether I understands ye or not," he said, "but I'm kinder afraid I do."

He had been so close to the brink that he had fancied for an intoxicated moment that he saw such gates of Miracle opening, that now he felt too dead to argue. He turned away, fearing that she would read his face.

"I reckon," he said dully, "Luke won't hardly kill me."

Suddenly an idea leaped into the girl's brain and she demanded, "Anse, you can prove this man's guilt, can't you? He ought to die. Civilization would be as inflexible about that as feud vengeance. Why not give him a legal trial? You could convict him."

Bad Anse Havey smiled, but wits mirthless irony.

"I can prove it, I reckon, to the satisfaction of a Jury drawn from my own country," he said, "takin' its orders from me."

"Then," swept on the girl, "why not do that? Instead of murder that would be justice. Instead of breaking the law it would be setting a precedent for law."

"As to its bein' murder," he commented drily, "I don't see much difference whether I shoot him down and end it, or whether I go through the form of havin' twelve men sit and pretend to listen to evidence an' then hang him."

"Try it." she pleaded. "Try it because I ask you. You've said that if you could accomplish the same ends lawful you would rather do it. Now prove it to me."

Anse Havey made no immediate reply. He went to the door and opened to let the cold air blow for a time on his face. When he came back and stood before her his features were all set and mask-like and he spoke with a voice that he held to a dead level.

"I'm goin' to do what ye asks. I've done took steps to that end already, because I knew ye would ask it," he said. "But I ain't goin' to lie about it. I ain't doin' it from no motive of civilization. It's just hypocrisy to use a Court of law like you'd use a gun. If ye can delude yourself into wrong make right and wrong. I can't. I'm doin' it just because ye asks it. I ain't doin' it in the interest of your work nether." For a moment the voice got away from him and rose fiercely.

"I don't give a d——n for your work!" he blazed out. "It's you I'm interested in. That's the sort of friend I am."

She looked up at his blazing eyes, a little amazed, and he went on, quietly enough now.

"If I fails to hang Luke Thixton. I'll be right now what ye prophesied for me twenty years hence; the leader of the wolf pack that goes down an' gets trampled on an' torn to pieces. I ain't never put no such strain on my influence as this is goin' to be. I've got to hold back the Haveys an' the McBriars whilst this Court foolishness dawdles along, an' if I falls down, Jeb is goin' to kill Luke anyway. I'm doin' this because ye asks for it an' fer that reason only, an' now I'll say good-night to ye."

Juanita Holland stood looking at the door he had closed behind him, a wild sense of tumult and uneasiness in her heart.

"That's the sort of friend I am." she repeated to herself.

What did he mean? For a moment she wanted to rush out and call him back. Was Dawn right, after all, and had he trodden underfoot the one possible basis of safe friendship to which he had pledged himself?

No, she argued with the sophistry of refusing to believe what she did not wish to believe it was simply the old duel of viewpoint and will—the old diel of personalities, and lay quite apart from any question of their personal relations.

CHAPTER XXVII.

There still remained the task of winning young Jeb's assent to this plan, and Anse Havey foresaw a stubborn battle there. Jeb had been reading law that winter by the light of a log fire through long and lonely evenings in a smoke darkened cabin.

When Anse Havey called from the stile one night the boy lay a battered Blackstone on his thin knee and called out, "Come in, Anse, and pull up a cheer." Anse had been rehearsing his arguments as he rode through the sleet-lashed hills and he was deeply troubled. In the hill parlance, "Thar was big trouble brewin'," and very vitally was young Jeb "in the b'ilin'."

The man and the boy sat on either side of the fireplace, as the sleet pelted endlessly and monotonously on the slabs of the roof. Penetrating gusts swept in at the broken chinking and up through the warped floor until old Bear-dog, lying at their feet, shivered as he slept with his forepaws stretched on the hearth and the two men hitched their chairs nearer to the blaze. By the bed still stood the rifle that had been Fletch's; the rifle upon which the boy's eyes always fell and which to him was the symbol of his duty.

As Bad Anse Havey talked of the future with all the instinctive forcefulness that he could command, the boy's set face relaxed and into his eyes came a glint of eagerness, because he himself was to play no mean part in these affairs.

Into his heart crept the first burning of ambition, the first reaching out after a career. He saw a future opening before him and his grave eyes were drinking in pictures which he alone saw in the live embers.

Then when ambition had been kindled and fanned into blaze the elder man broached the topic which was the crux of his plea.

"The man that can do things for the mountains must be willin' to make a heap of sacrifices, Jeb," he began.

Jeb laughed, looking about the bare room of his cabin. "Mek sacrifices?" he said. "I hain't never knowed nothin' else but thet. I reckon I hain't skeered of sacrifices!"

"I didn't mean that way, Jeb." Anse spoke slowly, holding the boy with his eyes, and some premonition of his meaning struck in so that the lad's lean face again hardened. The lines that had come around his mouth in these last months traced themselves stiffly like parenthesis about his lips. His eyes turned to the gun and he shook his head.

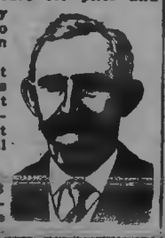
Cured Fifteen Years Ago of Piles and Eczema

By Using Dr. Chase's Ointment—Certifies That the Cure Was Permanent.

Some people have tried so many doctors and so many treatments in their search for cure for piles and eczema that they find it difficult to believe there is an actual cure.



MR. KETCHESON

The strong point about Dr. Chase's Ointment is that it not only brings relief promptly, but brings about actual and lasting cure.

In 1897 Mr. Ketcheson, 58 Douro street, Peterboro', Ont., wrote as follows:—"I was troubled for thirty years with itching piles and eczema. I could not sleep at night, and when I got warm the itching was terrible. Eczema covered my legs down to the knees, perfectly raw. I have tried every preparation I could hear of. Seeing Dr. Chase's Ointment advertised, I procured a box, and this Ointment effected a complete cure."

On Sept. 28, 1913, Mr. Ketcheson wrote as follows:—"I received a letter from you to-day, saying that you found on file a statement made by me 15 years ago. I have always given Dr. Chase's Ointment a good name since it cured me, and shall tell you how I came to use it.

"I had suffered for many years from eczema and piles, and had tried doctors and everything I could hear of in vain. Reading about Dr. Chase's Ointment, I purchased it at once, and was soon completely cured. That was fifteen years ago, so there can be no doubt of the cure being a permanent one. I have met a great many people who have been cured by Dr. Chase's Ointment."

Dr. Chase's Ointment, 60 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

The man who subscribes for a high-priced Toronto or Montreal daily has one consolation---he can always get 'The Examiner' delivered to his home for four dollars a year. "It's never too late to mend."

Could Hardly Straighten Up For The Pain in Her Back.

Many women suffer from an excruciating pain in the back. They are not even able to look after the common duties of their housework, and cannot even walk at times.

The whole trouble is that the kidneys have become affected, and when the kidneys get "out of kilter" the whole system becomes deranged. On the first sign of a weak, lame, aching back you should not neglect it, for if you do, you may be sure that some serious kidney trouble will follow.

What you want is a kidney medicine, for kidneys only. This you will find in Doan's Kidney Pills. Doan's Kidney Pills know nothing but kidney disorders, because they're made for kidneys only.

Mrs. George Craigie, Rose Valley, P.E.I., writes: "I am writing to tell you what a wonderful cure Doan's Kidney Pills did for me. I was suffering with a lame back, and for several days I could hardly straighten up for the pain. I had used quite a lot of other kind of pills, but received no relief. Just then my sister told me about what "Doan's" had done for her, so I decided to try them. I used three boxes and I am completely cured. I do not hesitate to recommend them to all."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c a box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

The only man who should not advertise is the man who has nothing to offer in the way of commodity or service — and — such a person is a dead one — whether he knows it — or not.

Kissing the Toe.

The custom of kissing the feet of persons whom it was desired to honor originated with the ancients. The people of oriental nations used to kiss the hands and feet or hems of the clothes of the persons they wished to show respect for. The ancient Egyptians got this custom from the Assyrians, and later the Greeks adopted the habit from the Egyptians. The Romans followed the Greeks.

A Handkerchief Trick.

To take two corners of a handkerchief, one in each hand, and with a single straight motion and without letting go either corner, to tie a knot in the handkerchief seems at first thought impossible. Nevertheless it is simple. Before you take hold of the handkerchief fold your arms, then grasp the two corners of the handkerchief. Holding an opposite corner in each hand, draw the arm apart. That single straight movement will tie the knot.

CHILDREN'S TEETH.

When They Should Appear and the Order in Which They Come.

The milk teeth (first teeth) are twenty in number. The time at which they appear is subject to considerable variations, even under normal conditions. The following table gives the order and average time of appearance of the different teeth:

Two lower central incisors, six to nine months.

Four upper incisors, eight to twelve months.

Two lower lateral incisors and four anterior molars, twelve to fifteen months.

Four canines, eighteen to twenty-four months.

Four posterior molars, twenty-four to thirty months.

At one year of age a child should have six teeth.

At one and one-half years it should have twelve teeth.

At two years it should have sixteen teeth.

At two and one-half years it should have twenty teeth.

It is not easy to explain where there are so often variations from the average. The order in which the teeth appear is more regular than the time of their appearance. Marked irregularities in order of the appearance of the teeth are the rule in idiotic children or those suffering from slighter mental effects.

Delayed dentition is generally caused by rickets. Many healthy children, however, frequently have no teeth appear until the tenth month of age.—Philadelphia Record.

BATHING IN JAPAN.

Natives Wash Themselves Clean Before Getting Into the Tub.

Partial accounts of the luxury of a Japanese bath lead us to believe that we have something yet to learn about what is regarded by many in this country as a necessity and by more as a supererogation—in Japan the bath is not only a necessity, but a delightful recreation.

The Japanese have a way of their own of taking a bath. They have a system that in some respects resembles that enforced at swimming pools in this country. You must first wash the body thoroughly, and then you enter the tub, the water of which is heated by an individual system. There if you are in a public bathhouse, you may smoke and doze and chat with your friends in a dissipation that is said to be exceedingly refreshing. The water is kept hot, perhaps increases in heat, and when you leave the tub it is still regarded as fit for the next customer. In a private house the master and mistress may have their bath first, and the same water serves for the invigoration and diversion of the servants. The ignorant foreigner, who goes into the Japanese tub for the purpose of cleansing his body and with soap spoils the water for further use is not only guilty of a social error, but entails a hardship on the household, including the servants.—Rochester Democrat.

The Figaro gives the following account of General Castelman's receipt of the news of his son's death: He was busy dictating orders during the battle when an officer presented himself. "What is it?" said the General, turning, in a trembling voice. The officer replied: "My General, your son, Xavier, has just been killed by a bullet in the forehead in repulsing the enemy's attack."

The General remained silent for a moment, then turned to the members of his staff, saying: "Gentlemen, let us continue." He resumed the dictation.

SAGE TEA TURNS GREY HAIR DARK

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Colour and Lustre to Hair

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns grey, streaked and looks dry, wispy and scraggy, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the tonic; you can get from any drug store a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," ready to use. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural colour thickness and lustre of your hair and remove dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the grey hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy, lustrous and abundant.

AFTER MANY MEDICINES FAILED

Mr. Singletary Says Vinol Ended His Suffering from an Awful Cough and Threatened Lung Trouble.

Sumter, S. C.—"I am an oculist and for several years I suffered with an awful cough and lung trouble, so that at times I was scarcely able to go about on account of my condition. I had tried almost every medicine recommended for such troubles, without help, and finally a friend advised me to try Vinol. Before I had taken one-half bottle I could see an improvement. I have now taken six bottles and my cough is not only gone but my general health is lots better."—J. W. SINGLETARY, Sumter, S. C.

It is the combined action of the medicinal elements found in cod livers together with the blood-making and strength-creating properties of tonic iron, that makes Vinol so efficient for chronic coughs, colds and bronchitis, at the same time building up the weakened, run-down system.

We ask everyone in this vicinity who is troubled with a chronic cough, cold or bronchitis to try a bottle of Vinol, with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not benefit.

To Boom South Africa.

"How to earn a living in South Africa," is the title of an exhibition which will be opened in London late in the autumn. Sir L. Starr Jameson is the president, and Mr. H. E. Morgan, the honorary organizer, explained its objects recently to a newspaper. The South African community in London very rarely meet together, and there is rather a lack of cohesion," he said. "This is an attempt of the Union of South Africa and Rhodesia to stimulate English emigration there. We find that the old type of exhibition is practically dead. The South African exhibition will probably be held at large London stores, and there the visitors will meet experts who will explain the various ways of earning a living. We shall solve the problem of what to do with our sons, and shall show what can be done with, say, $2,500. The wisest method of investing money and labor will be demonstrated, Ostrich farming, fruit farming ranching, and mining will all claim attention. Practical ranchers will be present to explain ranching, and the various phases of South African activity will be exemplified in an attractive manner."

The Matches.

The only matches sold in London 100 years ago were cedar splints tipped with a paste of chlorate of potash and sugar. On dipping one of these into a little bottle containing asbestos wetted with sulphuric acid, and withdrawing it, a flame burst forth. Fifty in a box, together with the bottle, were sold for a shilling.

The matches invented by John Walker in 1827—the first to ignite on sandpaper—were sold at the same price. Owing to the damage caused by the heads flying off after ignition, the use of these matches was prohibited in France and Germany.

Six years later came the invention of lucifers, the first matches with phosphorus in their composition. These, too, were originally sold at a shilling a box, and when in course of time the price fell to a penny, a motto from "Paradise Lost" was suggested for the boxes, "O, Lucifer! how greatly art thou fallen!"

Quick Recruiting.

The King's Own Scottish Borderers, who figured so prominently in the recent trouble at Dublin, are remarkable for having been the most quickly recruited regiment on record. They took their origin from the political refugees who made a temporary home in Holland during the reign of James II. On March 10th, 1689, the Earl of Leven set to work to raise the regiment, and his task was completed in four hours. The regiment was one of those engaged in the Irish campaign of William III., and later suffered terribly at Steinkirk and Namur. It afterwards received the privilege of beating up recruits in Edinburgh without special permission from the Lord Provost. George III. took a great interest in it, renamed it the King's Own Borderers, and wrote the motto "In Veritate Religionis Confidio." Its present style dates from 1887.

Cause For Applause.

At the close of the premiere performance of a recent operatic novelty, one particularly unimpressionable operagoer was observed beating his palms together vehemently.

"What are you applauding for?" asked a friend.

"To show how thankful I am that the curtain is down at last," he replied.

A BRITISH CITIZEN.

How One Becomes Naturalised in the Old Land.

The ordinary way of becoming a British subject is by fulfilling the requirements of the Naturalization Act, 1870. The applicant must either have resided in the United Kingdom for a term of not less than five years, or have been in the service of the crown for a similar period. He must also furnish evidence of his intention, when naturalized, either of residing in the United Kingdom or of serving under the crown. All applications for certificates of naturalization should be addressed to the Secretary of State for the Home Department.

An alien to whom a certificate of naturalization is granted in the United Kingdom is entitled to all political and other rights, powers, and privileges, and is subject to all obligations to which a natural-born British subject is entitled, with this qualification—that he cannot, when within the limits of the foreign state of which he was a subject previously to obtaining his certificate of naturalization, be deemed to be a British subject unless he has ceased to be a subject of that state in accordance with the laws.

The children of naturalized British subjects, if born in the British dominions, are by the law of England deemed to be British subjects. If born abroad, they are only deemed to be naturalised British subjects provided that their father was naturalised under the Naturalization Act, and that during infancy they became resident with their father, or mother being a widow, in any part of the United Kingdom.

The following fees are leviable under the Naturalization Act. On application for certificate or naturalization, £1; on grant of certificate, £3; for registration of declaration, with or without oath of allegiance, 10s.; for certified copy of any declaration or certificate, with or without oath, 10s.

Property may be held by an alien in the same manner as by a natural-born British subject, but the title to such property does not confer any right on an alien to hold real property out of the United Kingdom or qualify him for any franchise.

Inductive and Deductive.

Deductive reasoning is from theory to facts, while inductive reasoning is from facts to theory. Deduction is sometimes mere dreaming, oftentimes very foolish dreaming, while induction is the sane reaching out from particular facts to general laws.—New York American.

Policy, Not Politeness.

Gibbs—I noticed you rise in the car this morning and give your seat to a stout lady. Dibbs—Yes; it was a question whether she or I was going to stand on my feet.

Train Momentum.

The momentum of a modern twelve car railroad train running a mile a minute is equal to that of a ton weight falling from a height of twenty-one miles.

Fixed Both Ways.

Please give me two bills for my hat, one for $10, to show my husband, and one for $20, to show my lady friends.—Meggendorfer Blatter.

Nicknames of Famous British Regiments

By H. M. Snevily

"FIGHTING FIFTEENTH"; THE 15TH (KING'S HUSSARS) SAVING THE EMPEROR OF AUSTRIA, 1749 ✓ ✓ FROM THE SKETCH

WHAT'S in a name?

"Forces not to be measured; life, death, divine courage, a rampant spirit of reckless abandon; these are in a name," comes the living, pulsating answer to this trite question—an answer which reverberates around the world to the accompaniment of cannon music from the plains of Flanders, where fighting British regiments are once more inscribing in blood on the scroll of Fame their "nicknames" won on many a shell ploughed, shot down field.

Because of its simple eloquence the "Fighting Fifteenth" is one of the most striking of nicknames of British regiments now at the front. The name is an intense concentration of the regiment's history. It is fighting now; it has always fought when there was a cause, and it has never questioned the cause—that it was Britain's was enough.

This was the first regiment of light cavalry organized in the British army, and dates from 1759, when it was officially the Fifteenth Light Dragoons and popularly known as Elliot's Light Horse, from Colonel Elliot, whose defence of Gibraltar is one of the epics of history.

The Earl of Pembroke, Sir William Erskine and David Dundas were among the distinguished men who held commissions in the "Fighting Fifteenth" at the first. At Emsdorf, July 16, 1759, under Prince Ferdinand of Brunswick, the Fifteenth Hussars began to earn their nickname of the "Fighting Fifteenth."

The regiment performed notable achievements at Groebenstein, and at Friedburg it made the first of a series of famous rescues when it saved Prince Ferdinand, who had been surrounded by the enemy's cavalry.

Later they were to rescue the Prince of Schwarzenburg. It was near Le Cateau and Landrecies that a squadron of the "Fighting Fifteenth," under Captain Pocklington, advanced to support a reconnaissance made by the Prince of Schwarzenburg and a regiment of Uhlans.

The most famous exploit of the "Fighting Fifteenth" was the rescue of the Emperor of Austria at Villiers-en-Couché in 1794. The regiment was then serving with the Austrians against the French revolutionary forces in Flanders, where some of the fiercest fighting is in progress to-day.

The "Black Watch" is another name famous throughout the United Kingdom and the colonies. The Forty-second Highlanders, the oldest Highland regiment, does not get this name from the performance of any particularly gallant action, but the name has come to stand for all that is glorious, dashing and courageous in battle. The "Black Watch" has an enviable reputation as a fighting regiment.

It was organised by combining several Highland companies raised in Scotland in 1725 to 1729, recruited first for the purpose of maintaining order in Edinburgh, and its members were for the most part from the clans of Campbell, Grant and Munro. These clansmen wore their own tartan, but when John, Earl of Crawford and Lindsay, welded them into one regiment, known as "The Highland Regiment," a new tartan was devised by abolishing the color from those worn by the men in the ranks. Crawford, being a lowlander, had no family tartan, and it was from their black garments that the regiment got the name of the "Black Watch."

The "Gunners" means to the Briton the Royal Regiment of Artillery, whose record is the record of British arms in every quarter of the world.

It was not cavalry alone which attained immortality at Balaklava. The Second battalion of the Ninety-third regiment of Foot was there, and against it the Russians hurled the flower of their cavalry, a body of men in gallantry and dash rivals of the Light Brigade. In a "thin red line," only two men deep, the Ninety-third, with bayonets fixed, sprang to their feet and charged the Russian horse, not waiting for the enemy to reach them. It is hard to ride horses onto cold steel, and the Tsar's cavalry wavered, but only for a second. Urged by spur and voice, the horses plunged forward again.

There was a furious clashing of steel, plunging horses, stabbing, slashing and shooting men.

The thin red line swept onward, the wave of Russian cavalry rolled back.

That British regiment is still the Ninety-third Foot in the files of the War Office, but to Britons throughout the world it is simply the "Thin Red Line."

The Royal Welsh Fusiliers is a pretentious and elegant sounding name, but the men and officers of the regiment prefer the title which has been conferred upon them by admiring thousands, the "Nanny Goats." It was in 1689 at Ludlow that the "Nanny Goats" first became a regiment, being developed from thirteen companies of foot recruited three years earlier in the Welsh marshes by Henry, fourth Lord Herbert. Among the battles where the "Nanny Goats" earned distinction are the Boyne, Namur, Schellenberg, Blenheim, Ramillies, Wynendale, Oudenarde, Malplaquet, the siege of Lille, Dounl, Dettingen, Minden, Fontenoy, Bunker Hill, Corunna, Gibraltar, Copenhagen, Martinique, Torres Vedras, Badajos, Salamanca, Burgos, Vittoria, San Sebastian, Alma, Inkerman and Sebastopol. It also served in Egypt, Spain, Nova Scotia, Hanover, the Indian Mutiny, Ashantee, Burma and South Africa.

Quite a warlike record for a "Nanny Goat," which name was given to the regiment because of its mascot. In the officers' mess on St. David's Day the goat, escorted by drum and fife, is marched round the table while each officer and guest who has not done so before must stand on his chair and eat a leek while a drummer beats a long roll behind him.

The "First Tangerines" are officially the Queen's Royal West Surrey regiment, but they won their nickname by their defence of Tangier in 1662, which fortress had become a British possession as part of the dowry of Catherine of Braganza.

The "Devil's Own" was a name given to the Connaught Rangers or Eighty-eighth Foot, because of their notorious rascality. General Picton had described them as the greatest blackguards in the army, but after their terrific fighting at Fuentes d'Onoro it was thought to admit they had redeemed their honor. At the taking of Badajos the "Devil's Own" rivalled their feats performed at Fuentes d'Onoro, and since then they have been continually bettering their reputation as fighters.

George II. was the last British monarch to appear on the field of battle actually under fire. At the Battle of Dettingen he witnessed the remarkable bravery and excellent work of the East Surrey regiment, then known as the Thirty-first Foot, originally a marine regiment. As the survivors went swinging past him in the midst of the battle he cried out:—

"Well done, Old Buffs!" mistaking them for the Third Buffs.

When his error was pointed out to the King he exclaimed, "Well done, Young Buffs, then." The name has stuck.

The "Carabiniers" were originally the Ninth Horse and the Queen Dowager's Cuirassiers, so called in honor of Catherine of Braganza, whose master of horse was their first colonel. The regiment dates from 1685 and won its nickname at the Battle of the Boyne, where it fought in the cause of William III. so effectively that he termed it "Carabiniers" as a distinguishing compliment. The present official title of the regiment is Sixth Dragoon Guards.

At Albuera Colonel Inglis commended the Fifty-seventh Foot, who were defending an artillery battered wall. As the enemy pressed home their last charge Colonel Inglis shouted above the din of battle:—

"Die hard, my men; die hard."

That the Fifty-seventh Foot did die hard was attested by the heaps of the enemy's dead. That was in 1811. Since then the "Die Hards" have been dying according to their reputation.

When General Monk marched to London in 1660 to insure a free Parliament and the restoration of the Stuarts he took with him from Coldstream, in Berwickshire, his own regiment of foot, who were known thereafter as Monk's Coldstreamers. There is an unauthenticated story that when the escorting force met Charles II. at Blackheath this regiment kept the still disloyal troops from mutiny, and the King, on learning whose they had come, hailed them "My Coldstream Guards." To this day they are known as the Coldstream Guards.

There are several traditions concerning the origin of the name "Scots Greys." The most generally accepted one is as follows: When the Royal North British Dragoons, as the regiment was styled up to the time of the Crimean War, landed in the Low Countries in 1742 the Stadtholder noticed that the men were without mounts. He immediately ordered his own guard to turn over their gray horses to the Scottish corps.

THE RUSSIAN EMPIRE A GEOGRAPHICAL UNIT

Czar's Far-flung Dominions Produce Three Clearly Marked Types of People—Great Plain Factor

Geography appears conspicuously again, as in the case of England, to be the formative element on the character of Russian development. Eastern Europe is a vast level plain organized into one political unit. Having no natural barriers, it has in consequence no separate states. European Russia is in itself larger than the other nineteen states of the continent taken together, and when Asiatic Russia is included, western Europe shrinks into insignificance. Despite its immense extent, the land under the sceptre of the Czar constitutes a geographical unit, and even geologically possesses a degree of uniformity found nowhere else over so large a region. Its frontiers are clearly defined and the political state conforms on nearly all sides to the natural or physical. Only towards the Carpathians, on the middle west, where Russia merges into the German plain, and towards the Danube, are there no physical boundaries.

As a result of this geographical unity, Russia has produced and preserved for the whole vast central area a common physical type, a common religion and a common language. Professor Lingelbach remarks that the 135 million Russians occupying this central territory of the Russian plain show a truly astounding uniformity of head formation, and a further point of interest is the fact that Slavic skulls thirteen centuries old, found in this region, exhibit the same peculiarity. The power of the great plain is dominant, and is reflected in the uniform type of head formation. But the three main groups that compose the Russians proper differ not only in dialects, habits and disposition, but physically as well. First, there are the Great Russians, numbering 52,000,000, who occupy the heart of Russia, with Moscow as centre. Second are the Little Russians, about 27,000,000 strong, dwelling in the territory south and southwest, including the Don Cossacks, with their centre at the old and first capital of the Russians at Kiev, on the Dnieper. Third, are the White Russians—the name derived probably from the color of their clothes—about 5,000,000 in number resident in the lands east of Poland and northward around Lithuania.

Professor Lingelbach describes the distinction among these groups as very real. The Great Russian is blond, with chestnut or auburn hair, light complexion and [illegible]-colored eyes. In disposition he is phlegmatic stolid, and stubborn. The Little Russian, on the other hand, though possessing the head type of the Eastern Slav, is dark, even swarthy, with brown eyes and dark brown hair, and is considerably taller on the average. The Little Russian, too, differs from the Great Russian "quite as much in disposition and habits of life. He is more mellow and open-hearted; the sun of the southland has made him kind, hospitable and emotional. He is musical, highly imaginative and poetical, fond of pleasure, games and dancing. To him Russia owes most of her music, her poetry and her folk song." The White Russian is regarded by some as nearest the original type of the Eastern Slav. But, despite their differences, Professor Lingelbach holds that the great plain dominates, and environment, added to a common history and religion, has produced a people of greater homogeneity than is known anywhere else on so large a scale.

THE VARIOUS TYPES OF ARTILLERY IN USE

Artillery, Field—A type of gun which can be used in any country without an excessive strain upon the horses. It consists usually of two patterns of weapon: (1) field guns proper, which are generally of 3-inch to 3.3-inch diameter or caliber, so mounted on their carriages that when fired they do not jump or move and thus require relaying, and (2) howitzers, which are short, squat guns that toss their projectiles high in the air. The diameter of howitzers and the weight of their shell or shrapnel are invariably greater than in the field gun proper. Field guns proper are furnished with shields to protect the men working them against bullets from the enemy's rifles and from his shrapnel. Their range varies from 5,500 to 9,000 yards. The British field gun fires a shell or shrapnel of about 18 pounds, the French one of 16 pounds; the German one of 15 pounds; the Russian of 14½ pounds; the Austrian one of 14¾ pounds. The British field howitzer is 4.5 inches in diameter and fires a shell weighing 35 pounds.

Artillery, Heavy—A heavier type of weapon than the field gun or field howitzer which can only be transported with some difficulty over good roads or hard ground. The British heavy artillery consists of four 60-pounder guns (that is, guns firing a 60-pound shell) with each division. The diameter of the gun is 5 inches and the weight of the weapon is 39 hundredweight; it has a range of 10,000 yards. France has a short gun or howitzer designed by Commandant Rimailho of 6-inch diameter, firing a shell of about 94-pound weight. Only a very limited number of these guns were attached to the French army corps previous to the war; their disadvantage is their great weight, which is 47 hundredweight. Their range is 7,000 yards. Germany has a 6-inch howitzer firing a shell of about 90 pounds and weighing 53 hundredweight; she has also a 4-inch gun which fires a 30-pound shell but requires a specially prepared platform. The Russian army is also well equipped with heavy artillery in the shape of 4-inch guns and 6-inch howitzers but the details of these are confidential.

Artillery, Horse—A lighter type of gun than the field gun, specially designed for work with cavalry. In the field gun two of the gunners are seated on the carriage of the gun; in horse artillery all the gunners are mounted. The British horse artillery gun has a diameter of 3 inches and fires a shell or shrapnel weighing 12½ pounds; there are 362 bullets in the shrapnel as against 275 in the field artillery projectile. The weight of the gun is 6 hundredweight, against the 8 hundredweight of the field gun.

Artillery, Siege—A still heavier and larger type of gun than heavy field artillery, and is usually employed for reducing fortresses. The Germans however, are believed to have taken a number of their siege guns into the field, though the disadvantage of thus using these ponderous weapons is that they delay the movement of an army and require an enormous number of vehicles to feed them with ammunition. The best known German siege guns are the 8.2-inch howitzer, which fires a 250-pound shell, and the 11-inch howitzer, which fires a shell of 750 pounds weight. Howitzers of 12-inch and 17-inch diameter are said to have been employed by the German army at Liege and Namur and against Verdun, firing shells of 880 pounds and 2,000 pounds. Great Britain has a siege howitzer of 9.2-inch diameter firing a shell of 380 pounds, and France a weapon of 10.7-inch diameter, firing a shell of about 550 pounds. The Russian army employs a 12-inch siege howitzer, firing a shell of 800 pounds.

Some of the war poetry that is being written is almost as bad as the war itself.

The foreign picture postcard market also has suffered some discouragement.

Just now one man's guess as to how long the war will last is as good as another's.

BELGIUM'S QUEEN A NOBLE WOMAN

Beloved by Her People, She Does Not Hesitate to Make Sacrifices, Even Risks Her Life on Battlefield

"Long live Queen" Elizabeth, a great Sovereign, but above everything a good, and a true woman," was the toast drunk to Belgium's Queen at a banquet of the Municipality of Brussels, long before the war became a reality.

"A great, a good, and a true woman." It is a phrase which is in no sense an exaggeration of the virtues of the Queen, whose heroic deeds since the Germans crossed into Belgium at the outbreak of the war were only to be expected from one who was idolized by her husband's subjects, and known among them as the "Angel Queen."

It is about fourteen years since King Albert wooed and won the daughter of Duke Charles Theodore of Bavaria, who was famous as an oculist. Inheriting that kindliness of heart and consideration for the weaknesses of others which led her father to establish a free hospital at Munich, where he performed over 5,000 operations on the poor, Queen Elizabeth has always striven to ameliorate the lot of those in distress.

When still in Antwerp, King Albert said to the Belgian Prime Minister: "If necessary, you, my dear Minister, and I will take our rifles and go into the battle." "So will I," added the Queen, "and with me all the Belgian women." Queen Elizabeth kept this pledge, for she often has been on the battlefield aiding the wounded, cheering the fighters, and comforting her husband.

QUEEN ELIZABETH OF BELGIUM

No sooner had she placed her three children—Prince Leopold, born in 1901, Prince Charles, born in 1903, and Princess Marie-Jose, born in 1906—in the care of Lord Curzon of Kedleston, at Basingstoke, when the Kaiser and his army, violating the neutrality of her husband's country, invaded Belgium, than she hurried back to the King's side, insisting on sharing his dangers and discomforts. "I am not a Queen at present. I am a fellow-sufferer and helper," she replied, in a simple, dignified tone, when her husband and his officers urged her to leave the zone of danger.

As a nurse and the organizer of hospital equipment, Queen Elizabeth rendered invaluable aid. Before her marriage she gave serious attention to the study of medicine, and after some years obtained a degree of M.D. at Leipsic, being of great service to her father in his many good works, and herself gained experience in surgical affairs.

Apart, however, from hospital and nursing work, Queen Elizabeth has given further evidence of her practical-mindedness by her interest in the industries of the people, and her endeavors to further their work. After the funeral of King Leopold, who died in 1909, Queen Elizabeth did a patriotic thing in a characteristically womanly way. She gave orders for large quantities of Brussels lace to be used for her robes of State when she came out of mourning, and for her ordinary dresses. This was at a time when, for various reasons, Brussels lace had ceased to please its own country, and the industry required a fillip. And it was Queen Elizabeth who provided that fillip in a manner which gladdened the hearts of the lace-makers of te country.

The home life of the King and Queen of Belgium has always been of the happiest description. Their favorite hobby is the study of the violin, of which they are both extremely fond, and one of the most popular pictures in Belgium is that which depicts King Albert reading while his wife helps Prince Leopold to master the violin.

Modernizing Warfare

In Napoleon's wars a bullet seldom hit an enemy more than 300 yards distant. A marksman with the Lee-Enfield or Rebel rifle can bring down man after man at 1,000 or even 2,000 yards under favorable conditions—but the conditions seldom are favorable. Napoleon's Old Guard considered twenty-five cartridges a reasonable equipment for a whole campaign. In 1870-71 the German average consumption was sixty-five per man for the entire war. Many German soldiers fired 4,000 cartridges apiece the first month of this war.

Was Troubled With Eczema.

Would Nearly Yell With Pain.

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS CURED HIM.

Mr. R. J. Swales, Harriston, Ont., writes: "I have been a great sufferer with eczema. I tried all kinds of salves, but they did me no good. Sometimes I would nearly yell with the pain, and would pass little white worms. I was told to get at the blood, so I used four bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters, and it has made a complete cure."

All skin diseases such as eczema or salt rheum, itching or burning rashes, boils, pimples, eruptions, ulcers, etc., are all caused by the blood becoming impoverished, and while not usually attended with any fatal results, may sooner or later develop into some serious blood trouble, and the entire system become affected.

This valuable preparation has been on the market for the last forty years, so you do not make any experiment when you give it a trial.

May Wheat Reached A New High Level In Chicago

Big Commission Houses Were on the Buying Side, and the Trade Was Small—July Wheat Also Up—Weather Advices and Sharp Advances on Liverpool Spot Prices Responsible for the Strength.

CHICAO, Jan. 28.— "Dollar and a half wheat" was offered on the Board of Trade yesterday when May wheat opened at $1.50 to $1.50 7-8. The opening was attended by scenes of considerable excitement, dealers evidently thinking the cold wave would have an effect on prices.

In addition to the weather advices, the sharp advance on the spot prices in Liverpool and Paris and light offerings were responsible for the strength here at the opening. Nearly all the big commission houses were on the buying side. The trade, however, was rather small. The early market was nervous, and excited, but May sold at $1.49 3-8 fifteen minutes after the opening.

The $1.50 price set at the start of trading was an advance of 1 3-8c. over Wednesday's close. July wheat made an identical gain, opening at $1.30, compared with a close of $1.33 3-8 Wednesday. All other grains and provisions were higher at the opening, and held their gains in the early trading. Corn was up 1-2c. and oats 3-8c. to 1-2c.

Provisions averaged 7c. higher.

Several Parties Involved.

Chicago, Jan. 29.—General commission house buying lifted the wheat market quick yesterday to $1.50 a bushel, May delivery. Selling was not liberal until that price was reached. Then the market became less one sided. There were many resting orders to buy May wheat at $1.49 1-2 with July in even greater demand. Advancing prices at Liverpool, war developments near the Suez Canal, and the continued tension between Italy and Turkey were chiefly what gave impetus to the upward swing of the market. After opening 3-4 to 7-8 to 1 1-2 to 1 7-8 higher, prices reacted a little, but soon showed a rally.

What is May Wheat?

The advance in the price of May wheat to $1.50 in Chicago this morning the attention of business men in all the attention of business men in many lines throughout the United States and Canada to the Chicago Board of Trade. For that reason the following explanation of the trading, which differs very considerably from stock market trading, may be of interest.

Chicago, being the leading speculative market, the levels established here have a pronounced influence on prices at other centres. The likelihood that the war will have a disastrous effect on European crops add thus stimulate the demand for United States and Canadian wheat is(at the present time, a potent factor. The possibility of interrupted deliveries in various parts of the world is another matter of moment to the speculator; as, in fact, is everything which would likely affect the supply of and demand for wheat, such as weather conditions, European markets, etc.

The speculator in grain buys what are generally called "futures." The usual trading unit is 5,000 bushels, and the man who buys a unit of wheat now to be delivered next May, buys what is known as "May wheat." In May this will be "cash, or spot grain" and if the purchaser should hold it until then, the month of delivery, and still wish to continue his investment, he would execute a "switching" operation. That is, he would transfer his investment from the wheat which is to be delivered to him to wheat which he does not contract to take until June or July.

IT STOPS THE TWINGES OF RHEUMATISM LIMBERS THE MUSCLES, EASES THE JOINTS

USE NERVILINE.

Aching joints and sore muscles are common in rheumatic people. Inflammation is deep in the tissues. You might use a dozen remedies and derive less relief than Nerviline will give you in half an hour.

Nerviline is a pain-subduer that words do not altogether describe.

It is fully five times stronger than most remedies, not that it affects the skin unfavourably—no, its great power is due to its wonderfully penetrative quality—it strikes in deeply, but never burns or blisters.

You are astonished, delighted; this is because words do not express the promptness and permanency with which Nerviline cures every ache and pain in the muscles and joints.

Marvellous, you'll say. Natural, we say, because Nerviline is different, stronger, more penetrating, a true pain-subduer. Just try it and see if it doesn't cure rheumatism, neuralgia, lumbago, strains and sprains.

The large 50c. family size bottle is far more economical than the 25c. trial size. Get it to-day. Sold by dealers everywhere, or direct from the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

BETRAYED BY HIS OFFICERS, CHARGES GERMAN PRISONER

"Hiding All the Time Behind Our Backs," Says Moritz Pfeiffer

PETROGRAD, via London, Jan. 1.—Curiosity to see the prisoners of war as they are brought out in trainloads from the fighting zone draws crowds to the railway stations. Vilna is one of the busiest clearing junctions for this traffic, and every day brings its relay of captured Germans from East Prussia and Poland — mostly young fellows without helmets, their heads covered with any kind of old cap or battered felt hat, or simply wrapped in handkerchiefs. The German helmet has some market value as a trophy and its owner is usually very willing to sell it for a few kopecs to buy tobacco. Most of the captives are so stunned from starvation and fatigue when they are taken that they accept their surroundings with a look of total indifference, although trembling from cold under their torn uniforms and thin overcoats.

A civilian physician who is acting as a volunteer sergeant with the Russian army has kept an interesting notebook of the cases that passed through his hands. Here are some of the more interesting silhouettes he gives of wounded German prisoners:

"Baron von Prittwits Haffron, aged 19, of the Prussian Hussars, with a thin, nervous, hawklike face, and proud, conceited look; a somewhat defiant attitude. He had gone straight to the regiment from Goettingen University and had been more than three months in the war. He was with his regiment in Belgium and in the North of France, and was then transferred to the Eastern campaign. Near Konin the Cossacks shot his horse under him. He fell, broke his leg, and was captured. He was put in a railway car with some captured Austrian dragoons, from whom he at once turned away in disdain. I came up to him, gave him my name, and asked if he wanted anything. It appeared that what he wanted most was to wash himself and get scissors for his nails. The scissor were found, and we started talking.

TERRIBLE IN BELGIUM.

"'I haven't had to fight long on this front,' he said. 'It is only a fortnight since our regiment was brought here from Belgium. I remember that I was very glad to come. War in Belgium was an absolute nightmare. The population there never ceased their guerilla methods for a moment. In the night there were explosions in houses where our soldiers were resting, and the incessant nervous strain compelled us to take to repression. We had to burn villages, shoot down peasants and destroy their property. It was too horrible, and I began to breathe freely when I knew I was coming to Russia.

"'We Prussians are ready to fight this war to and end. As for the Southern States—Baden, Bavaria and Saxony—I am not so sure, although until now their spirit has been very firm. As for these blackguards—and he turned his head with a look of contempt to where the captured Croatians were sitting — they can only be made to work by the whip — nothing else.'

"Otto Thiele, aged thirty-eight, a lieutenant of the Landwehr regiment of Stettin. He has been thirteen years in the reserve and was a timber merchant by occupation. Thiele was found half dead from hunger and cold in a wayside station, where he had been brought with a hundred and twenty soldiers of his company. Evidently he was still greatly excited by the ordeal of the recent fight and felt an uncontrollable desire to speak.

OFFICERS KILLED.

"'Oh, Lord, Almighty! what a dreadful war! My brother was killed at Mons, my sister's husband went lost during our advance on Insterberg. All the officers have been killed in our regiment, and I, a man for years unaccustomed to the service, have to command a company. Near B——, the dead lay in heaps as high as breastworks, and still we were ordered to advance. I cannot think what will become of our army if this goes on. This is a sad year for the whole world.'

"Moritz Pfeiffer, a non-commissioned officer in the Prussian Guard reserve, coming from Berlin, by profession an engineer. Both his hands were badly wounded. When the ambulance found him he had been lying for four days abandoned in a little forester's hut. He was very grateful for everything done for him.

"'I am a social democrat,' he said, 'and have always paid my subscription regularly to our corporation's funds. We always protested strongly against war, but when it became necessary to defend Germany against the Cossacks all my colleagues stood up like one man. However, we have been vilely betrayed and deceived by our cowardly officers, hitting all the time behind our backs. We had no warm clothes and our boots are no use in the rough country here. We have gone hungry for weeks and been kept freezing through the night in the woods while they passed their time in houses drinking cognac. But just give us time to return from this war and we will remind them of all we have learned here.'"

"Neutral."

(Winnipeg Telegram.)

A very strong denunciation of Germany has just been delivered by Newell Dwight Hillis, the famous Brooklyn preacher.

"I have been asked to be neutral," he says, "and I am neutral when I say that all the water in the River Rhine could not wash the blood and shame from Germany's mailed fist."

BOILING OVER

(London Telegraph.)

An article in the Berliner Tageblatt by Werner Sombart testifies to the intense animosity against Great Britain felt by the German people.

"I am quite sure," he writes, "that the whole German people, from the last taxi-driver to the highest official, are at one in their flaming hatred towards the English. In England we feel our enemy. We are waging the war aginst England. We shall not consider the war terminated till England lies at our feet crushed and humiliated in her innermost consciousness. I believe that if England were granted an honourable peace even the quiet German people would be driven into revolution. I have never seen in the Germans so much passionate feeling as at present if the word English is uttered."

As reasons for the hatred the writer cites the "treason of our 'cousins' against us, the instinctive tendency of British policy to lying, the ostentatious say-nothing manner and boastfulness of the British press, the open display of contempt for the poor 'relation.'"

All these reasons, however, the writer describes as of secondary importance. He continues: "The main reason is that the spontaneous and elementary hatred towards England is rooted in the deepest depths of our being, there where considerations of reason do not count, where the 'irrational,' the instinct alone dominates. We hate in the English the hostile principle of our innermost and highest nature. And it is well that we are fully aware of this, because we touch with this the vital meaning of this war."

Theatrical Superstitions.

Paris, a city of theaters, is full of theatrical superstitions. Nearly every one associated with the theater has some sort of mascot. Thus, M. Fernand Samuel, manager of the Varietes, always wears an old and battered straw hat as a luck bringer at every first night. Mme. Rasimi used to wait in a cemetery on the day when she had to appear in a new part, and Mlle. Breval collects old petticoats.

Mlle. Mary Gordon always consults a clairvoyant before undertaking a new character, and Cora Laparcerie and Mme. Berthe Rady never dream of going on the stage without touching wood.

M. Henri Bernstein believes that there is some curious fetish in the name Zambo. He puts it in all his plays with different orthography. There is always a character called Zambeau, Zambault, Zambeaux, Zamban.—London Express.

SLIGHT GAINS ARE MADE BY THE ALLIES

A German Aviator Has Been Captured

THE BRITISH CAPTURE A GERMAN POSITION

Between St. Georges and Lombaertzide Our Forces Have Gained Ground--Infantry Clashes at Several Points But Enemy is Evidently Waiting for Reinforcements

(Special Cable to The Examiner.)

PARIS, January 29.—3 p.m. Official.—Slight gains for the allied forces along the sea coast near Nieuport, where infantry fighting has been in progress for the past 24 hours, were reported in the despatches from the battle front to-day.

The British took a German position between St. Georges and Lombaertzide. Elsewhere around Nieuport and the region south toward Ypres, there were infantry clashes, but Germans are evidently awaiting the arrival of reinforcements reported by aerial scouts before resuming the attack on a large scale.

The capture of a German aviator whose machine was shot down, was one of the incidents of the day's fighting near the seacoast.

Artillery duelling and infantry clashes also occurred near Ypres, Arras and Lens, as well as at Craonne.

The French artillery has silenced the German guns directed at the French north-west of Pont-A-Mousson, in the Le Pretre forest.

OTTAWA, Jan. 29.—Arrangements have been made by the Post Office Dept., whereby the ordinary rate of 2c per ounce applicable to all letters sent from Canada to the United Kingdom, will apply to the letters addressed to British and Canadian troops in France and Belgium, where the rate is generally 5 cents.

VIENNA, via Amsterdam, Jan. 29.—Austria's heavily reinforced armies, pursuing an offensive against the Russians in Galicia, are moving northward with the objective of re-capturing Lemberg and thus automatically raising the siege of Przemysl, claims a statement received to-day. One army division has crossed the Carpathians at Vyszkof, less than 80 miles south of Lemberg. Earlier Austrian plans to relieve Przemysl from the west or southwest, apparently have been abandoned.

NORTH MONAGHAN PEOPLE ARE IN NEED OF RELIEF

A Week's Sojourn in the Swamp With a Dull Axe Supplied by the Owner of the Swamp is Said to be a Poor Substitute for Actual Relief

There appears tho be a wide diversity of opinion regarding the manner in which relief is being dispensed, or not dispensed, as the case may be, in the Township of North Monaghan. Seldom a day passes by but what one or more cases of acute distress are reported either to the local relief department or to that of North Monaghan, if such an institution exists there. According to the reports of those who are vitally concerned, the Township is to-day without a relief organization to which men, women and children may appeal when destitute. Some of the officials assert that Mr. W. A. Anderson is the recognised Relief Officer, but some of those who have approached Mr. Anderson, say that they are told to go and see Mr. John McIntosh, Reeve of the Township. It is said that the latter invariably invites the workless bread winners to shoulder an axe and go to the woods, where they will have an opportunity of earning relief at the rate of seventy-five cents for every cord of wood they can cut. The experience of a party of five who accepted the invitation, is related as follows by one of the men who formed the party:

A Seven Mile Tramp.

The party comprised three men of mature years, a fifteen-year-old boy, who has worked on a farm, and a much older boy, who last week, offered himself for overseas service and was accepted. The younger boy was taken along to cook, pile wood and otherwise make himself generally useful. A large handsleigh was loaded up with provisions, consisting mainly of flour and oatmeal, and the trip to McIntosh's woods commenced. It took nearly a half a day to complete the seven-mile journey, as portion of the road was bare. Arriving at their destination, the party was directed to the swamp and incidentally an old shanty that was to be their home during the time that they remained on the job. They secured an axe from Mr. McIntosh and started to work. At the end of a week, they received five dollars for the seven cords of wood that they had cut, in addition to one load of wood and a supply of potatoes and turnips. One member of the party claims to have received one load of wood since that occasion on the understanding that it would be paid for. They claim that it would be physically impossible for a man to cut two cords of wood a day in that particular swamp, as the timber consists of small poles and is very scrubby.

However, the men do not object to going into the woods even under the conditions mentioned, but they do object to the insistence of the authorities, when it comes to men who are burdened with sickness at home. One man, who went into the woods for a few days, left at home, a wife, who was, and is to-day, critically ill from the after effects of confinement. This man was told that no distinction would be shown in his case. He would either have to go into the woods or suffer the consequences, this despite the fact that his wife was hovering between life and death.

A Few Concrete Examples.

Man with two children, one a babe of four weeks. Wife is critically ill, and according to the doctor, should be in the hospital. Husband out of work, tried to enlist, but was turned down owing to a defective eye. Is unable to procure nourishment for his wife whose life is practically dependent upon good food and careful nursing. This man went out to the woods, but had to return on account of his wife's illness.

Starvation Rations.

A man with four children. Eldest son has enlisted. For weeks this family has existed on flour and oatmeal. This is one of the men who spent a week in the woods but was unable to do the work required and make wages. Family has lived on starvation rations for weeks.

Family Is Destitute.

BAND WILL MOVE ITS HEADQUARTERS

THE ANNUAL GRANT

"Whereas, The ownership of the Council of the band instruments is little more than a nominal ownership, arranged for the protection of the band, that the request of the Militia authorities and the 57th Regiment Band be acceded to, it being understood that the change does not interfere with the existing relationship between the City Council and the band, namely the concerts in the park during the summer months, and when requests are made by the Mayor, attendance at any function, or parade, which are of benefit to the city and the people."

The foregoing resolution, which was moved by Alderman Johnston, and seconded by Alderman Weir, will be submitted to the Council for endorsation. It was adopted after considerable discussion at last night's meeting of the Property Committee. A deputation comprising Major Eastwood and Captain Hounsell, representing the 57th Regiment, and Messrs. J. H. Miller, George Chambers, and R. Shelton, of the 57th Regimental Band, presented a request for permission to transfer the band instruments, nominally owned by the city, from the City Hall to the band room of the Armouries. Major Eastwood, who acted as chief spokesman for the deputation, called to committee's attention to the desire of the militia authorities. Some years ago, when the city first agreed to make an annual grant to the band, one of the conditions was that the ownership of the instruments be vested in the city. The instruments that were originally purchased by the city have to a large extent been replaced by instruments owned by the members of the band.

Alderman McIntyre—"I understand that you want us to give up all ownership?"

Major Eastwood—"Yes."

Life of an Instrument.

Mr. Shelton, treasurer of the band, said that about seventy-five per cent. of the instruments were owned by members of the band. He put the life of an instrument at about fifteen years. Only about half a dozen of the original instruments remained. The idea of vesting the ownership of the instruments in the city was to safeguard the interests of the band as well as the city, especially in case of theft.

Mr. Miller assured the committee that the relations between the city and the band would remain the same. The band was dependent upon the city for financial support.

Alderman Edgar was in favour of referring the matter to the City Solicitor for an opinion. He thought that the public should be satisfied that the public interest would be safeguarded by the city's relinquishment of all ownership of the instruments. Possibility for misconception on the part of the public was unusually patent. He instanced this by producing a copy of a morning contemporary in which several matters respecting a committee meeting that had been held on the previous night, were alleged to have been misreported.

"The only way to dispose of that difficulty is to publish a newspaper of your own," remarked Major Eastwood.

The resolution will be sent to the Council for ratification.

A NEW HALL AT BRAYLEY'S

A meeting of the residents of North Monaghan, near Brayley's school house, was held at the school house, last night and organised for the purpose of erecting a hall in this district. Mr. George Leggott was elected Chairman, and Mr. Campbell, secretary.

After a good deal of discussion a Building Committee was appointed, consisting of the Chairman, Mr. Leggott, Mr. Waller, Sr., and Mr. Richard Payne. This committee will investigate the proposition in full—size of the building, cost of it, ways and means of raising the money, etc., and will report at a public meeting to be called through the Secretary, Mr. Campbell. Mr. T. E. Bradburn has consented to allow the hall to be erected on the old site.

The government of the whole affair will be in the hands of three trustees, to be appointed at the public meeting. Adjutant McElhinny of the Salvation Army, was present, and helped with the organization of the meeting.

A CASE OVER A $5 NOTE

Stories Vary as to How the Money Came into a Local Man's Possesssion

To find a five-dollar note, have it taken from him by a woman, and be accused of picking her pocket for it, was the position a local man found himself in yesterday afternoon, according to his story to the Examiner He was arrested and was in Court this morning with his Solicitor, Mr. G. N. Gordon, to defend him, but his accuser did not appear to swear to the charges.

According to the young lady's story as related by Chief Thompson, she had received $5 from her brother to go down town and buy him some shirts. While looking in the window, at Grafton's store, she saw the reflection of a man putting his hand into her pocket and extracting the money. She promptly took it from him.

The other side of the story was to the effect that the man found the money near where she stood. She turned and asked what he found and on being told, asked for it. Quite naturally the gentleman refused to part with the money until receiving proof of ownership. She then put her hand in his pocket and took out the $5.00.

Magistrate Dumble waited twenty minutes for the appearance of an accuser at the Police Court this morning, but none appeared.

Mr. Gordon claims he will sue the lady for the $5, on behalf of his client.

EXAMINATION OF AUTOMOBILE DRIVERS

According to instructions from the Provincial Secretary's office there has been no change in the system of licensing and examining chauffeurs from that in force during the past year.

In cases of chauffeurs who have already passed the examination, it will not be necessary that they be examined again.

A form of application for renewal of their licenses has already been forwarded to them, and it will simply be necessary that they fill in this and take an affidavit as to the correctness of the statements therein contained, and forward it with the fee of $1 to the Provincial Secretary's office, Toronto.

The local examiners of applicants for chauffeur's licenses are Messrs. T. W. Appleby and S. J. Keyes, secretary of the Automobile Association, with Chief of Police Thompson.

PATRIOTIC FUND.

The King Township Patriotic and Relief Fund was organized at an enthusiastic meeting at Kettleby. Much has already been contributed by local organization, but this meeting decided to contribute $2,500 to the Canadian Patriotic Fund, $1,500 to the Belgian Relief Fund, and $1,000 to the Red Cross Fund. The Township Council was asked to levy a one-mill rate, which will yield about $2,000, and voluntary subscriptions will make up the balance.

SCOPE OF ENQUIRY IS TO BE ENLARGED

Judge Huycke Will Be Asked to Decide Whether City Solicitor Gordon May Lawfully Sit as a Member of School Board.

MEETING LAST NIGHT

Mr. G. N. Gordon will likely find himself playing a double role in the investigation which he instituted into certain alleged affairs of the Board of Education, or, more specifically, of one of its members, Mr. W. H. Hill.

In the forthcoming investigation he will not only be interested as an investigator, but in the dual capacity of City Solicitor and member of the Board of Education, he will be investigated, if the City Council accedes to the Board's request, as presented in a resolution passed at a special meeting last night.

Mr. Gordon made certain pre-election charges against the Board of Education. At a special meeting held a short time ago he secured the passage of a resolution asking the Council to depute a judicial officer to investigate alleged insurance contracts held by Mr. W. H. Hill, a member of the Board, upon school property.

Last night Mr. Hill moved a resolution to enlarge the scope of the inquiry, to fashion it into a boomerang, as it were, and Judge Huycke will be asked to decide whether Mr. Gordon, as City Solicitor, receiving a salary, may lawfully sit as a member of the Board of Education.

Mr. Gordon Absent.

All the members were present with the exception of Mr Gordon. The meeting was brief and to the point.

At the last meeting of this Board, Mr. Hill said, a resolution was carried on the motion of Mr. Gordon, to have a sweeping investigation of a very wide character made, respecting my record as a member of this Board. So far as I am personally concerned I am prepared to have such investigation made before the County Judge, so that I may be in a position to effectually answer the charges and insinuations that have been made against me.

I also believe that it is not in the interests of this Board to have any of its members sit on it who are disqualified by law and for that reason I propose to move the following resolution:

Complete Resolution.

Moved by W. H. Hill, seconded by Col. J. W. Miller—

WHEREAS at a meeting of the Board of Education for the City of Peterborough, held on the 14th day of January, 1915, the following resolution was passed, that is to say:

"Moved by Mr Gordon,

"Seconded by Mr. Eastwood,

"That the Board of Education of the City of Peterborough, request the Council of the Corporation of the City of Peterborough, to take steps to have a judicial investigation made under Section 248 of the Municipal Act into the matter referred to in a memorandum addressed by the Mover to the Chairman of the Board of Education, dated 14th January, 1915.—Carried.

AND WHERAS it is expedient that the scope of such enquiry should be extended.

NOW THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED and it is hereby resolved that the Board of Education for the City of Peterborough respectfully request the Council of the Corporation of the City of Peterborough to pass a further resolution pursuant to Section 248 of the Municipal Act requesting His Honour Judge Huycke, Judge of the County Court of the County of Peterborough, to investigate all acts, matters and things touching or relating to the appointment of G N. Gordon, Esquire, to the office of Soliciter for the Corporation of the City of Peterborough, the duties of his office and all acts, matters and things which may have conflicted, or which might conflict with the faithful performance of the duties of his office as such Soliciter, and particularly the acts, matters and things wherein such conflict may or would arise by reason of his being a member of the said Board of Education and the following statement contained in the letter of G. N. Gordon, Esquire, to the Examiner, dated December 31st, 1914, wherein he says:

"A story that I am seeking the Solicitorship for the Board of Education which I do not want, and would not take, as the interests of the Board of Education and of the City may be in conflict and my view is that one man should not act for both."

and the right of the said G. N. Gordon, Esquire, to be a member of the Board of Education while he fills the office of Solicitor for said Corporation and to make all proper and

RUSSIANS REPORT THEY HAVE SCORED SUCCESSES

Campaign Along the Carpathian Front Results in Several Wins for the Czar's Troops---Prisoners and War Material Captured by the Victors.

(Special Cable to The Examiner.)

PETROGRAD, Jan. 29.—The Russian official statement to-day on the operations in Galicia says:

Along the Carpathian front from Dukla Pass to the railway running betwetn Stryj, Galicia and Mountkatch, Hungary, we were engaged Jan. 26 and 27 with successful results. Our success to the south west of the Dukla Pass was particularly important. Here our troops, advancing with energy, compelled the enemy on Jan. 26 to retreat in great haste, leaving behind them ammunition and other war material.

In the vicinity of Tsekhanis and Dolkhony we captured on Jan. 27 an earthwork of the enemy and we surrounded the second position close to the first one. During these operations we took a number of prisoners, officers and men. The exact number has not yet yet determined. At certain points along this front the enemy has made particular efforts to assume the offensive, but everywhere their endeavours have resulted in failure. There has been no change in the situation in Bukowania. Artillery duels and outpost skirmishes continue.

TORONTO, Jan. 29.—A broker's wire from New York to-day says it is reported that Russia has withdrawn from the war and concluded a separate peace with Germany. No credence is given the report here. Another New York wire stated that while this was certainly reported, it was believed that such a thing was impossible.

OTTAWA, Jan. 29.—The decision of the British Government that there shall be no dissolution of Parliament and no election while the stern affairs of war overshadow all, may influence the attitude of the Canadian Government in this respect. It is generally conceded that the action of the Mother of Parliaments usually establishes a precedent for her Dominions and it is thought the Dominion Government may thus decide to call off the talked of elections.

In Event Of Attack

A Deputation Might be Dispatched to Ottawa—Mr. Burnham's Suggestion

When asked for further details respecting the rumour of mobilization of troops in Peterborough, Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., said that he had received from the Department, in reply to his requests for further information, further assurance that there was no change and none contemplated. "The excitement," said Mr. Burnham, "in this respect would be considerably abated if all the people realized that mobilization plans in time of war must be kept absolutely secret. One of the features of the general enquiry on the part of the department is not to make it understood what is going to happen and where. If mobiligation was merely a matter of buying lumber, potatoes, there would be no great objection to the department revealing its plans, but to treat mobilization in the same way is to invite a possible enemy and to advertise with certainty an excursion to the various centres of mobilization, where the local troops would be fired upon from places of which the public would have due notice. As a consequence the department makes it clear that it will not reveal its plans to anybody. The department has taken every means to inform itself of local conditions in Canada, in other words making the usual military map, but it does not follow that the troops are going everywhere that the military agents make enquiries. In Peterborough we are anxious to do the best we can for the local interests, and all parties seem to be working to that end, but the assumption that military secrets are not secrets at all, and can be ripped up or changed with impunity, is possibly going too far. This matter cannot be passed by any spirit of enterprise, it is a military not a commercial matter. If it were not, in the case of an attack by the enemy we might form ourselves into a deputation to go to Ottawa to ask them to attack Belleville or Lindsay instead. So far the Militia Department has succeeded in communicating many more pleasant assurances than pieces of rare information.

Scout News

All scouts are requested to meet at the post office to-night at 7.15 p.m. sharp.

There will be no meeting at the Labour Hall this week, as Mr. Sedgwick has offered to take them for a sleigh ride on Friday, Jan. 27. All boys are asked to be present on time at 7.15 p.m. sharp.

Scouts are not to wear their uniforms to-night, but must not forget to be there.

THE WEATHER

BE LOYAL TO YOUR OWN COMMUNITY

There are many citizens who boast of their loyalty to Peterborough, yet they send to Toronto and other outside cities for decorators to design the interior of their homes—they buy their furs and other clothing from Toronto tailors—and allow their wives to go periodically out of Peterborough for their hats and gowns.

Why don't they give Peterborough dealers a first chance? Practically everything sold in Peterborough is no better in Toronto; and it is narrow-mindedness not to give the home dealer a chance to prove this fact.

The farsighted man realizes that it is to his benefit to patronize Peterborough enterprises where ever possible. The measure of his own prosperity and that of his children is solely dependent on the prosperity of the community in which he lives.

Be loyal to your own community.

PUNICA FIDES.

We are informed that the Germans have given official assurance to the United States that foodstuffs imported into Germany for the uses of the civil population will not be seized for military purposes. This "official assurance" is only "a scrap of paper." The German diplomatic and war cabal parties have developed and applied the art of lying so systematically and diabolically, that the Ananias of the Apostolic story has been superseded as a standard of scientific lying—for profit—by German diplomats and German war officers, whose slightest efforts outclass the great original liar. Neither the United States, nor any other country can have the slightest faith in a German pledge. The "official assurance" that Germany will not seise foodstuffs is the assurance of a famished wolf to a shepherd that he will not eat sheep left outside the fold. What one is compelled to admire about the German war people, is their magnificent obstinacy in the campaign of deceit and crookedness. They have been deceiving and lying since, and before the war began, and they still keep up the game. They may succeed in deceiving their own people; they are more successful in feeding them with lies than with food. It is no surprise that the national congratulations on the Kaiser's birthday were confined to Austria-Hungary, Turkey—and the United States government, which has not yet mustered courage to protest against German violations of every article of the international decalogue of civilization and morality.

NO FEAR OF INVASION.

A list has been published of the loss of shipping by Germany since the war began. Germany has lost forty-one warships of a total tonnage of 178,000, with a loss of nearly 5,000 men. And that is not all. Germany's commercial shipping has been practically swept from the seas. There have also been losses to British shipping, naval and commercial, but they are absolutely much less, and in comparison with the respective numbers, infinitely less. With Germany's immense naval losses and with the disaster of last Sunday in the North Sea, they make beautifully less the danger of invasion of Great Britain; and even the probability of raids. When the war broke out Germany was loud in boast of its ability to land an army on British shores. That ability, if it ever existed, has been made non-existent. With Germany's navy securely bottled and greatly reduced in numbers and efficiency; with her commercial and transport shipping virtually a minus quantity, Germany will find it impossible to even contemplate a dream of British invasion. An army of 200,000 Germans landed in England would be easily disposed of, and the possibility of it getting there is not to be thought of. The strength of the German marine is a matter of record, and it would take every vessel in the merchant marine of Germany, including those tied up rotting in foreign ports, to transport at one time, an army of 200,000, not to speak of an armed escort, which is the last thing Germany would risk, after her experience of last Sunday. Whatever troubles we may look for there is no danger of a German invasion of Great Britain. Nor is there any serious or considerable danger of an invasion of Canada by German sympathisers in the United States. If such a thing were attempted the invading army would, in the present temper of the mass of the United States people, be prevented from making such an attempt. The sympathizers with Britain and the Allies among the United States population are easily ten or twenty to one of the sympathizers with Germany. Therefore, with an efficient Home Guard we may sleep as soundly 'o nights as our condition of conscience will permit.

BULLET.

A million dollars in relation to its numerical units is only humanly comprehensible in abstract form of definition; so that we are lost when we come to attempt a realization of the immense cost of the present war where hundreds and thousands of millions are involved. The London Financier, asserts that the combined cost to the belligerents, now wasting money and human life, is between 27 million or 30 million dollars per day. This means an aggregate for the past six months of the war of 4,260 millions of dollars. It reports that the financing of the war already arranged, will carry on the conflict till about the middle of March. Of the 5,300 millions of loans placed by the warring nations, 3,315 millions have been placed on account of the Allies, and 1,975 millions on account of Germany and Austria. This brings to mind Lloyd George's statement of the importance of the "silver bullet" as a factor in war-waging. When we come to that we shall see that Great Britain has an immense superiority in this regard. When she wished to raise a loan of 1,750 millions, in three days, it was subscribed twice over; while Germany, to give effect to a smaller loan, was compelled to seize the bank deposits of private citizens. Further evidence of the financial superiority and capacity of Great Britain over Germany, is found in the fact that Great Britain with the stupendous total of overseas investments of 20,000 millions, is far in advance of Germany with a total of 5,000 million of outside investments. Great Britain's fourfold larger investments are with countries outside the war, with their commercial prosperity comparatively little affected. A large part of Germany's outside investments are with Turkey—a "rotten" security, war or no war—and with Russia, very tragely affected by the war. It is to be seen that the Allies are in the matter of finance, infinitely better equipped than Austria and Germany to prosecute a prolonged and exhausting war. Great Britain's financial resources are standing the strain without undue strain. She is not only financing her own share of the burden, but assisting her allies very materially, and still has money for what may be regarded as speculative investment. Roumania is not yet in the ring, but on the fair chance that her forces may soon join the Allies, Great Britain has financed a loan of 25 millions to Roumania with as much nonchalance as a farmer would "back" his neighbour's note for $50. This war promises to be a war of endurance; a wearing-down war, and the Allies are better fitted to conduct such a campaign than the enemy, not only in the all-important matters of money and food supplies, but in the matter of men and munitions of war. The end may come slowly and still be far away, but it splendidly promises to be an end of victory for the Allies, and the cause of right, of humanity and of human betterment.

A NAVAL DEADLOCK.

An attack by the British upon Wilhelmshaven or any other German base elaborately and completely protected by mines, is of course out of the question. It would be an act of self-destruction for the attacking fleet as every German naval officer knows.

In short, there is a naval deadlock, and it seems likely that there will be no test of sea power to the end of the war. The situation gives England the great military advantage of command of the sea and the Atlantic passage, although her battleship fleet remains at anchor at its bases.—New York Sun.

THE CHANNEL TUNNEL.

One of the effects of the war is to revive the project for the construction of the tunnel under the English Channel. In the first few weeks following the outbreak of the war, those in England opposed to the building of the tunnel pointed out that the Germans would have secured an entrance to it had it been in existence, and by means of it would have invaded England. Since that time the Germans have been driven back, and now it is the turn of those in favour of the project to advocate its construction. They point out that the tunnel could be used for the conveying of troops without the risk of submarine attacks. However, the probabilities are that it will be many years before the project is seriously entertained.

The tunnel project is an old one, having been agitated off and on for over one hundred years. A Frenchman named Mathieu proposed to Napoleon that he should construct a road under the Straits of Dover. Since the introduction of railways, both French and English engineers have agitated for a tube under the bed of the sea. In 1872 the English Channel Tunnel Company was formed, and actual boring operations commenced, but ten years later the British Government compelled the suspension of the work, largely for military reasons. In 1904 the Paris Chamber of Commerce passed a resolution favouring the scheme, and now a former member of the French Senate has again revived the project. The English Channel is only twenty-one miles wide between Dover and Calais. Its general depth is about two hundred feet, but there are hollows where the depth is considerably greater. The rock formation underlying the sea is largely chalk.—Journal of Commerce.

THE RELATION OF GERMAN HISTORY TO GERMAN CULTURE

Some of the discussions that have grown out of the war have recalled a book published thirty-five years ago, written by the Rev. Sabine Baring-Gould, who made many and valuable contributions to literature in mediaeval dore, in theology, and in fiction. His work that the war has brought down from the library shelf bears the title, "Germany Past and Present." Every page is interesting, but particularly those pages which make up a striking chapter on "Culture," which is especially instructive and highly interesting at this time.

The contention of Mr. Baring-Gould is that German culture, or rather the want of real culture, is the result of German history. In most countries of Western Europe civilization has made on the whole steady progress, although at times progress may have been slow. Germany has been an exception to this rule, because, during the Thirty Years' War, Germany was the battlefield of Europe. The country was depopulated and impoverished, and trade practically disappeared. "Science," writes Mr. Baring-Gould, "and the arts had fled the realm. In place of learning, pedantry dragged on a wretched existence; and, when a desire came for works of art, Germany was fain to import a style from France."

The Peace of Westphalia brought relief, but the two centuries that had elapsed when our author wrote, were not sufficient time, he claims, for the establishing of a new civilization. "In two hundred years the fruit cannot be so mature as that which has ripened through seven hundred."

The evil influences of German history did not end with the Peace of Westphalia, for throughout the eighteenth and well into the nineteenth century Germany was the theatre of wars, big and little—wars with foreign foes, and wars between the petty states into which the country was split up; and it was not until 1848 that people obtained any considerable measure of political freedom. Then came the wars which consolidated the German states into the German Empire. It is, therefore, only since 1871 that the average German has had the opportunity of acquiring or developing a taste for culture, and even this has been curtailed and interfered with by the militarism that Prussia has fastened upon the entire German people.

Commenting upon this exposition of German history and German culture, the Irish Times writes: "Nevertheless the thoroughness of the educational and military systems in Germany has unquestionably caused a good many people to form an altogether false estimate of German progress in science and art. Only now under the fierce searchlight of war are we beginning to find out the flimsiness of the German's reputations in this respect. In the book already quoted Mr. Baring-Gould remarked that 'in science' they have proved themselves masters of destructive criticism; they have done little as yet in the more difficult work of construction.' Six months ago most of us would have been inclined to say that the last thirty years had removed all justification for this reproach.

But a correspondence that has been going on suggests that to a large extent, it still holds good. Professor Sayce, the famous Egyptologist, began it with a slashing exposure of German pretentions, literary, scientific, and artistic. Referring to his own department of study, he said: 'The German can labouriously count syllables and words and pile up volumes of indices; he can appropriate other men's discoveries in the interests of 'culture' but beyond this, as I have been seeking to show for years in the domain of Oriental archaeology, we get from him only theories which take no regard of facts, though, as coming from Germany, we are told they must be regarded as infallible.'

Professor Turner, of Oxford, attempted to challenge this sweeping generalization, and pointed to the names of Kepler and Euler and Koch, only to be reminded by another correspondent that Euler was a Swiss, and to be told by Sir E. Ray Lankester that no real comparison could be made between an industrious experimenter of moderate capacity like Koch and an 'innovating genius' like Pasteur.

As to scholarship, the late Mr. Ingram Bywater told Sir Ray Lankester that the Germans' reputation for originality had little real foundation, and was largely due 'to their self assertive methods and the want of fairness and good taste in the text-books with which many of them inundate the academic world.'

We dare say that patriotic feeling, has, to some extent, affected the views of our scholars and scientists and that Germans are now getting rather less, as they formerly got considerable more, than their deserts. But it will certainly be a good thing if the war destroys for ever the slavish and indiscriminate admiration for everything German which formerly obtained in some academic and political coteries."—Montreal Standard.

REMARKABLE INSECTS.

Faculty of Smell Is the Most Highly Developed.

The most valuable faculty possessed by insects is their sense of smell. Most insects hear very poorly, and ants in particular are absolutely deaf. With all their batteries of eyes bulging in every direction these creatures do not seem to enjoy very good eyesight. Some of the flying insects cannot see well enough to avoid obstacles which to them should look as big as a barn.

But when it comes to the sense of smell the insect world is far ahead of any animal. Fabre, the great French entomologist, confined some female butterflies in a steel cage far from the natural haunts of the insects. To his surprise males of the species came from miles away and lit on the screen.

He then confined the females in hermetically-sealed jars and placed them near places frequented by the males. Not one paid any attention, though the females were visible through the glass.

To make sure that the sense of smell was the guiding force, Prof. Fabre brought out some bits of paper and twigs on which the females had rested. Males soon appeared, and, ignoring the females in their glass jars, circled about the twigs and paper.

If a strange ant of the same species is placed in an ant-hill he is violently ejected. Every insect he meets recognizes him instantly as an intruder and helps in the ejection.

If a small mouse dies in a field certain undertaker insects known as sylphs and necrophers will journey from distances of more than a mile to lay eggs in the body.

The house-fly acts solely on the sense of smell. In his flying about he is perpetually trying to head in the direction of each breath of food odor he meets, and dodges and turns with each eddy of air until he locates the source of the smell.

Mosquitoes find you in the dark rather more easily than in the day. They smell their victims outside the house. Their sense of smell leads them to windows, doors, or chimneys. In they go, and soon you hear their song about your ears.

A Bed of Bayonets.

A most remarkable feat was performed before the rajah of Manipur by a Mussulman, one of a company of acrobats, who reclined at full length upon the points of seven bayonets fixed in the orthodox method in as many muskets. Four of the performer's assistants lifted him up on to his bed of spikes, where he carefully adjusted himself and distributed his weight so that the bayonet points did not pierce his flesh. The back of his head rested on one point, his shoulder blades on two others, his elbows on two more, while the hollows behind his knees engaged the remaining two. The acrobat declared after it was all over that he had felt as comfortable as if lying on a bed.

Huge Food Shortage.

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—A shortage of 76,000 tons of food for the relief of Belgian refugees must be made up within the next three months by the commission for relief in Belgium or many people will perish, Vice-Chairman Bates announced yesterday to relief committees throughout the U. S. The commission here was apprised of the inadequacy of the food supply by a cable message from London.

THE "TURCOS"?

French Colonial Troops Are Full Blooded Arabs Officered by Whites.

The announcement that, in an heroic charge, a battalion o' Turcos was almost wiped out, seems to have puzzled not a few people, who apparently think they are an Oriental corps which in some mysterious way has been mobilized to assist the allies. The confusion arises from the fact that "Turcos" is a slang name for the Tirailleurs, one of the best of the French colonial forces. The Tirailleurs, indeed, are a corps of sharpshooters, who have been practically trained from boyhood to fight. The greater proportion of the Turcos are Arabs of pure blood, though the officers and non-commissioned officers are mostly French. Excluding the French element, all the Turcos are Mohammedan, and death has no terrors for them. To die in war is for them to enter the Mussulman Paradise.

In years gone by they fought amongst themselves, tribe against tribe, and at one time used their swords against the French. Ultimately they became French subjects, and are now only too glad to have a go at the enemies of France. The Turcos are born fighters, possessing extraordinary powers of endurance, for they have been brought up to "rough it" from infancy. Furthermore, as Mr. C. W. Randle points out, they are accustomed to living on next to nothing.

The Turco's staple diet is boiled semolina, seasoned with some simple sauce and sometimes eaten with vegetables. A little mutton or goat-flesh is occasionally added, but the semolina is the mainstay. Few soldiers carry such a weight on their shoulders as the Turcos. Their knapsacks weigh from some 80 to 100 pounds, for, in addition to his own kit, each man carries some portion of the camp equipment. Then there is, of course, the rifle.

With their black, straight hair, surmounted by a red fez, and their black beards, and wearing a sort of blouse or loose tunic with baggy Moorish trousers, strong boots of a greyish leather, and cloth ankle-bands, they make one of the most picturesque corps at present engaged in the war.

A Tug of War.

The well-dressed, portly man stood for several moments watching the brawny drayman who was laboriously tugging at a large, heavy laden box, which seemed almost as wide as the doorway through which he was trying to move it. Presently the kindly disposed onlooker approached the perspiring drayman and said with a patronizing air: "Like to have a lift?"

"Bet yer life," the other replied, and for the next two minutes the two men on opposite sides of the box worked, lifted, puffed and wheezed, but the box stuck fast. They went at it again, but it did not move an inch. Finally the portly man straightened up and said between puffs, "I don't believe we can get it in there."

Draining Doughnuts.

A pair of long wooden knitting needles are most excellent for draining doughnuts. As the doughnuts are fried slip them on a needle, and when it is full rest it on the top of a pan to cool. The doughnuts do not crunch, and the lard drains off.

Morris and His Furniture.

In "William Morris—His Work and Influence" is retold how the two friends, Burne-Jones and Morris, setting out to keep house together in the new historic rooms, 17 Red Lion square, found themselves confronted with the unendurable ugliness and vulgarity of mid-Victorian furniture. Says Mr. Clutton-Brock:

"Their rooms were to be furnished, and Morris could not find in any shop a single new table or chair that he could endure. This was not mere fastidiousness. To him vulgarity in furniture was, like vulgarity of manners, the expression of a wrong state of mind, and if his own furniture had been vulgar he would have felt as responsible for it as for his own manners. Therefore he designed furniture to please himself, making drawings that were carried out by a carpenter. Thus simply and naturally he began his business of 'poetic upholsterer.' • • • From the first he was not only an artist, but one who tried to make the world what he wished it to be and, beginning with armchairs, ended with society."

The Noblest Arms.

We may talk what we please of lilies, and lions rampant, and spread eagles, in fields d'or or d'argent, but if heraldry were guided by reason a plow in a field of arable would be the most noble and ancient arms.—Abraham Cowley.

BELGIAN WOMEN ARE PREPARING FOR A VICTORY

Spirit of the Women is Invincible —Dying of Hunger, Cold and Friendless, They Sneer at Germans

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—Bereft of much they held dear, hungry, cold and helpless, Belgian women even now are weaving bits of bunting and secreting Belgian flags to celebrate the day of ultimate victory over Germany, according to a letter received here yesterday by Father Gaston Nys, secretary of the Belgian Relief Bureau, from his brother. The latter, until the outbreak of the war a wealthy, landowner, is at Hamme, a suburb of Antwerp.

"The spirit of the women is invincible," he writes. "Dying of hunger, chilled to the marrow, without their husbands, their fathers, their son, they sneer at these blockheads who drink so constantly and so well, and keep sacred the statues and pictures of our King against the coming victory.

"There are no German soldiers here regularly, most of them being stationed at St. Nicholas, four miles away. Day after day a procession of men and women with babies and little children wends its way through the snow and icy slush to St. Nicholas, to beg for the little allotment of black bread and soup. Since the Americans have sent us food we are better off, but before it was terrible. Even now if there is any place in Belgium which is worst off, then God pity the people!

"Yet all is so sad. These Germans might be good fellows at home. All of their marks and pfennigs go to the wine-shops, and they alone do a good business. Always day and night in St. Nicholas, and here, too, when the casual automobile loads of soldiers come, the saloons are filled. They are enormous drinkers, drinking six, seven big glasses of beer, one after the other, and singing with great satisfaction.

"A few weeks ago I was in a saloon in St. Nicholas, in which there were many German troopers around the table. At the head, waving a stein, ... [illegible] ... man, with a fine looking face, who sang as I never heard a man sing before. He gesticulated; he scowled; he was an actor, truly—and he was, for a drunken trooper who fell against me told me his name. Until the war thousands flocked to hear him sing in grand opera in Berlin. This night he roared to half drunken troopers, who cried and rapped their steins on the good table.

"We will make you one of us," the drunken trooper told me.

"Yah," I said. "We will cut you into twenty-two parts."

The troper, very drunk, burst into crying and had to be consoled by his companions, this, then, is the war we have here.

"After Christmas it was funny to see the German soldiers, smoking new pipes the Kaiser sent to every one of them and lighting them with patented lights, which he also sent him. My opera singer friend with whom I became acquainted, presented me with his presents, saying, 'We have to love our foes, too, you know.'

"I was lately to Brussels. There I found the spirit of the people wonderful, and the windows filled with pictures of the good King Albert; and also I found this doggerel everywhere:—

"The French are to be victorious,
The English will be glorious,
The Belgians will reap honour,
And the Russians will surely conquer.
The Austrians will get the skin,
The Turks will get the bones,
And, so nothing may be wasted,
The Germans will get the scum."

Col. Williams Better.

OTTAWA, Jan. 29.—Two messages have been received at the Militia Department concerning the condition of Col. Victor Williams at Salisbury. One states that he is slightly better and the other that he is about to report for duty. The nature of his illness is not known, the original statement that he was suffering from meningitis having been corrected, but without further information.

Not Possible This Year.

VICTORIA, B.C., Jan. 29.—The report of the royal commission on agriculture secured at a cost of twenty-five thousand dollars has been laid before the Legislature. The commissioners recommend the Government to advance money to settlers on the land, but the Premier explained it will be impossible to give effect to the recommendations this year.

"Arethusa" which Torpedoed the "Blucher" — The "Arethusa" which was also in the Heligoland fight at the close of the North Sea action, is said to have torpedoed the German cruiser "Blucher" with effect.

Huge Struggle North of Carpathians in Initial Stages

Severe Blow is Administered to the Austrians Near Yaslisk Pass—Russian Advance in East Prussia Imperils Gen. Francois' Army

PETROGRAD, Jan. 29.—Evidently the opening stage of the new campaign, which has been forced on the German staff by the Hungarian crisis, will be a great battle north of the Carpathians. They have spread very large forces across eighty miles of front, covering the outlets from the passes eastward of Buklat. They have developed some advance during the past three days, but this causes no anxiety. It is a process which the Russians have induced them to go through twice already, when they were defeated in the same region. The best results have always been won hitherto in the Carpathians by drawing the enemy forward from the densest woods to the open country sloping towards Galicia. This battle must greatly influence the entire southern campaign, for as to Serbia and Transylvania, it is an infinitely more serious matter than the constant collisions in the centre of Poland, which, for the time being, are the least important factors in all the Russians' battle line.

The initial stage of the battle has already brought the Russians a valuable success. The Austrians, who had gathered strong forces near the outlet of Yaslisk Pass, were suddenly subjected to a Russian counter-attack and suffered heavy losses. Their fighting begins to reveal the same fatal defect that ruined them in the early period of the Galician campaign. They enter the battle with good discipline and up to a point fight stubbornly, but when the battle is prolonged into the third or fourth day, an entire division suddenly throws up the sponge and the idea of surrender becomes infectious. The position of three Bavarian corps in Hungary has now been definitely established. One is congregating on the western border of Transylvania and two others in the region south of Temesitar, where they might turn upon Roumania or Serbia, according to the requirements of the situation. There are also six Austro-Hungarian corps in this region.

The scope of Russian operations in the Mazurian Lakes region, in East Prussia, is steadily growing. The battle front of fifty miles is being pressed westward toward strategic railway points, possession of which will remove any possibility of attack on Poland from the north and will imperil the position of Gen. von Francois' army between Mlawa and Soldau.

The new Russian army in northern Poland, with its left flank on the Vistula, has met no decided resistance, and is now but a short distance from the frontier, with the Germans retreating before it.

In Southern Poland the result of the battle of the last two days is still in doubt. The main German effort is now directed there against the Russians northeast of Cracow, to stop the advance on that stronghold and aid the Austrians in their struggle to regain passes in the Carpathians.

PREDICTS ITALY WILL JOIN ALLIES WITHIN TWO MONTHS

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—That Italy will enter the war within the next two months is the prediction of the Rev. Dominick A. Cassetta, a curate of Trinity Parish, who has just returned from Italy after being detained there five months for military service. Mr. Cassetta was in Italy at the opening of the war and, despite efforts of the Trinity clergy to effect his release, was unable to get away until now.

Although a resident of this country since boyhood and a citizen for many years, Mr. Cassetta was born in Italy, and on that ground was held by the government. His present work is among the Italians of the Bowery, who are reached by St. Augustine's Chapel.

According to Mr. Cassetta, conditions indicate that Italy will be in the war by early spring. He stated yesterday that war enthusiasm was running high throughout the country, although he admitted that the recent earthquake may modify this to a great extent.

"The socialists in Northern Italy are frantic to get into the fight," the curate said. "The general feeling throughout the country is that war for Italy is inevitable, and many feel that Italy cannot put off her declaration for more than a few weeks. The general impression is, however, that by early spring Italy will be enlisted with the Allies. There is not the slightest doubt which side she will take in the combat."

Mr. Cassetta described conditions in Italy as being practically those of war times.

"By this time I have no doubt that every man between the ages of eighteen and thirty-nine is in the field ready for military service," he said. "When I left the country all those up to thirty-five years of age had been commandeered and all Italian born men had been detained. I expected my class to be put into military camps at any moment, in which case it would have been impossible for me to leave without deserting the army. As it was, I was simply detained, not enlisted."

The curate told how he finally succeeded in getting out of the country. He had been staying with his wife and child at Florence. From there they went by rail to Milan and from there to Stresa, on the southern end of Lake Maggiore, conecting Italy and Switzerland. Steamboats ply on this lake between Stresa and Locarno, in Switzerland.

In order not to excite suspicion, Mr. Cassetta sent his baggage ahead into Switzerland with an American family. He then bought a return trip ticket for himself and family and packed his hand baggage to resemble what would be taken on a two days' picnic party for a family of three. Although the employees of the railroads and steamboats spoke only Italian, Mr. Cassetta himself spoke English solely until well out of Italy, professing an ignorance of Italian. In every possible way he assumed the attitude of an American traveller.

After landing at Locarno Mr. Cassetta went by rail to Geneva and from there to Paris, where they arrived on Christmas morning. This part of the trip was made without difficulty.

Pegoud Achieves Victory In Two Aerial Adventures

Brilliant Exploits of Daring French Aviator Who Was First Man to Loop the Loop

PARIS, Jan. 28.— The heroism of the French aviators will make a thrilling chapter of adventure. Pegoud, who was the first to loop the loop, has lost none of his audacity. One of his latest adventures was rewarded with great success.

Provided with a new machine, which he wished to try, he loaded it with a dozen bombs and set off for the enemy's lines. In previous reconnaissances he had made note of German ammunition stores assembled on a certain spot of ground. It was to this spot that he steered his way, flying very high and taking advantage of a mist so that he should not be observed.

When he was near his goal he hovered above the place, and, descending lower, dropped nine of the bombs. The effect was prodigious. Explosion after explosion rent the air so that his machine was shaken by the vibration waves.

His latest achievement was directed a few days ago against a captive airship, from which the fire of German batteries was directed. Flying at a great height and making a wider detour behind a veil of clouds, Pegoud then flew straight at the sausage-shaped machine. He was seen at once, and shots were fired at him wildly. He heard the shouts of the soldiers and hoarse commands. Little figures were running about like ants down there, and the balloon was hastily drawn earthward, but it was too late.

Pegoud swooped in magnificent volplanes. When he was less than 50 yards above the airship he flung his bomb. A dull explosion followed, making a gale of air currents, in which the French aeroplane rocked with quivering planes. The ball of gas was rent and the German airship collapsed to earth.

TO MAKE LAST ATTACK.

London Times' Writer Predicts Grand German Offensive.

LONDON, Jan. 29.—Col. Repington, the Times' military expert, says this morning:

"What Britain has to expect is that Germany may make a last violent effort in the west before the allied armies are all assembled, before the winter season ends in the east and before the states which contemplate abandoning neutrality place Germany at a manifest disadvantage.

"Already we hear of the Landsturm in front of the German trenches in Flanders, training battalions full of half-fledged soldiers behind them and the withdrawal for a period of repose of some of the active army corps. On our part we must be prepared to meet the replacement of first line German troops in the trenches by newer levies, and assemble at one or more points a great mass of active army corps.

"From the last great attempt to break through between Arras and the Oise it is not an unlikely front for such an operation, but wherever it comes we must be ready for it.

"February and March are the most likely months for the attempt. We shall not be so foolish as to goad this or that commander into a premature offensive. We can bide our hour in the knowledge that the commanders of the allies, in the west fully realize what Germany may be about and are quite prepared for her.

"We shall all welcome a German advance, and if no such advance takes place, then we shall act at our own time, all the allies together, so that whether we have already finally broken the German offensive, or one more convulsive effort on Germanys' part is still to be expected, we can make our minds easy concerning the result."

An Unconventional Duke.

Kew Parish church had among former worshipers the first Duke of Cambridge, a strong but unconventional churchman, who made audible comments while the service was in progress. To the exhortation, "Let us pray," he would reply, "By all means," and during a dry summer he added to the "Amen" after the prayer for rain, "But we shan't get it till the wind changes." On hearing the words, "For we brought nothing into the world, neither may we carry anything out," he would ejaculate, "True, true; too many calls upon us for that."—London Globe.

More Trouble In Mexico

Special to The Examiner.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Jan. 29. — There was some alarm to-day when it was officially reported that Carranza and his forces had again occupied Mexico City, and taken over the Government, after serious fighting, in which, according to the report, Villa has been wounded. There is again an agitation for interference by the United States to clean things up in Mexico. The positive announcement that there will be no change in the administration policy towards the Mexican situation as a result of the latest developments in Mexico City was made by secretary Bryan at the close of today's cabinet session.

COMBING WON'T RID HAIR OF DANDRUFF

The Easiest and Best Way is to Dissolve It

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this to-night, and by morning most if not all of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy, every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

If you want to preserve your hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for nothing destroys the hair more quickly. It not only starves the hair and makes it fall out, but it makes it stringy, straggly, dull, dry, brittle and lifeless, and everyone notices it. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.

Bandits Get $5,000.

HOUSTON, Texas, Jan. 29.—Trailing a youthful bandit who yesterday afternoon walked into the Guarantee State Bank, covered the cashier and bookkeeper with a revolver and forced them into a vault, then seized between $5,000 and $6,000 in currency and silver and fled, two detectives fifteen minutes later engaged three bandits in a hard battle in a store on the San Felipe road, about a mile from the robbed bank. Three bandits were wounded.

A Fire On Charlotte St.

Cowan Studio Visited by a Blaze Which Attracted a Crowd

What at first promised to be a serious fire occurred at the Cowan Studio, Charlotte Street, on Wednesday evening, a few minutes after the adjournment of the Fire, Water and Light committee meeting.

Some electrical apparatus in the basement, it is supposed, got overheated and set fire to some supplies, shelves and partitions in the cellar. Dense volumes of smoke poured out of the windows and doors of the building and surrounding premises and attracted a great crowd of people.

The alarm was sent in from the Routley grocery by telephone at 6.10 p.m. Two lines of hose were laid, one at the front of the building and one by the laneway to the rear. The firemen succeeded in confining the flames to the part of the building where it started consequently the actual damage by fire will be very slight. It is expected, however, there may be considerable damage to the stock of groceries in Mr. Routley's store and also to the apartments upstairs. There was no damage by water.

Ald. Duffus, the new chairman of the Fire, Water and Light committee, was at the scene of the fire as soon as the firemen and was pleased with the work of the brigade.

An accident happened which delayed the operations for a short time. One of the lines of hose leading from a hydrant at the Customs House was run over by a street car.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

BRITISH TROOPS LIVE UP TO REPUTATION AT GIVENCHY

Repeated Assaults of Germans on Positions Finally Force British to Retire on Second Line But on Counter-Offensive Entire Area is Retaken

LONDON, Jan. 29.—Several of the newspapers this morning publish from their correspondents in France additional accounts of the recent heavy fighting in which the British took part.

The Times correspondent: Details of the fighting near La Bassee clearly show that the action is the most important fought on the northern battle-line in many weeks.

The objective of the German attack was the little village of Givenchy, which has been held by the British troops since the beginning of the year. Givenchy is only four kilometres from La Bassee, which is in the hands of the enemy.

From a military point of view, the importance of the small agricultural and mining village lies in the fact that it stands on rising ground in a wide, marshy plain, which commands the high road from La Bassee to Bethune and which is skirted both by the railway and the canal.

The attack developed very suddenly. In the morning dense masses of the men emerged from the trenches and charged our positions. The rifles and machine guns opened fire from our trenches and the houses of the village. Heavy loss was inflicted upon the enemy, and they were repulsed again and again, but each time they were reinforced and returned to the charge.

For nearly three hours the issue hung in the balance, until the weight of overwhelming numbers began to tell in favor of the enemy. Our fire could no longer stay them, and they came right up to our trenches, throwing hand grenades with considerable effect as they came.

Then with a final rush with the bayonet the trenches were won. Our men retired in good order upon the village and upon the second line of trenches.

The enemy, flushed with success, pressed onward, with the object of capturing Givenchy. The 56th Prussian infantry and a body of the Seventh Pioneers actually penetrated into the village streets. A furious fusillade opened then from the houses, and they broke and fled.

The British artillery near Festubert, on the north, and the French artillery, on the south, now came into action. Their shrapnel fire made the road back to La Bassee practically impassable. The German supports could not reach them, and many fell in running the gauntlet, while some succeeded in reaching the trench they had captured at so great a cost.

At one o'clock in the afternoon the British counter-attack began to develop. One unit was directed to retake the lost trench, and, aided by the French on their right, they did it manfully and well, charging often knee deep in water and mud. By nightfall the lost positions had been regained.

The Chronicle correspondent says: The initial engagement in the La Bassee region was but a prelude to the severe engagement still in progress on Wednesday. This revival of desperate fighting synchronizes with the spell of very cold but dry weather, which made the ground firmer every day this week, lending increased mobility to both infantry and artillery, and filling the men with more of the exhilaration of hand-to-hand fighting. Nevertheless, the country side is still soft enough to make the Germans in their attack show a decided preference for the roads, and this explains how on the main thoroughfare between Bethune and La Bassee such a grim massacre of the enemy took place.

MAINTENANCE OF HOUSE OF REFUGE FOR 1914 COST $5,885.15

Cost Per Week Was $2.72 for Each Inmate—Average Number of Inmates 38—Satisfactory Statement for the Past Year.

FINANCIAL SHOWING

The annual report of the Board of Management of the House of Refuge was presented to the County Council yesterday afternoon by Reeve McKee, of Smith, chairman of the committee last year. The report was as follows:

In making the statutory visits and inspections, we are pleased to state that we found everything in a satisfactory condition. Some complaints were made and following the order in Council an investigation took place, the results in so far as we are concerned you will find in a special minute now filled and ready for the next printed minutes. The same may be read to you if desired.

Very little permanent improvements were added to the institution other than what I laid before you at the last session.

In all, seven of the old people have passed away and in most cases old age was the direct cause.

I herewith attach a statement of the receipts and expenditures; also a computation showing the average weekly cost of inmates and staff for maintenance. You will notice the average cost a trifle lower than last year, and we feel satisfied the ratepayers at large will understand that each Board from year to year is doing its best to economize, consistent with the providing of proper comforts for the old people.

CONFERENCE ON NAVAL SITUATION

Representatives of Allies Meet in London

LONDON, Jan. 29.— Victor Augagneur, the French Minister of Marine, who arrived in London last Tuesday, has now returned to Paris. While in this city he had conferences with Winston Spencer Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty ,and Admiral Lord Fisher, First Sea Lord, regarding the employment of the naval forces of France and England.

While in London the French Minister saw also King George, Premier Asquith, Viscount Haldane, Lord High Chancellor; Foreign Secretary Grey, War Secretary Kitchener, and former Premier Balfour. He inspected the Portsmouth dockyard and arsenal, and went on board one of the newest British warships.

ISSUE IS INCREASED.

France Adds $200,000,000 to Limit of Treasury Bonds.

PARIS, Jan. 29.—The Chamber of Deputies adopted yesterday a bill increasing by 1,000,000,000 francs ($200,000,000), the issue of treasury bonds which limits the amount to 2,500,000,000 ($700,000,000). It also provides for the issuance of short time treasury bonds.

The Minister of Finance, M. Ribot, declared before the adoption of the bill: "After six months of war the expenditures of France have amounted to only 3,900,000,000 francs ($780,000,000) of the amount originally appropriated. If before the war we had said that after six months hostilities we would have been so far from exhausting the sum at our disposal it would have been received with smiles of skepticism. We have confidence in the unlimited resources of the country, and in its will to continue the struggle to the end."

War Over By May of This Year

Financiers Reported to Be Very Optimistic

MONTREAL, Jan. 29. — A London cable to The Gazette says:

In leading financial circles here the prediction is made than the war will end much sooner than is commonly believed, owing to Germany's inability to support the financial strain. Next May is mentioned as the probable date of the German collapse. These predictions are based upon deduction.

Chancellor of the Exchequer Lloyd George, as was recently announced in the London papers, has been to France and had a conference with the French and Russian Ministers of Finance. It is generally understood that a result of the conference will be that Great Britain will undertake the financing of the allies to an even greater degree than she has already done, though, in respect to Russia particularly, she has already put her hand in her pocket to no inconsiderable extent.

The Factories In Belgium

Have Been Stripped—Raw Materials Seized and Sent to Germany

LONDON, Jan. 26.—The Daily News correspondent at Rotterdam reports large removals of raw materials from Belgium to Germany. At Ghent at the occupation of the town on September 8 the Germans, he says, agreed to allow the inhabitants their usual freedom on condition they supplied certain goods, principally foodstuffs, cigars, wine and cycles. Now, he says, all flax, cotton jute and metals in the factories have been taken and 14,000 work people have been thrown out of employment because raw materials of their industries have been removed to Germany.

In December, says the correspondent, 1,950,000 francs' worth of flax was taken. The owners received orders to give up all their stocks of flax and then saw their cotton, wool, flax, metals and leather taken.

The owners were informed that a commission had been appointed in Berlin to distribute their raw material among the manufacturers in Germany. Eighty thousand bales of cotton have been taken out of Antwerp to Bremen. Leather workers are out of work, as all leather has been removed to Germany. One merchant was ordered to give up stocks worth 1,950,000 francs ($350,000).

RAILWAY MAN PASSES AWAY IN TORONTO

Mr. Richard Boundy, for 48 Years a Conductor on G.T.R.—Well Known Here

Railroad men and the general travelling public will regret to learn of the death of Mr. Richard Boundy, who for 48 years was conductor on the Grand Trunk Railway, and one of the oldest railway men in the Dominion, and who passed away at the Western Hospital, Toronto, on Wednesday in his 70th year. He was born in England and came to Canada over 60 years ago, attending school in Port Hope. For the last two years the late conductor had been on the retired list, enjoying a pension for long service.

Local people will remember him when he was conductor on the Toronto-Port Hope (via Peterborough) run for many years, passing through this city alternately with Conductors Buller and McMillan.

A sister, Mrs. John Dixon, resides on Burnham Street, East City.

A Methodist in religion, the late Mr. Boundy attended Wesley church, Toronto. He was a member of the Sons of England and a Liberal in politics.

A widow and a son, Frederick Boundy, and a daughter, Mrs. J. Rogers, of Toronto, survive.

The funeral will be held from his late residence, 106 Beatrice Street, Toronto, on Saturday at two o'clock, the services being conducted by Rev. J. B. Rankin, of Wesley church, Toronto. Interment will follow at Mount Pleasant cemetery.

A STATEMENT FROM MR. GORDON

Is Satisfied to Have the Matter Threshed Out in a Judicial Enquiry

Mr. Gordon when asked if he had anything to say respecting the meeting of the Board of Education, said that he was perfectly satisfied to have the whole matter threshed out in a judicial enquiry to deal with the question as to his disqualification, and also as to Mr. Hill's receiving pecuniary benefit from contracts with the Board of Education.

Mr. Hill said that he never received any commissions on insurance, but he did not say that he had never received any pecuniary benefit from it. Mr. Hill also intimated that he—Mr. Gordon—had withdrawn certain statements. Mr. Gordon said that nothing had been withdrawn by him.

Mr. Gordon said that he had no other desire than to have the whole thing threshed out if the Council is willing to send it up before the county judge to deal with the whole subject matter. He stated in conclusion that it was apparent that some of the members of the Board were not anxious for him to sit on it, or they would not be making such desperate efforts to baulk the will of the ratepayers who elected him at the head of the poll.

CHURCH PARADE ON SUNDAY

Peterboro' Home Guards to Attend Divine Service—Good Turnout Last Night

In spite of the below zero weather, there was a large turnout of the Peterborough Home Guards at the weekly drill in the armouries last night. The first march out of the new year was held, the Guards facing the Arctic breeze bravely, and swinging along steadily to the martial music of the 57th Regiment Bugle Band. On their return to the armouries, company drill was held. The Home Guard will hold their first church parade on Sunday. The following orders have been issued:

Peterborough, Jan. 28, 1915.

Orders by Lt.-Col. J. E. L. Goodwill, Officer Commanding Peterborough Home Guards—

The Battalion will parade with bands on Sunday, January 31st, to divine service. The members of the Roman Catholic church will parade as Company 12 and be in charge of Captain J. J. Duffus. They will drop out at St. Peters Cathedral.

The members of the Protestant churches will attend All Saints' church.

The church parties will rejoin each other at the corner of Charlotte and Rubidge Streets at 12.30 p.m.

The parade will leave the Armouries at 10.15 a.m. sharp and proceed via the following streets, George and Hunter to Rubidge and return via Rubidge, Charlotte, George to the Armouries.

A class of instruction will be formed and organization meeting will be held Monday evening, February 1st, at 7.30 missioned officer is expected to attend. The companies shooting Monday night will so arrange their shooting to be finished at 9 o'clock, as the ranges will be required for a lecture by the class.

Shooting will be continued as usual on Saturday and Tuesday afternoons. The Cadets will use the ranges at 4 p.m. on Tuesdays, under the direction of Musketry Sergeant Tillcock.

F. D. KERR,
Captain and Adjutant.

Carranza's Vanguard at Guadaloupe.

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 29.—A telephone message just received here announces that the advance guard of the Carranza army is entering Guadaloupe, a suburb four miles north of the capital.

The forces of Gen. Zapata have retreated without fighting.

The main body of the invading army is at Tlalpam, seven miles south of Mexico City.

The indications are that the capital will be evacuated without resistance.

necessary enquiries in connection therewith and for such purpose that the Judge have all the powers which may be conferred upon Commissioners under the Public Enquiries Act, and that he shall with all convenient speed report to the Council the result of the enquiry and the evidence taken, and that a duly authenticated copy thereof be sent to the Board of Education for the City of Peterborough.

Claims He is Disqualified.

Continuing, Mr. Hill said:

I am advised that if this resolution is passed and the investigation is granted by the City Council, that the facts disclosed in such investigation will show that Mr. G. N. Gordon is disqualified to sit upon this Board.

I am advised that the Solicitor for a Municipal Corporation, who is paid by salary, is an Officer of such Corporation, and as such is disqualified by law from being a member of the School Board in the same municipality.

Quoted Mr. Gordon.

I am further advised that the law is that the Municipal Council and the School Board must be entirely separate and independent of each other and free from the influence and control of each other, as there are so many matters in conflict between these two bodies. Mr. Gordon, in his address to the electors, recognizes this principle, because he says:

"A certain pot hunter who may be financially interested, if I am elected, has circulated the story that I am seeking the solicitorship for the Board of Education, which I do not want, and would not take as the interests of the Board of Education and the City may be in conflict, and my view is that one man should not act for both."

In matters of conflict between this Board and the Municipal Council Mr. Gordon could not conscientiously advise this Board as a member of the Board to take a certain course, and as the paid officer and adviser of the City Council advise them to take the opposite course. The matter is of such consequence and of such public importance that I deem it my duty to introduce this motion and, if it is carried, and the investigation granted, I propose to press the investigation and to follow to its legitimate conclusion the results of such investigation.

Regret His Absence.

Mr. Hill said he regretted Mr. Gordon's absence from the meeting. He had other statements he might make, but refrained from mentioning them when the member was not present.

He (Mr. Gordon) had made statements, most of which he had withdrawn. They were of a serious nature and applied to the whole Board. Regarding the purchase of blinds, in his first charge, he has not touched upon that at all, but has made a personal attack on me. Mr. Gordon knows that an agent for insurance companies does not get a commission from the insured, but from the Company. The insurance is placed at standard rates, and in standard companies, and to suggest asking for the return of such alleged commissions from the Companies is nothing more than a proposed rebate which Mr. Gordon knows is illegal. If any commission is paid it is from the Company in which the insurance is placed, not from the party who insures.

Mr. Hill stated that a considerable portion of the insurance in question was held by the companies he represented before he became identified with them. Some of it was secured forty or fifty years ago and was taken over from the late Wm. Cluxton and Mr. McBain. Mr. Hill mentioned precedents. The late Senator Cox, and A. L. Davis, and Wm. Cluxton, and A. L. Davis had held insurance while acting as public officials, had held insurance in the same way. In Toronto, members of the Council and Board of Control, representing Companies which have risks on Toronto public property, hold their positions without question. The first question I ever heard, Mr. Hill said, was raised by Mr. G. N. Gordon.

Mr. John Smith—"I am told the Council intends to do nothing in the matter."

"Mere street talk," observed a member.

The Board then adjourned.

METEOR WAS DECOY

British Cruiser Performed Trick to Draw German Fire

LONDON, Jan. 29.—Further stories of Sunday's sea fight, as told by the men of the British squadron, are given in The Daily News. The light cruiser Aurora was in action with the German cruiser Kolberg, and her first shot carried away the Kolberg's mainship funnel. Her gun raked the German ship, which, when last seen by the Arethusa, was in a helpless and sinking condition.

Some men who took part also in the Heligoland Bight battle in August said: "The Bight fight was a picnic compared with Sunday's fight. This was fine sport."

On one destroyer, it is stated, the crew sang "See How They Run." But there was quite another tale from the Meteor.

"We were told," said one man, "to act as a decoy. Our commander is noted for his seamanship. We double-banked our fires and we went ahead, letting out dense volumes of smoke from our funnels. We were like a piece of greased lightning. We did some fancy skating and the German gunners must have been sick at missing us time after time. We spun around at times like a spinning top, but they got us twice, and we got a shell into our boiler-room, which laid four of our fellows out at once. Then we got another in the stern, and this stopped our merry little dance. We were sorry, and yet we were not. We wanted to go back again, but we had to be content with watching the game of hare and hounds. We saw the Blucher go down. The sight was magnificent, yet horrible."

"I don't think much of the German airmen," interposed a comrade. "They dropped bombs, and I believe that they drowned many of their own men by doing so."

Letters For The Soldiers

They Must Be Addressed With Great Exactness

OTTAWA, Jan. 29.—The Postoffice Department yesterday issued this notice concerning mail for Canadian soldiers:

"With reference to the correct addressing of mail for soldiers at the front, it is desired that every publicity should be given to the fact that in order to facilitate the handling of this correspondence and insure its reaching the addresses without delay, there should be included in the address of all letters and packages:

"Name of soldier in full;

"Regimental number;

"Battalion, battery, squadron or unit;

"Brigade;

"Number of contingent."

Beware of Trouble

It is the wisest thing you can do to have your watch examined at this time of the year.

The cold weather is apt to harden the oil—that strains the mainspring and affects the motion.

TURNBULLS

GOOD SHOWING MADE IN THE PAST YEAR

That a satisfactory and encouraging condition prevails in all departments of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church is shown by the annual reports presented last Thursday and last evening. To make possible an intelligent discussion of the work, St. Andrew's Church has adopted the plan of holding their annual meeting on the third and fourth Thursdays of January. The following statement is culled from the reports submitted at these two meetings:

The session report gave a total membership of 545. Fifty-six new members were received during the year, of which 35 were by profession of faith and twenty-one by certificate.

In a review of the contributions to missions and extra congregational funds, the session found that the givings for the year amounted to $2,459.84, made up as follows:

Congregation (by envelope).	$1,621.40
Sunday School	143.90
Women's Missionary Societies	326.82
Young Ladies' Mission Band	82.20
Willing Workers	16.00
Daughters of Erin	50.00
Lord's Day Alliance	34.65
Sailors' Miss. Society	120.45
Dominion Alliance	52.25
Bank interest	11.51
	$2,459.84

This is $476.61 in advance of 1913.

MANAGER'S REPORT.

The manager's report was presented by Mr. A. McFarlane, chairman of the Board. In presenting his report, he referred to the financial depression of the past year, and congratulated the congregation that notwithstanding they had ended the year with a small surplus on the year's operations. Mr. E. A. Peck, ex-M.L.A., was tendered a vote of thanks for his services in connection with the securing of a bill from the Ontario Legislature, which gives the congregation authority to dispose of certain properties should the congregation at any time wish to do so. The report concludes: "Your Board are of the opinion that, taking everything into consideration, we have much to be thankful for, and after the organ is paid for, we believe we should seriously take up the consideration of improved Sunday School accommodation."

The report of the Organ Committee was made by W. A. Richardson, secretary-treasurer, which showed that the organ and expenses of installation had amounted to $7,967.75. This had been reduced to $674.18, of which $1,262.75 was paid during the past year. It is the intention to close out this account in 1915.

BETTER SUNDAY SCHOOL ACCOMMODATION

The special committee appointed a year ago to investigate the question of better Sunday School equipment and accommodation reported that the work of investigation was well under way, and that should financial conditions improve, a complete report would probably be made to a congregational meeting before the end of the year.

The committee is Messrs. G. Walter Green (chairman), A. McFarlane, Geo. Edmison, R. W. Waddell, W. J. Henry, J. J. Allin, W. S. Campbell, Geo. A. Gillespie, M.L.A.; E. B. Fowler, F. E. Kerr, B.A.; W. J. Chisholm, M.A.; W. G. Read, W. A. Richardson, G. W. Gilman, Richard Lees, M.A.

The choir reported a good year under the leadership of Herbert C. Trenear, and showed a balance in the choir fund of $60.27. A hearty vote of thanks was extended to Mr. Trenear for his services. The choral class conducted on Monday evenings by Mr. Trenear showed an enrolment of 42 members. This class is comprised of young people in the congregation who are interested in singing. From its membership the choir will be reinforced from time to time.

"A very pleasing and encouraging incident in connection with the work of the year occurred in May. At that time an effort was made simultaneously throughout the Presbytery to get the members of the older classes to definitely decide for Christ. This effort took the form of personal and individual work on the part of the minister, and it met with a response that was as gratifying to the school as it must have been to the parents, and indeed to all who have the interests of the work at heart."

The Women's Home Missionary Society and Women's Foreign Missionary Society were amalgamated in May. The contributions from these societies for missionary purposes was $328.82, of which $110.17 was contributed for the Women's Home Missionary Society and $41.65 by the W.F.M.S. before amalgamation. To name of the new society is The Women's Missionary Society.

The Ladies' Aid showed receipts of $328.28 and an expenditure of $287.79, showing an active year in this organization. This society has a special fund in the bank amounting to $260.58.

Rev. James Rollins has entered upon his fifth year as pastor of the church.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Dear Mr. Editor,— Who was the chairman of the Power and Light committee of the Council last year, and who is this year. I am sure as a householder we can not be too thankful for our light rates.

Yours truly,
R. NEEDLER.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—I noticed in last night's issue of your valuable paper that Mr. McIntyre suggested that the City do their own paving. Thanks. Such a motion and such a system should be carried without any opposition. Ald. McIntyre is looking after the City's welfare and finding work for the unemployed, and keeping the money in the City, to try and help the citizens to pay the rates and taxes. If Gleason and Foley can do the work and make a profit, I think the members of the Council should take it up, and when you come next year for a vote you will get it with a glad ..... I remain

Yours truly,
Southender.

Should Not Use The Relief Fund

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir,—At a recent meeting of the local branch of the Patriotic Relief Association, Mr. F. H. Dobbin submitted the proposition of some work that might be undertaken by the City as a solution of the problem of unemployment, which, I think, is a good one, and one which ought to be thoroughly gone into. I cannot, however, agree with his proposal of financing the work out of the Patriotic Fund.

In the first place every dollar of this money is needed for the purpose for which it was originally intended; secondly, the City Treasury has no claim whatever on this fund. This fund was subscribed by the noble-hearted people of our City as an unconditional gift, and once conditions are attached, it ceases to be such. I say, by all means give the unemployed work but finance the work out of the City treasury.

Thanking you in advance for your valuable space, I remain,

Yours truly,
A. J. Puller.

Uncle Sam's Position

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—The present position of the United States reminds us of the old story about the old man and his ass. Uncle Sam, in his endeavour to make every dollar possible, even at the sacrifice of the national honour, is endeavouring to please everybody, but, so far, has pleased nobody, and in the end will find he has lost his ass, into the bargain.

For Great Britain is still Mistress of the Sea, and is still delivering the goods. She will continue to deliver the goods, when this little fuss in Europe is over, and, best of all, will have upheld her honour, which all Britons, the world over, cherish above dollars and cents.

In Regard To Outfall Sewer

Are City Officials Treating the Opposition to Scheme as a Joke?

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—In the report of the Board of Works in reference to the Sewage Disposal Plant, on Wednesday evening, a member of the Board, who desired to learn if the Provincial Board of Health had authorized the construction of the plant in Otonabee—across the river from the Street Railway Wharf—was informed in effect that no authorization had yet been received. In the face of this the City Engineer in the same report is said to have stated most positively that the plant will be located on this site. Whom are we to believe? Personally, I am inclined to take the Board's statement that the City's plans have not been authorized, but surely this is too costly an undertaking for the ratepayers to be handled by their servants on the "steam roller" and "bluff" principle. Thousands of dollars are being sunk in the quicksands of the South Ward that may be an absolute loss in the event of the Provincial Board of Health refusing to endorse the City's plans. Would the Chairman of the Board of Works or the City Engineer employ such astonishing business tactics in the management of their own personal affairs? The fact of the matter is that the City officials are treating the opposition of the Township Council of Otonabee and interested residents on both sides of the river, as well as hundreds of our citizens, as a joke. They no doubt feel like all other sufferers from swelled-head, that their superior knowledge and business acumen so far overshadows that of their opponents that they have nothing to fear. A rude awakening, however, is in store, and when it comes the ratepayers will see that the axe falls on the heads of those responsible. I venture to predict that if the sewage plant is ever located on this site it will bring the City such a crop of actions for damages that every official who helped to railroad the scheme through will be relegated to social, moral and political oblivion for the remainder of his days.

Yours truly,
Ratepayer.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

IMPORTANT GAMES IN O.H.A. TO-NIGHT

Local Intermediates' Fate Will Be Decided at Bowmanville While the Local Juniors Will Have Something to Say at Home About the Junior Group.

TORONTO, Jan. 29.—Fifteen games are down for decision to-night in the O.H.A., and the majority have an important bearing on the group honours in the various series. In the senior Kingston Frontenacs make their second appearance at the Arena this season. Their opponents will be Victorias, and the latter should win easily.

Although Bowmanville have no chance for the title in intermediate Group No. 1, they are keen to give Peterborough a beating to-night. A win for Peterborough will tie them with Picton for the leadership of the group, while a loss will put them out of the running, as this is the last game they have to play.

Ingersoll Must Defeat Paris.

The most important game of all is that in the intermediate series between Ingersoll and Paris at the former town. At the commencement of the week Ingersoll led the group by one game, with Paris right behind. On Monday, however, Ingersoll were beaten by Western University, while Paris won at Brantford. This placed Paris in the lead. Ingersoll must win to-night to tie with Paris, while a win for the visitors will give them the group title. Dunnville must win at Welland to stay in the running.

Port Hope or Lindsay?

Interest in the junior series is centred in Group No. 2, where Port Hope and Lindsay are battling for the title. At present the teams are tied. Each, however, play their last game to-night, and both happen to be away from home. Both must win or lose to maintain the deadlock. Meaford play at Collingwood, and a win for the home team ties them with Barrie. At Kingston the Collegiate Institute play Belleville. If the students win they enter the second round. If, however, Belleville happens to upset the dope, there will be a three-cornered tie, with Frontenacs as the third team. De la Salle should win the local game from Upper Canada College, and thus remain on even terms with St. Andrew's College.

Referees for To-night's Games.

Senior—O. Bernhardt of Bradford.

Junior—Belleville at Kingston Collegiate Institute, Gren Caldwell; Port Hope at Cobourg, B. McCreath; Lindsay at Peterborough, W. McCord; De la Salle at Upper Canada College, F. C. Waghorne; London at Woodstock, Wally Hern; Meaford at Collingwood, Harry Riddell. Woodstock College and Brantford have agreed upon their own referee.

St. John's and George Street Were Winners In The Church League

St. John's and George Street Methodists were the winners in the Senior Church League fixtures last night over Murray Street Baptists and St. Paul's Presbyterians respectively. St. John's blanked the Baptists 6 to 0 and the George Street representatives took the long end of a 6 to 2 score with St. Paul's. In an exhibition game St. Luke's beat St. Andrew's 4 to 0.

St. John's Vs. Murray Street.

St. John's and Murray Street Baptists clashed in the opener, but did not play as good hockey as in the game that followed. The Baptists failed to get the rubber past Flowers, in goal for St. John's, while the Anglicans counted six times. There was very little combination work on either side, though the winners had the honours in that respect by a good margin. The half time score was 4 to 0 and at full time 6 to 0.

Heard, at centre for St. John's, was about the most effective man among the forwards, and one the defence LeBarr used his weight to advantage.

Eastwood was always dangerous for the Baptists, but there was seldom anyone near to help him when he struck the opposing defence. Lewis behind him had an off night and was not hard to beat from any angle, long shots being his weakest point. The line-up:

St. John's		Murray Street
	Goal
Flowers		Lewis
	Right defence
Morphet		Brown
	Left defence
LeBarr		Eastwood
	Centre
Heard		Fitzgerald
	Right wing
Pammett		Webb
	Left wing
Stephens		Lapp

Referee—"Ack" Hunter.

George Street Vs. St. Paul's.

In the second game which was between George Street Methodist and St. Paul's Presbyterians, the final score was 6 to 2 in favour of the Methodists, and at half time 4 to 1.

At the outset it looked as though St. Paul's were going to have a walk-over. They started out from the face-off with a nice combined rush and counted first. It did not take the Methodists long to even up, however, and from then to the finish they retained the lead.

It was a fairly good game from a spectator's standpoint. There was little attempt at any rough work, and Referee Morrow of the O.H.A. juniors, had an easy time. The line-up:

George Street		St. Paul's
	Goal
A. Darling		Hall
	Right defence
Wade		Turner
	Left Defence
Lowes		Kerr
	Rover
Palmer		Loucks
	Centre
Stewart		Fleming
	Left wing
Tully		Watters
	Right wing
Darling		Cranfield

Referee—Harold Morrow.

Junior Game.

In a Junior League fixture Knox Presbyterians defeated George Street Methodists 3 to 2. The south enders have never been defeated in a schedule game this season and look good for the championship of the series.

Poor Attendance.

The Church Hockey League has not received the patronage it deserves so far. The games are being played in a clean, sportsmanlike manner, and the league is doing much to bring sports up to the standard where it belongs. Last night the games were played before about forty spectators, but the players evinced as much enthusiasm as if they were playing before a packed house.

The spirit evinced by the Church Leaguers is commendable and they should receive more support.

In an exhibition game between St. Luke's and St. Andrew's the Anglicans handed the Presbyterians a 4—0 beating. It was a hard checking affair, made more so by the fact that the players wandered from their positions. The play was more even than the score indicates, but Butcher played a star game in the nets. The line-ups:

St. Luke's		St. Andrew's
	Goal
G. Butcher		Lees
	Defence
Cox		Swanston
Regan		McWilliams
	Rover
Hagerman		Sharpe
	Centre
A. Butcher		Brown
	Right wing
Stewart		McDonald
	Left Wing
Phillips		Henry, Preston

HOCKEY GOSSIP

The Peterborough Examiner states that the game Friday night will be the liveliest kind of a battle. Right you are, old sport, and the Lindsay youngsters will give the huskies in Peterborough a lively chase for possession of the puck. It will be the only match in Peterborough during the week and there will be a bumper crowd in attendance.—Lindsay Wanderer.

Last night on the Sacred Heart Rink between 5 and 6 o'clock, the undefeated Sacred Heart team defeated St. Peter's in a fast game of hockey, the final score being 4-2. The stars for the winning team were McCarney and Collins. For St. Peter's Rutherford, Hickey and Wolff were the prominent forwards. Mr. Herbert Laundry refereed satisfactorily.

The line-up was:

Sacred Heart—M. Romjey, P. Coarsey, P. Dorie, M. Carney, Collins, O'Dette.

St. Peter's—D. White, Drennan, H. Wolff, G. Rutherford, J. Carrol, H. C. Hickey.

The junior battle between Lindsay and Peterborough at Brock Street rink to-night will be called at 8.30 o'clock sharp and by all indications a big crowd will be in attendance. The Lindsay fans will be here on a special train which leaves Lindsay over the C.P.R. at 7 o'clock. The very cheap rate of 75c. for the round trip has been secured, which ensures a big crowd from Scugogville to see their Midgets perform. Lindsay must win the game to tie Port Hope for the district, and they will have their hands full to-night. Owing to the fact that the Lindsay uniforms are very similar in design to those worn by the Petes, the local youngsters will wear red and black sweaters to-night. The line-up will be as follows:

Lindsay		Peterborough
	Goal
O'Loughlin		Legros
	Defence
Flavelle		Morrow
Sandercock		Long
	Rover
C. Carew		Knapman
	Centre
McElroy		Jackson
	Right Wing
Griffis		Smyth
	Left Wing
A. Carew		Richardson

EXCURSIO TO PICTION IF FANS WANT ONE

The Peterborough Hockey Club is planning to run an excursion to Picton for the final game in the group race on Wednesday next if a sufficient number of fans express their intention of taking in the trip. The fare for the round trip will be $2.75 and the special train will leave Picton immediately after the game. Lists have been opened at the Morgan Hardware Company and at the Examiner Office and fans who wish to go are asked to leave their names at one place or the other as soon as possible in order that the Club may decide whether or not to run the excursion.

Committee Appointed To Take Up Question of Professional Ball

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Baseball Club Limited was held last evening in the Bank of Montreal chambers, with President Denham presiding, and a representative number of shareholders present. The financial report showed that through the leasing of the club to a local syndicate last season, there was a small cash balance to the credit of the club. The syndicate of course lost heavily.

It was decided to leave the election of directors to a subsequent meeting. The old directors present tendered their resignations and expressed their intention of having no connection with baseball during the coming season, at least in a responsible capacity.

It was the opinion of the meeting that some plan might possibly be found to make it possible to have Peterborough continue in organized ball and with a view to endeavouring to make some arrangements that might lead to this end a committee composed of Messrs. R. M. Glover, chairman, Dr. Wightman, E. T. Carr, Donald Shook, Cyril Lock, A. C. Kay and C. G. Graham, was appointed. They will go into the matter and report back to the shareholders at a meeting to be held on Monday, February 16th.

TANKARD RINKS WILL BE AWAY FROM BONSPIEL

Skip Flavelle, of Lindsay, intimated the other day he would take part in the local bonspiel next week, and Geo. Little may be along with him. It is the next big event with the local curlers, and there should be a large attendance of curlers from the clubs in this district. The prizes are well worth competing for, and with good ice the bonspiel should be a success. Mr. H. R. H. Kenner began his presidency auspiciously by defeating the vice-president on New Year's, and the local club has won the district Tankard. If these events may be regarded as auguries the present season should be attended with further successes.

The Tankard games in Toronto next week coincide with the local bonspiel with the result that some of Peterborough's best curlers will be unable to enter the home event. There are plenty of good skips left, however, to uphold the honours of the Peterborough club.

New Lights Employed.

Thirty new nitrogen lamps have been installed in the rink, each of 875 candle-power, and with this flood of light the rink should be well illuminated.

INTERMEDIATES AT BOWMANVILLE

The Peterborough intermediates left at noon to-day for Bowmanville, where they will clash in a most important game. The score by periods will be announced at the junior game at Brock Street rink to-night. The Petes will line up as follows to-night:

Goal—Janes.
R. Defence—Hunter.
L. Defence—Pethick.
Rover—Halpin.
Centre—Park.
R. Wing—Moines.
L. Wing—Kelly.

BOWLING

The good bowling of Capt. Adams of the Patriots was too strong for the League leaders, the North Enders. The Patriots won two out of the three. Following is the score:

Patriots	1	2	3	Total
H. Adams	151	144	112	—407
Shelton	101	123	140	—364
W. Adams	114	189	142	—445
	366	456	394	—1216
North End	1	2	3	Total

Casualties Include 200 Killed.

LONDON, Jan. 29. — Last night's list of casualties also contains, in addition to officers, 964 names of men, including nearly 200 killed. Regiments suffering severely include the Scots' Guards, Grenadier Guards, Gordons, Camerons, Somersets and Dorsets.

The British casualties referred to were evidently sustained in the fierce fighting at La Bassee, when five German attacks completely failed.

Poincare Visited London.

LONDON, Jan. 29. — That the French and British armies, reinforced by nearly five million fresh troops, are preparing to launch a terrific offensive against the Germans in the western theatre of war, was reported here yesterday, after it had become known that President Poincare of France paid a secret visit to London last week and conferred with King George, Premier Asquith and War Secretary Kitchener.

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, Jan. 28.—War advances today outdid anything hitherto in regard to price of grain. May wheat took the lead and spurted above $1.50, a mark which not long ago seemed fabulous. Active buying carried other cereals as well as wheat to new high levels. Wheat closed unsettled at 5-8c to 1 1-16c above last night, corn finished 2-8c to 3-4c up, oats a shade to 1-8c up and provisions at a rise of 15c to 30c.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Jan. 28.—There was an increased demand from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat today, and as cables were stronger at another sharp advance in prices, a fair amount of business was done for February shipment. A very strong feeling prevailed in the local market for oats and prices scored an advance of 2c to 3c per bushel, with sales of 10,000 to 15,000 bushels of local Nos. 2, 3 and 4, at prices ranging from 58c to 60½c, and carlots of No. 2 were placed at 61c. The tone of the market for Manitoba barley was also very strong and prices are much higher, with sales of carlots of sample grades for shipment to Toronto at 78c track here. CASES DISMISSED WITH COSTS OF $3

Trespassers at Norwood Were Before Magistrate Langley at His First Session in County Police Court

Magistrate O. A. Langley attended his first session of the County Police Court in Norwood, when three cases were up for hearing. Magistrate J. E. Squire was also on the bench. The charges brought were that of trespassing based on Sub-Section E., Section 265, Ontario Statutes, and were entered by Constable Marshall of Havelock for the C. P. R. Company against Albert Parker, Kenneth Kavanagh and Wm. Nesbitt, all of Indian River.

It appears that the agent at Indian River is now withdrawn from duty at 9 p.m., but the waiting room is left open. Some rowdyism had taken place on certain occasions and complaint had been sent to the Superintendent of the Company, with the result that the company's constable from Havelock paid a visit to the station on Saturday, Jan. 16. He found the above parties in the waiting room without tickets and ordered them out and brought action.

The decision reached by His Worship was to dismiss the case with costs, which amounted to about $3.

Havelock Boys Heavily Fined

HAVELOCK, Jan. 28.—Ray Gibbs, a 15 year old boy of town, was charged by License Inspector Williams with supplying liquor to Willie Haughton, aged 13, Cecil Colquhoun aged 15, and Arthur Watson, aged 16. Haughton swore that Gibbs produced a bottle of whiskey at the gravel pit, that he opened it and drank over a cupful. [illegible] drunk that after a time he didn't know any more until he woke up in bed next morning. Colquhoun gave Haughton's evidence but didn't think he was drunk and wasn't affected so badly. Young Gibbs swore that he got the bottle at Andrew's livery stable where he saw three or four other bottles, and where he said he expected to find liquor, because he had procured it there before. He had never heard of any one else, however, getting liquor there. Magistrates Joyce and Mathison fined Gibbs $10.00 and costs for the offence, or $14.35 in all.

FINED FOR SELLING GOODS AFTER HOURS

By-Law Will be Amended—Two Offences Charged

LINDSAY, Jan. 28—A by-law governing keeping retail stores open after hours and selling after hours was made operative at the Police Court, when Mr. Milburn, jeweller in Steven's confectionery store, was fined $5 and costs, $8.45, for selling after hours. It appears that Mr. Milburn has been holding an auction sale of jewellery, and was fined for doing so after hours, the offence occurring on Tuesday night last.

For a similar offence on Wednesday night he pleaded guilty, and was taxed the sum of $2.

Police Magistrate Jackson drew the attention of the Chief of Police to the fact that there was an error in the town by-law, which placed the limit of a fine in the above case from $1 to $5. In conjunction with the statutes this fine should be limited to $50, and the Chief was instructed to confer with the Town Council re having the amount increased to that amount

MANY GERMANS ARE REPORTING TO LOCAL POLICE

Chief of Police Thompson has on the parole list a number of Germans, residents in the City, who are obliged to report to him at least once a month. As long as he is assured they are going quietly and peaceably about their daily work there will be no further interference with their liberty.

Shortly after the outbreak of the war an order-in-council came into effect whereby all aliens in Canada belonging to the nations at war with the Allies, should be obliged to register with the Chief of Police of the place of residence. German, Austrian or Turkish reservists or men who had served in the army of one of these countries, suspected of designs to return to their own countries, could be arrested and interned. The Chief of Police might parole, and such has been the course taken in Peterborough.

The order does not apply to those who have taken out naturalization papers in Canada, Great Britain or the United States.

Only the names of men appear on the list of the local Chief of Police. If the suspicions of the police were aroused and verified with regard to women they would be promptly interned.

A pretty thorough system of keeping tab on the representatives of the hostile nations has been inaugurated, and if any trouble were brewing here the local police would have considerable data to work upon in unearthing plots.

Its thinness is in the movement

Come in and let us show you how a new, mechanically correct arrangement of wheels reduced the size of the ordinary movement space one-half.

Then you will understand how this watch can "fit your pocket like a silver dollar," yet maintain the highest standards of precision timekeeping.

Then you will know how different this genuine thin model timekeeper is from watches made to appear thin by such methods as sacrificing the inside dust protection cap in the back case, or polishing a ladies' size movement in the centre of a thin edged man's case.

Before you buy any watch, be sure to come in and see this genuine thin model watch—the Green Verithin.

NORTH MONAGHAN PEOPLE IN NEED OF RELIEF

viding he could get home at nights until such time as his wife is better. This family is destitute. These, and many other cases that could be enumerated are situated in the locality of which St. Albans Mission is the centre. Rev. Mr. Price, of St. George's Church, states that things are equally as bad in his community.

Do Not Need Relief.
On the top of this comes the information that the Peterborough Cheese Board have raised about nine hundred dollars for patriotic relief purposes and are seeking a means of disbursing it. At the request of a member of the Board they were supplied with a list of needy cases by Relief Officer Miller. It is understood that this money is to be devoted to assisting the dependents of those who are at the front. It is claimed by those who are actively engaged in relief work that the wives and families of those who have enlisted are not in need of financial assistance. They are getting a separation allowance from the Government in addition to a proportion of the soldier's pay. It is the families of those who are unable to enlist and are out of work that are in need of assistance. To these men the recruit is a source of envy, and the prospect of him being cut down by a German bullet is small compared with the knowledge that his family is being amply provided for.
What these people need is food and clothing, and they need it quick. The last square meal that they had was at Christmas. This was supplied by the King's Daughters. St. Albans Mission, which is situated on Western avenue, is open to receive supplies at any time and can assure the donators that they will be properly dispensed. Sanitary Inspector Spence, who has charge of the Mission, conducts services each Sunday evening, also Bible class in the afternoon.

AT CHARLOTTE STREET CHURCH.
The Rev. Dr. Moore of Toronto, will preach in Charlotte Street church on Sunday. The pastor will conduct the evening service. Subject for evening, "Has Every Man a Chance?"

Every Woman is said to be Curious. It is one Weakness which will not be counted against her at Heaven.

Russian Legions Are Nearing Koenisberg

THE GERMANS HURRYING FORCES TO HALT ADVANCE

Germany Much Alarmed At New Sweep of Czar's Army

Russian Troops Have Occupied Tabriz, the Capital of Persian Province of Aserbijan--March on Koenisberg a Master Stroke.

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

PARIS, France, Jan. 30.—The Paris Matin to-day claimed to have received despatches that the Russian troops have occupied Tabriz, the capital of the Persian Province of Aserbijan.

Tabriz is a city of 175,000, and next to Teheran the largest city in Persia.

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, Eng., Jan. 30.—Germany is much alarmed at the new sweep of the Czar's armies upon Koenigsberg.

Reinforcements are being hurried into East Prussia and heavy preparations are being made to halt the advance of the Russian legions now less than 35 miles from the fortress of Koenigsberg itself.

This was the news brought here to-day in despatches from Amsterdam and Copenhagen. Amsterdam said uniform rumours had it that several trainloads of Germans were moving across Belgium from the Flanders battle front to reinforce Von Hindenberg in the east. These regiments were part of the fresh forces that reached the fighting line only a few days ago in expectation of a new German offensive from Arras to the Belgian sea coast.

In military circles the Russian march upon Koenigsberg at the present moment is regraded as a master stroke. The Grand Duke, it is believed, seized his opportunity while the German forces were being withdrawn from Poland and sent into Austria to begin a sudden drive toward the Gulf of Danzig. The capture of Koenigsberg, military experts pointed out, would result in an early success for the second Russian army menacing the Prussian fortress of Thorn and eventually force the retirement of the Germans before Warsaw.

A French advance along the Belgian sea coast continued to make slight progress to-day, according to advices from Dunkirk. These messages indicated that the Allies from the sea coast south to Arras were feeling out the German positions by infantry attacks.

Three English Aviators Drowned Berlin Says

Dropped Into Sea When Supplies of Gasoline Gave Out

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

BERLIN, via wireless, Jan. 30.—Three of the seven English aviators, who bombarded Ostend and Zee Brugge were drowned in the Straits of Dover with their observers.

An English air squadron was engaged by German airmen. The three English biplanes, finding their retreat cut off by the Germans, fled seaward, and dropped into the water when supplies of gasoline became exhausted.

ATHENS, Jan. 30.—Turkish troops operating along the Suez Canal near Elkantara were shelled by a British cruiser and sustained heavy losses, according to despatches received here to-day.

The Turks were attempting an attack on Bir Hefil, southeast of Elkantara, but were forced to retire.

A cavalry skirmish east of the Bitter lakes resulted in a slight loss to British Indian troops.

COUNTY COUNCIL CONTINUES GRANT OF $400 A MONTH FOR PATRIOTIC PURPOSES

Also Makes $100 Grant to Ploughmen's Association, Which It Heartily Endorses—Statement of Receipts and Expenditures—Other Doings of the Council.

The Finance Committee of the County Council decided to continue its patriotic donations of $400.00 a month, the disbursements of which remains under the control of the special committee. In the past this grant was made in alternate months to the Red Cross Society, the Belgian Relief Fund and the Canadian Patriotic Fund. W. A. Anderson, Reeve of Otonabee, was in the chair and pointed out that this grant fell lightly upon the County ratepayers. In Otonabee, for instance, it meant a donation of only en cents a month from each ratepayer. In the more thickly populated Townships the average sum would be as low as two cents per month, and for the whole county it would be slightly under an average of five cents. There are over 8,000 ratepayers and the monthly grant is $400. Short arithmetics demonstrates that the average donation per ratepayer is practically five cents. Thus, by pooling these small the County is enabled to make an appreciable grant of $400 a month, or $4,800 for the whole year.

Plowmen's Association.

The request from the Plowmen's Association met with a hearty response. The Committee proposed a grant of $100 and this will likely be carried in Council on Saturday morning. Reeve Griffith of Belmont and Methuen proposed the extension of the contest. He suggested that each township should hold individual conests to determine the township champion and there would then follow a County match between the best plowmen from each Township.

Warden Kindred offered a special prize of $5 to be competed for by the plowmen of the County Council. In the event of there being no contest this sum will go with the Burnham Cup.

The whole ideas of improving the ploughing throughout the county has appealed to the Councillors, and the Association will find them responsive to practical suggestions in this work.

Good Roads Meeting.

The Council has been requested to be fully represented at the annual meeting of the Ontario Good Roads Association to be held in Toronto on March 23 to 26. The Council is deeply interested in good roads and will fully consider this communication.

Mineral Rights.

Reeve Griffith of Belmont presented a resolution from the Council of that Township, requesting the County Council to memorialize the Government, asking that non-resident holders of mineral rights be taxed for these holdings. Those who held service rights of land paid regular taxes, but there were some non-residents who held mineral rights on many lots, but they pay no taxes, do not develop the land, but merely hold it. The recommendation suggested that taxes that could be secured from these mineral rights be applied for road building.

Reeves Anderson and Shaw advised against this latter proposal, stating that if the Act were passed the municipalities would have the right to spend the money as they saw fit.

Reeves Shaw and Cohen supported the idea presented by Reeve Griffith and a resolution was passed asking the Government to pass an Act as suggested by Reeve Griffith, and the aid of other County municipalities will be sought to support the idea.

Want Former Grants to Fairs.

Reeve Anderson suggested that Mr. Thompson, M.P.P., and Mr. Gillespie, M.P.P., urge the Legislature not to take the proposed step of cutting the grants to Agricultural Societies fifty per cent. this year. Reeve Squire supported the idea and a resolution was passed calling the attention of the members to this proposed cut, and asking them to use their services against the step, in view of the desire of the country to obtain heavier production on the farms this year.

WOULD PAY 40 P.C. OF COST OF A BRIDGE AT LOCK STREET

The Council has manifested a strong inclination to assist in the construction of a bridge over the foot of Lock street. In the Finance Committee's report they sanctioned a resolution to contribute forty per cent of the cost of a bridge at the south end of the street railway, providing the balance is made up from other sources and the Council assume the maintenance of it. Messrs. Devell, Anderson, Fitzgerald, McIntosh, Forster and Warden Kindred were named a committee to have the matter carried into effect.

Reeve Bullied pressed for improvements to Dane's bridge, on the line between Chandos and Anstruther, with the result that a motion was passed that it be inspected by Booth's Bridge Committee, with Mr. Bullied and Mr. McKee added. The Committee was given power to act.

It was decided that Booth's Bridge Committee, with Reeve Bullied and Reeves McKee and Lean, inspect the Burleigh bridge.

Germans Use An Aerial Torpedo Against Allies

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

LONDON, Jan. 29.—A recital of recent developments in the war by the official observer attached to British military headquarters, given out here to-day, includes a description of new projectiles employed by the Germans.

"In some parts of our front the Germans are firing a new type of high explosive shell, detonating with a cloud of thick, white smoke," the report says. "Their mine thrower also occasionally throws a very large grey bomb, or aerial torpedo, three feet nine inches long and nearly ten inches wide. It weighs more than two hundred pounds.

"The anticipations of the enemy as to the possible duration of the war," the observer continues, "are shown by the measures they are taking to prepare for any shortage in certain classes of food. In some towns orders have been issued that all kitchen refuse not required by the inhabitants to feed to their own animals shall be saved and handed over to the authorities. Efforts have been made also to gauge the public taste in the matter of preserved meats by selling salted beef, mutton and pork at cost price."

Trades Lentils For Chickens

Frenchman Accused of Stealing Large Quantities of Military Stores to Wealthy Families

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

PARIS, Jan 29—The case of Francois Desclaux, the army paymaster, and formerly chief secretary to the one-time French Minister of Finance, Mons Calliaux who was arrested on a charge of stealing military stores, is the subject of animated discussion, especially in political circles.

There remains a certain element of mystery in the case. The woman to whom Desclaux is accused of sending army provisions is wealthy and it is asked what object could there be in providing her with sacks of lentils, preserved beef, etc., quantities of which, it is alleged, were found by the military police in her mansion, in the Avenue Henri Martin.

According to the Figaro, the defence will be that Desclaux, who is entitled to triple rations, is a small eater, and had arranged to send the woman his surplus of supplies, she in return sending him chickens and other delicacies.

The woman in the case is said to be suffering from a sudden attack of appendicitis and has not been placed under arrest, as at first announced.

WILL APPEAL TO THE FARMERS

Provincial and Dominion Ministers of Agriculture Say That Patriotism and Production Are Linked

Special to The Examiner:

For the purpose of pointing out to the farmer that there are at least two ways of showing patriotism which will have much to do with the success of the allied arms, the Ontario Department of Agriculture is starting early in February a patriotism and production campaign. The details are being completed by the Hon. J. S. Duff, Minister of Agriculture for the Province of Ontario, and the Hon. Martin Burrell, Minister of Agriculture for the Dominion. It is purposed holding at least 84 meetings throughout the rural districts of the Province in order to stimulate the farmers in placing more land under cultivation.

The campaign will be a brisk one, and both the Hon. Mr. Duff and the Hon. Martin Burrell will address many of the meetings. In addition, Mr. George S. Henry, M.P.P., and other prominent agricultural men will take part.

At present in Ontario there are 3,000,000 acres of pasture land, and the Department of Agriculture urges that more of this be ploughed and sown with wheat.

A Successful Appeal.

Last spring the Hon. Mr. Duff appealed to the farmers to plough more land, and as a result 20 per cent. more acreage was put under cultivation than during the previous year.

When Peace is Declared

How Will Canada Stand? London Times Seeks to Awaken the British Authorities

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

LONDON, Jan. 29—Inspired by further cables from its Toronto and Australian correspondents, the Times editorially to-day returns to the subject of participation of the Dominions in the settlement of Imperial problems which will arise when the war is concluded.

"That there is real anxiety and much perturbed thought among all the overseas peoples about their future within the Empire we have no doubt whatever," declares the Times, "and we hope therefore that the Government of the United Kingdom will not be easily lulled into the belief that there is no need for worry about the Dominions just now.

"In one sense that is splendidly true, but in another and far more important sense there was never a time when the gift of far-sighted statesmanship was more necessary.

"What we fear is that those who have to decide this very difficult matter may fail in quantity of imaginative sympathy.

Have Earned Right.

"Manifestly the Dominions must be consulted as to the terms of peace. No one would think of denying them that right, earned by the blood and treasure they have poured forth for us by the fervour of their desire to help us and by the abundance of their gifts for the supply of our necessities. Are they to be allowed to go upon a road without sure knowledge of what their goal is to be?

"If so, the day when peace has been made we may find them quite unprepared, for it may come suddenly and take us as well as them by surprise.

"Such an end to all our sharing in confidence, in sacrifice and in endeavour is inconceivable, and it must be avoided at all costs."

Threatens To Shoot Belgians at Border

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

BRUSSELS, via London, Jan. 29.—General von Bissing, the German governor of Belgium, has issued a proclamation declaring that on account of attempts by Belgians to cross the Dutch frontier in order to join the allied army, in the future all Belgians, between the ages of 16 and 40 [illegible] attempt [illegible] shot at the frontier or if caught they would be punished and sent to Germany as prisoners.

All assisting Belgians to cross, the proclamation continues, together with relatives who fail to prevent them from so doing, will be punished under the military laws. The proclamation denies that Belgians will be forced to serve in the German army.

WEDDING BELLS

SUTTON—TIGHE.

The home of Mr. Thomas Sutton 4th concession of Smith, was the scene of a very interesting event on the evening of January 27th, 1915. This was the marriage of his eldest daughter, Florence Ethel to John Howard Tighe, son of Mr. John Tighe also of Smith. The ceremony was performed at 5 o'clock by Rev. W. B. Tighe, B.A., of Hamilton, brother of the groom. The bride, who was unattended, was dressed in white silk and crepe de chine lace, with veil and orange blossoms. Her going-away dress was of brown velvet.

A sumptuous wedding supper was partaken by about seventy guests from Peterborough, Bridgenorth, Bobcaygeon, and other places. A large number of valuable presents testified to the popularity of the young people. Mr. and Mrs. Tighe left on the 7.30 train Thursday morning to spend a short honeymoon in Hamilton and Toronto, after which they will take up their residence in Smith.

SERVIA'S PITIFUL PLIGHT.

Austrian Invasion Has Caused Great Distress, and Children Are Dying for Want of Food.

LONDON, Jan. 29.—A Daily Express despatch dated Nish, Thursday, says:

Metropolitan Dimitri, supreme head of the Servian Church described to me in the following words the terrible distress of the civilian population of Servia:

"To-day one million Servians, one-third of the population, are suffering everypossible sorrow. They are destitute of everything. Since the beginning of the war, when their lands were turned into battlefields, they have endured terrible privations, and their sufferings have been still greater during the war because the first invasion took away a great proportion of the peasants who remained behind to provide food for the families of those who were fighting.

A Terrible Sight.

"Women, the mothers, wives and sisters, and the children of a million Servians are suffering now because of the second invasion, which must last much longer, and more Servians still are being driven from their homes. In six of the most fertile districts no less than fifty per cent. of the children are dying from lack of nourishment and medicine, from cold and exposure. In the invaded villages everything has been pillaged and destroyed, and when the unfortunate refugees who are compelled to flee, return to their homes they will in the majority of cases find nothing either in the shape of houses or food."

ALMOST EVERYONE NEEDS A TONIC

Almost everyone—man, woman and child—needs a tonic at some time. It is often said that a man is low because he takes little or no interest in his work; but the truth is he is not well. He needs a tonic. The same is true of a woman who does not hustle over her home work, but only feels fit to be in bed. She is not merely tired but ill. A dull pain in the head or back, poor appetite, loss of strength with low spirits, and loss of interest in life, show that you need a tonic to brace up the nerves and give you a new lease of life. The proof is that when the right tonic is taken all the trouble quickly disappears. The one tonic—the only tonic—for weak and ailing men women and children is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which speedily bring back abundant health, strength and energy. They have done this in thousands and thousands of cases as is proved by the following: Mr. Ed. A. Owen, Burdett, Alta., says: "About two years ago my health was in a wretched condition. My whole system seemed to be run down and the doctor seemed puzzled at my condition. I had no appetite; exertion would leave me breathless, and I was troubled much with dizziness. All the medicine I took did me no good, and I was steadily growing weaker. My mother urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and before I had taken them very long I began to feel like a new man, and continuing their use I was restored to complete health. I now recommend them to all run down in health as they are the best medicine I know of."

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

ABSOLUTE SECURITY TO POLICYHOLDERS

High Cost of Living vs.
Low Cost of Insurance

Midst all the increasing cost of living there's one thing that hasn't advanced,—that's the cost of Imperial Life policies. In fact, an Imperial policy to-day requires no greater annual investment than a similar policy taken at a corresponding age a dozen years ago.

And the fact that the dividends to policyholders in The Imperial Life have shown a gradual increase every year since the Company's inception makes this investment more attractive now than ever before.

Would you care to know the profit returns being made this year to holders of Imperial policies? Our booklet "The Voice of Experience" gives the information.

OUR SERIAL STORY PAGE

"THE BATTLE CRY"

Charles Neville Buck

"Nothin' kaint stand betwixt me an' what I've got ter do, Anse," he said slowly. He did not speak now with wild passion, but calm finality. "I've done took ther oath.'

For a while Anse Havey did not speak. At last he said quietly, "I reckon ye've got rid of the idea that I was aimin' to deceive ye, Jeb. I told ye that when Fletch's assassin came back to the mountains, I'd let ye know. I'm goin' to keep my word."

Jeb rose suddenly from his chair and stood with the fire lighting up his ragged trousers and the frayed sleeves of his coat.

"Air he back now?" he inquired.

Anse shook his head.

"Not yet, Jeb, but he's coming.'" He saw the twitch that came and went across the tight-closed lips which made no comment.

"Jeb," he continued, "I want ye to help me. I want ye to be big enough to put by things that it's hard to put by."

The boy once more shook his head. "Anse," he replied slowly, "ask me ter do anything else in God Almighty's world, but don't ask me thet, 'cause ef ye does I've got ter deny ye."

"I ain't askin' ye to let the man go unpunished. I'm only askin' you to let me punish him with the law."

Astonishment was writ large in every feature of Jeb's face. He stood in the wavering circle of light while the shadows danced and swallowed the corners of the cabin, and wondered if he had heard rightly. At last his voice carried a note of deep disappointment and he spoke as though unwilling to utter such treasonable words.

"I reckon, Anse,'" he suggested, "ye wouldn't hardly hev asked a thing like thet afore—" there was a hesitating halt before he went on—"afore a furrin woman changed yore fashion of lookin' at things."

Anse Havey felt his face redden and an angry retort rose to his lips. But the charge was true, and he suddenly wondered how many others of his people through the hills were saying the same thing about him; whether his power was weakening.

He went on as though Jeb had not spoken.

"All I ask is that when that man comes ye'll hold your hand until the Court has acted."

"Does ye reckon Milt McBriar aims ter let Sidering try kin of his'n after what happened afore?" was the next incredulous question.

Anse Havey's voice broke out of quiet and Anse Havey's eyes woke to a fire that was convincing.

"By God, I aims ter have him do it! I ain't askin' leave of Milt McBriar." Then he added, "I aims to hang the man that kilt your daddy in the jail-house yard at Peril, an' if the McBriars get him they've got to kill me first. Will you hold your hand till I'm through?"

The boy stood there, his hands slowly twitching and opening. Finally he said, "Hit ain't a-goin' ter satisfy me ter penitentiary that feller. He's got ter de."

"He's goin' to die. If I fail, then ——" the clansman raised his hands in a gesture of concession — "then he's yours. Will you wait?"

"I don't hardly believe," said Jeb McNash with conviction, "any man livin' kin keep Milt McBriar's hired assassin in no jail-house long enough ter try him an' hang him. But I'm willing ter see. I'll hold my hand thet long, Anse, but—" Once more a spasmodic tautening of muscles convulsed the boy's frame, and his voice took on its excited note of shrillness. "But I warns ye, I'm goin' ter be settin' thar in ther High Co'te. I hain't never a-goin' ter leave hit, an' ef thet Jury clars him—or ef they jest penitentiaries him, I'm goin' ter kill him as he sets thar in his cheer—so help me God!"

Loyal in their stubborn adherence to feud leadership, the Judge and Grand Jury secretly returned two indictments bearing the names of Luke Thixton as principal and Milton McBriar, Sr., as accessory to the crime of murder "against the peace and dignity of the Commonwealth of Kentucky and contrary to the statute in such case made and provided." Also they withheld their action from public announcement.

Surreptitiously and guardedly a message travelled up the water courses to the remotest Havey cabin. Bad Anse bade his men be ready to rise in instant response to his call, and they made ready to obey.

One day Juanita Holland and Dawn set out for Lexington to do their Christmas shopping.

Anse Havey rode with them across to Peril and waved his hat farewell as they stood on the vestibule of the rickety passenger coach. It was a very shabby car of worn and faded plush, but to Dawn it was a fairy chariot.

As she sat by the window and looked out, saying little and repressing with mountain reserve all the gasps of delight and astonishment that came bubbling up from her heart, Juanita smiled with a glow in her own veins. The parted lips and sparkling eyes of her first and most and the gayety and merriment of joyously drinking in a panorama of wonder, seeing the great world of which she only dreamed. At last the foothills fell behind and a country spread out where the trees grew far apart in smooth lawns, and now she was in the promised land of the Bluegrass.

About her were the marvels of mansions and metaled roads; white instead of clay-red. But while her heart thumped with the wonder of it all she bore herself, because of her mountain blood, with no outward show of surprise and looked at each new thing as though she had known it from her birth.

As they entered the lobby of the Phoenix Hotel in Lexington a tall youth rose from a chair and came forward. If the boy was cruder and darker and less trim in appearance than his Bluegrass brethren, at least he bore his head as high and walked as independently. He came forward with his hat in his hand and his voice was enthusiastic, "I'm mighty glad ter see ye, Dawn."

The girl looked about the place and breathed rather than said, "Isn't the world wonderful, Milt?"

Two days followed through which Dawn passed in transports of delight. There were the undreamed sights of shop windows decked for the holiday season and the crowds on the streets, and the gaiety and merriment of Christmas everywhere. She had never heard so much laughter before and she found it infectious and laughed, too.

Young Milt way-laid her in a dozen shops and the sight of him coaxed a brighter colour into her cheeks despite her gay dismissals. "Go on away, boy," she would tell him. "Don't you see I'm too busy to be bothered with you?"

Once he whispered, as he stood at her elbow in the crush of a toy store, "I hain't a-goin' ter be much astonished ef old Santa Claus puts somethin' on thet tree fer you, Dawn. I met up with him just now an' he named hit ter me."

At last she found herself again in a faded plush car beside Juanita with young Milt sitting opposite. In the racks overhead and piled about them was a mysterious litter of gaily tied packages.

Of course they had much more than their two pairs of saddlebags could carry, but young Milt would help them and Anse Havey would be at the train to meet them. Old Milt, too, was in that train, but he paused only to nod before disappearing into the shabbier smoking compartment where he had business to discuss. A man was waiting for him in there whom old acquaintances might have passed by without recognition. It was the devout hope of Milt McBriar that when they left the train at Peril, any acquaintances who might be lounging about would so fail to recognize him.

Luke Thixton bore an altered appearance. Always he had been ragged and unkempt of person. His black beard had ambushed his features until save for cheekbones and nose and eyes, men had forgotten what the face itself was like. His hair had always fallen long and straggly under the brim of his hat.

But now he had been shaved and his hair was closely cropped. He wore a suit of new clothes that came near to fitting him. A disguise of cleanliness enveloped him.

He was to pass as swiftly and unobtrusively as possible through Peril and go direct across the ridge.

He and Milt would leave the train without conversation or anything to mark them as companions. After that Luke knew what he was to do, and no further conference would be necessary until he came to report success and collect his wage.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

It was noon when the train rumbled again over the trestle near the town and all morning a steady feathery snow had been falling, veiling the sights from the car windows and wrapping the mountains in a cloak of swan's down.

At last the trucks screamed, the whole engine came puffing and wheezing to a tired halt and the two girls with young Milt at their heels made their way out, burdened with parcels.

On the cinder platform Juanita looked about for Anse Havey and she saw him standing in a group with Jeb and several other men whom she did not know—but Anse's face was not turned towards her, and it did not wear the look of expectancy that thought of her usually brought there. Jeb's countenance, too, was white and very set and a breathless tensity seemed to hold the whole picture in fixed tautness.

There were several clumps of men standing about, all armed, and very standing about, all armed, and every face wore the same expression of waiting sternness.

A gasp of premonition rose to Juanita's lips as she caught the sinister note of suspense with which the atmosphere was freighted. Then Milt McBriar stepped down from the smoker vestibule, followed by another man.

As the two of them turned in opposite directions on the trampled snow of the platform, a man who had been standing with Bad Anse Havey laid his hand heavily on the shoulder of the clean-shaven arrival and said in a clear voice, "Luke Thixton, I want ye fer ther murder of Fletch McNash." So that was what it all meant!

Gained 30 Lbs. in Few Weeks Never Felt So Well

Was Pale, Weak and Thin, and Had Nervous Headaches Before Using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

It is truly wonderful what Dr. Chase's Nerve Food does for women who are weak, weary and run down in health. New, rich blood is what is needed in nearly all such cases, and because Dr. Chase's Nerve Food forms new blood it brings cure — not mere relief, but actual cure—in the great majority of such ailments.

With an abundance of rich, red blood coursing through the veins the nerves are strengthened and vigor and vitality are carried to every organ of the human body.

With the nerves properly nourished headaches and neuralgic pains disappear, appetite improves, digestion is good, you sleep and rest well, and gain in strength and weight.

MRS. H. LAICH.

Mrs. H. Laich, Cannington Manor, Sask., writes:—"You will remember me writing you last spring. Well, I gave up my doctor and began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. This treatment cured me rapidly and I was soon myself again. I was pale, thin and weak, suffered from stomach troubles and liver complaint, and frequently had sick, nervous headaches.

"I was surprised to find that in a few weeks' time I had gained 30 pounds in weight. I never felt so strong and well in all my life. Headaches never bother me any more, and I am grateful for the cure. If people would only give this medicine a fair trial they would certainly be cured."

Everywhere people are talking about this great food cure, which cures in Nature's way, by supplying the ingredients to form new blood, and so overcome weakness and disease by an abundance of vitality. HOW to Feed Baby is often a great worry to mothers who are unable to nurse their babies themselves. Ordinary cow's milk—however prepared at home—is not a suitable substitute for the mother's milk. COULD NOT STAND ON FEET

Mrs. Baker So Weak—Could Not Do Her Work—Found Relief In Novel Way.

Adrian, Mich. — "I suffered terribly with female weakness and backache and got so weak that I could hardly do my work. When I washed my dishes I had to sit down and when I would sweep the floor I would get so weak that I would have to get a drink every few minutes, and before I did my dusting I would have to lie down. I got so poorly that my folks thought I was going into consumption. One day I found a piece of paper blowing around the yard and I picked it up and read it. It said 'Saved from the Grave,' and told what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for women. I showed it to my husband and he said, 'Why don't you try it?' So I did, and after I had taken two bottles I felt better and I said to my husband, 'I don't need any more,' and he said 'You had better take it a little longer anyway.' So I took it for three months and got well and strong."—Mrs. ALONZO E. BAKER, 9 Tecumseh St., Adrian, Mich.

Dinner Calls.

Those who have been invited to a dinner party, whether an acceptance or regret was sent, should call on the hostess within a couple of weeks. Eight o'clock in the evening is considered the proper time. The lady and her escort send in a card apiece for each lady in the house, while the man adds one of his own for each man in the family.

On entering the lady does not remove her hat, but the man leaves his hat, topcoat and cane in the hall. The conversation should be impersonal, to talk of people is not in good taste, subjects of general interest should be discussed, and no reference should be made by the callers as to this being a "dinner call," rather leaving it to be implied that the hostess has made herself so charming and gracious that her personality prompts the courtesy.

Those who call in such formal fashion have an opportunity to make themselves either very agreeable or the reverse, and as agreeable people are always in request it will be the very best form and the "proper thing" to keep the conversation to a point that when it is time to leave those receiving will be quite truthful in expressing the wish, "I hope you will soon come again," a thing that is often said without being meant.

In the course of the call it is a pleasant way to say something nice about having enjoyed the delightful dinner so recently. A caller may say: "We were so delighted to meet Miss B. at your dinner lately. It gave the opportunity to renew an old time acquaintance," or something of the sort, so giving the hostess to understand that her hospitality was thoroughly appreciated.

Business Manners.

To the business woman the men in the office are men, of course, but with a difference—just the difference that the fact that she is working with them must make.

She will not be the less polite or the less pleasant, but she will be a little more reserved. In the sanctuary of her own home she may rightly unbend, but in the arena of business she must keep her armor of dignity and discretion. At home she may choose her men associates. In business she cannot, and her colleagues as well as her employers are the gift of necessity, not of free will.

She should remember that in an office her sex is, as it were, on trial, and by her behavior it stands or falls in the eyes of others.

Even the pretty license allowed her in the social world because of her sex is not for her here. It would be as much out of place as a ball dress in a kitchen. Yet the ordinary courtesy that every man should pay to a girl she should expect, though if it is denied her she must not always insist upon it beyond the barest limits of decent behavior.

In short, she must learn never to obtrude her sex upon others and never to forget it herself, and at first this is not easy.

But in time she will find it quite natural to assume her little business manner.

Tango Prizes.

Tea and coffee sets and services for iced drinks compose some of the more elaborate prizes for dancers. The odd looking little leather cases known as tango party boxes form another type of coveted prizes. Outside they are of alligator, morocco or suede in various dark tones, and they are lined with pale tinted satin or soft kid. They are finished in silver or gold with key lock and clasps to match the interior fittings of change purse, powder box cologne bottle and mirror.

These party boxes and the smaller cases and purses when used for dance prizes for women are paired with cigarette and match cases and silver mounted or gold knobbed sticks for the men. Wrist watches [illegible] are also given a man's watch and fob completes the reward for the winning couple.

Borrowed Books.

To have a book that one has lent returned in a thumbed and dog eared condition makes you "see red," more especially if you afterward find that it has been handed round among the friends of the borrower. It's such a cheek to lend a book belonging to another person!

It is bad form to treat a book badly, no matter whether it is yours or not. Even with a library book don't turn down pages. It is so easy to mark one's place in some other way.

HOME HEALTH CLUB

By DR. DAVID H. REEDER

Necessary Changes. — In his Nature Cure Cook Book, Dr. Lindlahr has set forth in a simple and practical way the results of his experience with various forms of diet. Extremes and fads are eliminated, facts and proved results are the things that count. In my recent article on Essential Elements, I told you of some of the food elements that are frequently lacking in certain forms of diet, and how they may be supplied.

There is too much of sameness in the diet of many individuals as well as families. Meat, bread, potatoes, coffee and pie satisfies the appetite and keeps a family going but the after effect is uric acid diseases, indigestion, constipation, appendicitis, cancer and nervous ailments, according to Lindlahr, and I am inclined to think that your own observations as well as the teachings of the Home Health Club, will confirm the idea. It is true that these foods are real blood, bone and nerve builders, because they furnish in liberal quantities the positive alkaline, mineral matters, and when combined with liberal quantities of green vegetables and fresh fruits, give all that can be desired in the way of natural food elements.

In the present day of rapid transportation we are not confined to the articles that may be kept in the cellar, even in the most northern homes. Apples, grapes, bananas, oranges and grape fruits are cheap and plentiful the year around, while celery and cabbage, turnips and carrots, may be secured at little expense because they are easily kept. Lettuce and cucumbers, with many other green vegetables, are easily secured in the cities while any home, no matter how far away from the south or the green houses, may grow a box of parsley in the kitchen window and easily have enough not only to make an attractive decoration for the meats and vegetables but to give flavour to them, as well as to salads. The general health of the entire family will be better for this cheerful little box of green appetizer.

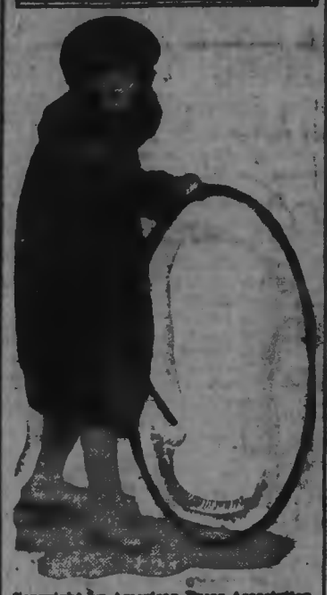
A most excellent salad that will help to counteract the effect of too much meat, bread and potatoes, can be made of apples, nuts and celery, or in place of celery you can use cabbage, carrots or tutabagas. (If any of the last three named is used it should be chopped finely.) Over this mixture should be poured a generous quantity of the Hygia dressing described by Christian in his "Uncooked Foods," which is made as follows: 2 eggs, 1 cup whipped cream, ½ lemon, sugar, 2 tablespoonfuls of olive oil and salt. To the yolks of the eggs, beaten very stiff, add the oil and the juice of the lemon very slowly, beating hard all the time, until it has all been added and is quite thick. Then add the beaten white of eggs, salt and sugar to taste, and last, one cup of whipped cream; whip all together until very stiff, and set on ice until ready to serve.

Nearly all the members of the family will like this salad, and all who partake of it three or four times a week will be benefitted.

I will gladly answer all inquiries for information on health subjects from readers of this publication if same are addressed to Home Health Club, 5039 Cottage Grove Ave., Chicago. Send full name and address, with 4 cents postage.

For the Children

Hoop Rolling Popular in the Cool Fall Days.



Copyright by American Press Association.

With the advent of the season of falling leaves with a suggestion of frost in the air, hoop rolling and roller skating are the sports most in vogue among children of the cities. In the country there are much more enjoyable ways of amusement. Take nutting, for example. City children seldom have a chance to roam the autumn woods in search of hickory nuts, shagbarks, chestnuts and other choice tree products that nature so plentifully provides in many parts of the country. So lacking these delightful expeditions to the woods, city children must be content with the parks and sidewalks for exercise and amusement. The little girl in the picture is Miss Mary Holland, daughter of Mrs. F. Raymond Holland of New York and Connecticut. Very obligingly this little girl posed for the camera man.

Points on Palmistry.

Smooth, conical fingers are a sign of talkativeness and a merry disposition.

Strong, knotted fingers show prudence and capacity.

A palm too slim, narrow and feeble indicates instinct without capacity.

If the palm is too large the person is coarse and animal-like.

If the outer joint of the fingers forms a knot the person has well arranged ideas.

The individual who has knots at the middle joints of the fingers always has a place for everything and everything in its place.

Intellect belongs to knotted fingers; grace to smooth ones.

The person whose fingers are smooth and pointed is guided wholly by inspiration and never has a reason for what he does.

Large hands mean a close attention to minute detail.

Broad nails show the owner to be retiring and gentle.

Spanish Children's Games.

Our little Spanish cousins play most of the games American children play, but the names are different. They call "pussy wants a corner" "cottage to rent" and say this little rime:

Cottage to rent, try the other side;
You see this one is occupied.

Instead of "blind man's buff" they call the game "blind hen," but it is played the same. They also play "forfeits" and "hide and seek," and all the boys are very fond of playing soldier. They like to make toy swords and guns out of sticks, and then they form in line and march around singing.

Taking Pictures of Leaves.

Take any leaf, old or young, and place it between two pieces of white paper. Have the upper paper a little damp. Over this place a light weight—two or three ordinary sized books will do—and leave it entirely alone for several days. A week is better. At the end of this time remove the weights and see what you have—a marvelous photograph of a leaf and actually made by itself! A wonderful book of leaf prints can be made in this way by anyone who will take the necessary pains.

Afternoon Tea For the Dolls.

Milk tea is the most refreshing thing for dolls. Don't put too much sugar in it, though, 'cause that'll give them the willycomsewpos, which is a terrible thing, and be sure to have animal crackers. Dolls just love animal crackers. You might invite the cat or the dog, if there happens to be one in your family, because the dolls teach them such beautiful manners.

Magic Ink.

Any writing or picture made with a solution of cobalt chloride is invisible until heated strongly for a few seconds, when the written characters or picture appear of a blue color. By simply breathing upon the paper they again disappear from view, to reappear if again heated.

Her Birthstone.

"Did Julius give you a stone set ring for your birthday?"

"Yes. Isn't it a beauty? Blue white."

"But you were born in March. The diamond is the birthstone for April."

"That's right, but as long as I know Julius my birth month is going to be April."—Judge.

OXO CUBES

In the Navy

A Naval man on one of our warships wrote when ordering further supplies of OXO CUBES:—

"The finest recommendation, I think, lies in the fact that"
"this is a repeat order for a larger amount (of OXO CUBES)"
"in order to guard against the rigours of the climate."

The coming of Winter always emphasises the value of OXO CUBES. They provide warmth, sustenance and energy to withstand the exhausting strain of the cold winter months, and enable one to recover quickly from fatigue and exposure. In the home they are handy for preparing soups, savouries, and gravies; or for a hot nourishing food-beverage at any time.

One of the most striking features of OXO CUBES is they meet the needs of all classes—and all ages.

"OXO Cubes come in so handy."

"Before I close could I ask you to send me some OXO CUBES. THEY COME IN SO HANDY in the middle of the night, and it is so freezing cold at sea now."

DRASTIC LIQUOR CHANGES.

Government Will Get Feeling of Members on Legislation.

Drastic liquor legislation can be expected at the coming session of the Ontario Legislature. The cabinet has not yet prepared any measure and no steps will be taken in this direction until the house meets. It is understood that the present plan is to wait until the government members get in caucus.

From a reliable source it is learned that a two-hour cut would be suggested and this would result in city hotels closing at 9 o'clock each evening instead of 11 o'clock and country hotels closing at 8 o'clock instead of 10 o'clock. The present cabinet has strong temperance leanings. Premier Hearst is an out and out temperance man and so is the Hon. I. B. Lucas and the Hon. Finlay G. Macdiarmid. Premier Hearst refuses to discuss the question but will not deny that liquor legislation will be brought in.

Should the legislation provide for a two-hour cut in the hours of bars, 1,400 hotels in the province would be affected.—Toronto Telegram.

How do you like Roast Beef?

—well done?
—medium?
—or rare?

ISN'T it gratifying to be able to place on the table a Roast of Beef that is juicy and tender—full of the rich, red juices which supply so much nourishment and give the roast its flavor?

It's disappointing—isn't it?—to have the meat all dried-up and the juices lost through shrinkage. Only when cooked by electricity is Roast Beef perfect. There is practically no shrinkage. The meat never dries up, and it requires no basting whatever. All the rich, red juices are retained, and the meat thus given an added flavor.

You may win a cash prize by doing so. Many have done this as will be shown by the names and addresses published below. If you find the faces mark each one you find with an X cut out the picture and send it to us, together with a slip of paper on which you have written the words "I have found all the faces and marked them." Write these nine words plainly and neatly, as in case of ties, both writing and neatness will be considered factors in this contest.

This may take up a little of your time, but as there are TWO HUNDRED DOLLARS in cash and One Hundred premiums given away, it is worth your time to take a little trouble over this matter. Remember, all you have to do is to mark the faces, cut out the picture and write on a separate piece of paper the words, "I have found all the faces and marked them."

We do not ask You to Spend One Cent of Your Money in order to enter this Contest.

Send your answer at once; we will reply by Return Mail telling you whether your answer is correct or not, and we will send you a complete Prize List, together with the names and addresses of persons who have recently received over Two Thousand Dollars in Cash Prizes from us, and full particulars of a simple condition that must be fulfilled. (This condition does not involve the spending of any of your money.)

Winners of cash prizes in our late competitions will not be allowed to enter this Contest.

This competition will be judged by two well known business men of undoubted integrity, who have no connection with this company, whose decisions must be accepted as final.

Below will be found a partial list of the names and addresses of a few persons who have won some of our larger prizes in recent contests. Although these persons are entirely unknown to us, they are our references. An enquiry from any one of them will bring the information that our contests are carried out with the utmost fairness and integrity. Your opportunity to win a good round sum is equally as good as that of anyone else, as all previous winners of cash prizes are debarred from entering the contest.

SOCIETY STOLE A MARCH.

Belgians Issued Note Bearing Head of Nation's First Queen.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 29. — A despatch from Brussels states that the Germans are annoyed at the design on the new issue of notes by the Societe General Belgique, because they bear the portrait of the first queen of the Belgians, Louise Marie.

German military authorities have announced that the new issue must not bear a portrait of a political nature, and have suggested the picture by Rubens for the new issue.

Many of the best examples of Rubens' were in Belgium before the war began and were hidden by the Belgians. It has been reported that his "Descent From the Cross," which was in the cathedral in Antwerp, was hermetically sealed and sunk in the Scheldt river to save it from being removed to Germany.

REPORT IS DENIED.

LONDON, Jan. 29. — A Central News despatch from Copenhagen gives a report that an attempt was made several days ago to assassinate King Constantine of Greece. This report is conveyed to Copenhagen in a despatch from Corstantinople, which says that the authority for the report is the statements of travelers arriving at Constantinople. The attempt on the life of the King, according to the rumors, was made at Patras, Greece.

Report Untrue.

University Debate Cancelled.

TORONTO, Jan. 29. — The debate which was scheduled between Ottawa and Toronto Universities, in Ottawa to-night, for the championship of the university debating series, was cancelled yesterday by action of the Dominion police in Ottawa. The subject was: "Resolved that Russia is a greater menace to Great Britain than Germany."

SPECIALIST EXPLAINS CAUSE OF STOMACH TROUBLE

VALUABLE ADVICE TO SUFFERERS.

"There are many different forms of stomach trouble," said a well-known specialist recently, "but practically all are traceable to excessive acidity and food fermentation. That is why the results obtained from the use of drugs are usually so disappointing. Admitting fermentation and consequent acidity of the food contents to be the underlying cause of most forms of indigestion, it naturally follows that the use of a reliable antacid, such as the pure bisurated magnesia which is so frequently prescribed by physicians, will produce better results than any known drug or combination of drugs. Accordingly I almost invariably advise those who complain of digestive trouble to eat some bisurated magnesia (note the name carefully, as other forms are unsuitable for this purpose), from their druggist, and take from one to two teaspoonfuls of the powder, or two 5 grain compressed tablets, with a little water after meals. This by immediately neutralizing the acid and stopping the fermentation, removes the cause of all the trouble and insures normal and healthy digestion."

IF KIDNEYS ACT BAD TAKE SALTS

Says Backache is Sign You Have Been Eating Too Much Meat

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about two ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

A compass indicating the depth of a bullet lodged in the flesh has been invented by Dr. Maxixe Menard, of the Cochin Hospital, in France.

The Warren Chemical Products Co. of Warren, Pa., yesterday began work on a $500,000 contract to supply gun cotton to England and Russia.

Crown Prince Frederick William of Germany has been stricken with a severe attack of influenza, and is seriously ill. He is under the care of two physicians at his headquarters.

The Novoe Vremya states that in order to establish the legal status of bomb-dropping Russia will place the Germans captured in the Zeppelin, which recently attacked Libau, on trial.

The Danish Government is making representations to the British Government in the matter of delays caused by the censor in cable communication between Denmark and the United States.

Bert. Quinn, aged 30, died in the Hotel Dieu at Kingston, yesterday as the result of injuries received late on Wednesday night, when his horse ran away. Quinn was a farmer, living on Pittsburg road.

At Brooklyn, N.Y., Louis Stone, five years old, and Dorothy, three, daily had seen their mother, Mrs. Rose Stone, bathe their infant sister, and they tried to do as she had done. The result was the drowning of the infant.

THE DETECTIVE CAMERA.

It Will Reveal a Forged Signature Where Microscopes Fail.

The camera has been frequently instrumental in the detection of criminals. In case of forgery photography is invaluable, for there is no forger in the world clever enough to baffle its detective skill. An interesting proof of this was provided a few years ago in the case of a forged will. An enlarged photograph revealed the pencilled lines over which the signatures of the testator and witnesses had been written, although no trace of them was visible through the microscope.

This is one of the peculiarities of the camera, that it brings to light marks which are invisible through a microscope, just as it has been known to reveal the signs of measles and smallpox several days before they became visible to the naked eye.

Where a forged signature is suspected the method adopted is to take photographs of the genuine and supposed false signatures, magnify each a hundredfold or more and compare the results. Under this careful test the slightest discrepancy becomes exaggerated out of close resemblance to the signature, and every sign of hesitancy—for few forgers can write a counterfeit signature with perfect ease and fluency—stands revealed.

A forged banknote, however minutely and faithfully the original may have been copied, cannot deceive the eye of the camera, which will show not only the slightest deviation from the genuine note, but also any difference in the texture of the paper used. In a recent case, where a section of a check had been removed and another piece in the form of pulp substituted with infinite skill, the camera revealed the fraud at once, showing exactly where the new and old paper were joined.—London Standard.

Solicitude.

"You don't know how I worry about my husband," said the tired looking woman as she leaned on her broom for a moment.

"Why, there's nothing to worry about," answered the neighbor. "He's sitting in a chair on the back porch, fast asleep."

"Yes. But some time when I'm not there to look after him he's going to fall out of that chair and hurt himself."

WHAT CAUSES CRYSTALS?

An Obscure Process That Plays a Large Part in Nature.

In answer to the question, "Will a sealed jar have caused crystals to appear in a supersaturated solution, or can this be produced only by the introduction of one of the crystals?" Edgar Lucien Larkin in the New York American says:

"Supersaturation and crystal formation are obscure phenomena. Let water dissolve salts until it is supersaturated when perfectly still; then let the containing vessel be suddenly moved, tapped or disturbed; then crystals of the dissolved substances will instantly form. Pure water, distilled, may be put into a closed container and a thermometer placed below the surface.

"Keep the whole very still and the water may be cooled a number of degrees below the freezing—that is, crystallising—point without crystallising. Suddenly strike the vessel and the liquid will crystallise. Many solutions of superdensity will thus behave.

"This little understood process underlying the fascinating mathematical science of crystal forming plays a highly important part in nature in the building of solids, of crystalline rocks and general structure of our house—the earth."

Serving Tea to Men.

Afternoon tea is often very much enjoyed by men, and the arrival of half a dozen or more masculines gives pleasure to the ladies assembled. Men usually like tea very hot and rather strong. Many prefer sugar and cream to lemon, and these should be provided. Salted nuts, bonbons, mints and olives with the sandwiches may well make refreshments the better enjoyed.

Lace Tea Cosies.

There are attractive tea cosies made of filet lace, mounted over silk and padded heavily under the silk. Pink is the color usually of the silk, but any desired color can be used to match the other fittings of the tea table.

Virtue of Peanuts.

The oil of the peanut has a quieting effect on the pneumogastric nerve, the largest nerve supplying the stomach. Many nervous persons who like peanuts and do not know why, like them for this reason. They quiet the nerves of the stomach. These persons should eat a few fresh roasted peanuts after each hearty meal, as many nervous conditions are due to an irritation of the pneumogastric nerve, and the peanut oil acts as a sedative to this nerve. Of course the nuts must be crisp and well chewed and not too many taken. To get the best sedative effect a handful of the hot peanuts should be eaten just before retiring. This presupposes that the powers of elimination are in good repair. The peanut, a member of the pulse family, is nutritious and would clog the system if not eaten correctly, as it is almost equal to meat.—Philadelphia Ledger.

PARALYZED LIMBS.

Today it is sleeplessness, headaches, digestive trouble and irritability. Next thing you know some form of paralysis has developed. Mr. Alex. Honsburger, 10 Moore Street, St. Catharines, Ont., writes: "Nervous trouble developed into paralysis of the limbs so that I became helpless. Doctors failed me, but after using ten boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I resumed work, and now feel better than I did for 20 years."

Men Fight For Day's Work.

MONTREAL, Jan. 29.—The struggle for existence of the city's unemployed becomes a real struggle every morning when, before daylight in Youville, at the far north side of the city, laborers fight fierce hand to hand battles for the possession of picks and shovels that they may get in a day's time on the construction of the water system.

Roumania Assures Bulgaria.

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 29. — A despatch from Berlin states that it is privately reported from Sofia that the Roumanian Prime Minister has given Bulgaria assurances that the preparations for war in Bucharest are not directed against Bulgaria.

CHAPTER XXII.

On Board the Terror.

LUCILLE awoke to a numbed sense of failure, defeat, of loss irreparable. For a few moments she allowed her head to rest against the pillows, perfectly passive, retracing the course of her efforts in the fight with Loubeque for recovery of the papers up to this disastrous conclusion.

She dressed leisurely and for some time was seated at her window scattering crumbs on the ledge for stray birds. As she crossed the room a moment later a metallic sound struck against her ears again and again before she was even conscious of it. She looked about the room, then made out the sound coming from the window ledge. Curiously she regarded the pigeon strutting about there eagerly devouring the crumbs. Upon his leg she saw a tiny brass cylinder, tap, tap, tapping with his every step.

Her heart gave her a warning, thumping violently even as she recognized the pretty creature for a carrier bird. Stepping quietly to the window of her bedroom, she stared about her, a smile crossing her face as by careful count she made out the crumbs upon the eighth window ledge from hers. That would be Hugo Loubeque's apartment.

Swiftly, softly, tremulously, for fear the bird might have fled, Lucille reached the ledge, her voice low and caressing as she reached and clasped him firmly. In a second she had detached the cylinder, taking the tiny tissue paper note from it:

Arrangements complete. Deliver papers to Ensign Howell, U. S. ship Terror, with affidavit as to sale by General Sumpter Love, now under trial, Washington, D. C. At your residence; 5:30.

Lucille gasped as she took in the meaning of the message. For just a moment she sat staring dully ahead of her, dismay and terror frozen in her eyes. At 5:30 the international spy's work would be completed and her father ruined.

She clinched her fists tightly together, pacing up and down the floor of her bath, her pretty teeth fastened upon her under lip, her very being vibrant with protest at the horrible injustice of it all. It must not be. It could not be. She stopped suddenly. If should not be. Calmly she crossed to the writing desk and added a line through the hour appointed, carefully making an eight of the five. She scanned the result of her labors with knitted brows.

She loosed the pigeon, pointing him toward a window which was open. She knew Loubeque was growing impatient from that sign. Furtively she watched the eager hands clutch the bird and draw him from view. The window slapped shut once more.

His residence she knew must mean the home of mystery, the weird place of horrors, of sliding staircases and folding rooms. That Loubeque should choose such a rendezvous showed how plainly he considered the last trick in the game of his life played, how absolutely assured he now was of absolute and final success. At 5:20 Ensign Howell would be at that house. She had three hours wherein to work.

She rose and moved toward the door, closing it softly behind her. For a moment she hesitated in the hall, then stepped boldly to the suit of the spy, rapping upon the door.

* * * * * * *

Hugo Loubeque, master of men and nations, whose power was so great the course of empires halted at his spoken word of command, moodily stared out his window after the carrier pigeon he had just released. For forty years he had bent every energy of his life for this day. And now that it had come, somehow the sweet had turned bitter upon his palate.

Strangely enough, a tender smile played about the corners of his hard mouth as he thought of the girl upon the same floor with him, the girl who was the image of the Lucille of forty years ago.

Lucille! He murmured the name over tenderly, even as his fingers plucked the precious picture of the girl's mother from his breast pocket. He had treasured that picture above all other possessions these forty years, yet now he found himself regarding it merely as the likeness of the daughter. Lucille, the daughter of that other Lucille of the long ago—

He rose impatiently, ashamed of the mellow mood that was upon him, and moved across the floor. The slight swaying of the curtains that connected with the bedroom caught his eye. He

"Keep the hand in the pocket."

but a hard look crept into his eyes. A tapping on the door made him frown impatiently, then answer it, smiling to find Lucille, dressed for the street, confronting him.

"Since the mountain won't come to Mohamet, Mohamet must go to the mountain," she quoted with a light laugh, a laugh that belied the worn expression about her lips.

"The mountain certainly knew of no desire"—laughed the spy, frank pleasure on his countenance. "Is it a walk you planned—tea?"—

"An invitation to luncheon," she returned, "and I wonder if it would be too much to ask of you to see that they give me a good machine for the afternoon."

"I'll phone," he responded, hardening instantly at the shadow of displeasure that crossed her face. Evidently she wished to be rid of him. He smiled to think of how close the game was to being finished. Somehow, he could not get any acute pleasure out of it now he looked at this smiling girl and realized that precious few would be the smiles upon that face after he had finished. But, pshaw! Why would his mind persist in thinking of such things? He bowed and repeated the hour of their engagement as she tripped down the hall, then resumed his seat at the table.

From a drawer there he took a small, thin mirror which he slipped swiftly into the flap of his glove, then placed the glove upon his hand. A grim expression was on his face as he leaned back in his chair once more, his eyes fastened upon the entrance to the bedroom as revealed to him in the mirror, an automatic pistol gripped in his free hand.

Hour dragged upon the heel of hour. Slowly the gray head of the man swayed from side to side. He caught himself abruptly. Again his head sank, toward his chest, this time to remain there. Apparently Loubeque slept as he did everything else, soundly, yet with the least possible amount of effort.

The portieres swayed more and more heavily. Grew the outlines of a human face against the smooth velvet. Through the opening came a pair of furtive eyes. Slowly, slowly, the face of Thompson showed. He did not bother to look at the slumberer. Before revealing himself he had made sure that his old master slept soundly. Swift, certain, sure, he moved beyond the curtains.

Closer, closer, a step at a time, he advanced. The hate had left his eyes, for there was no time for hate when bent on business. Almost close enough to reach out and rest a hand upon Loubeque's shoulder he was when he halted, his mouth dropping ludicrously open, his feet apparently gummed to the carpet, his fingers twitching uncertainly, his eyes fastened in amaze at his own face as it stared back at him from the tiny mirror.

As he recovered, his hand darting swiftly toward his pocket, the sinister laughter of his master broke the silence.

"Keep the hand in the pocket, Thompson. Keep it there or I shall be obliged to shoot and mess the place."

"And you thought to play with me!" Loubeque murmured wonderingly, more to himself than to his captive. "The man who knows me better than any one else thought to catch Loubeque sleeping. You dared come near me after the second affair. If I but had the time I should strangle you with these hands. They itch for the feel of your throat once more. I have a little favor to ask you"—

The thief growled something inarticulate, and his eyes glittered venomously as he fastened them upon the toes of his boots.

"Now, Thompson, just step to the telephone and call up the desk downstairs." He made a significant little gesture with the revolver in his hand, and the man hurriedly took down the receiver, his face a pasty yellow.

"Say there is a hotel sneak thief in Mr. Loubeque's apartment waiting to be arrested. Mr. Loubeque has no time to make charges now, but will return shortly or meet the procession downstairs."

The receiver dropped clattering from the thief's hand. Loubeque waved the automatic quietly toward it and, as the pitiful eyes of his former servant met his own, they read no pity there—nothing save a cold, vindictive intent. The trembling hand took up the receiver once more and, word for word, transmitted the message as it fell like icy particles from the spy's lips. Then Thompson whirled toward him.

"Turn me over, will you! Well, listen to what's coming to you when you do it. I know a thing or two"—

"You know too much," smiled the spy coolly. "That is exactly the reason I am disposing of"—

"And I know about her." The thief's hand waved toward the corridor. "Maybe I can't tell a thing or two about you and her. What's she doing here—what's the reason she got on the Empress and stuck to you ever since"—

The revolver slapped against the opposite wall as Loubeque hurled it at the man's head, following it with his flying body, his frame crashing the man to the floor, his fingers groping for the vile mouth that spluttered on.

"I ain't saying as what you and me know—I'm saying as what I can tell and what it'll look like. What"—

Loubeque turned his head suddenly, his ears fairly peaked with the eagerness of his listening. The rattle of the elevator outside reached his ears. He sprang to his feet, dragging the butler after him.

"We must get out," he breathed hoarsely. "We must away before they come. I'll—I'll kill you—for this"—

Swiftly the pair darted through the door and down the hall. Loubeque [illegible] door. It flung open. With a gasping sob of relief he dragged Thompson after him and slapped the door shut, maintaining his hold meantime.

"And that is what you would say—would tell?" His voice was not harsh, not even indignant, merely curious.

"That's what!" Thompson straightened, a touch of braggadocio about his very figure.

Slowly, inexorably, the fingers of Hugo Loubeque reached out and grasped the man's wrists. Slowly, inexorably, he pressed the cold metal of the automatic iron into the useless palm. Slowly, inexorably, that weapon bearing hand was lifted, lifted until it pressed against the bleeding lips of the thief, then stopped. Loubeque's voice was soft, purring, soothing.

"Open the teeth, my old friend—open them or I'll knock them out! Put the gun inside your mouth. It's simple—only a second—then a longer trip than you've ever taken before. Don't fight—it's useless—you should know that. Surely you won't resist and make it hard for your master. Just think—if you don't—I might be called—a murderer—while—if you follow instructions—[illegible]"—

With every syllable he rendered the writhing of the struggling man more feeble, forced the steel muzzle of the gun more and more harshly against the tender gums. As he pronounced his final judgment, the judgment he hoped would prove that of a coroner, the muffled shot beat against the walls of the room. Thompson writhed, then straightened. Loubeque held tightly to the wrists until rigor mortis gripped them about the weapon.

* * * * * * *

As Lucille stood in the doorway of Loubeque's room, her eyes always keenly suspicious to the slightest trifle when about the man, observing that as he talked with her his eyes were fastened upon the gloved hand, instantly it had struck her as strange he should wear a glove in his room. Then she caught the reflection of his eyes and saw the mirror flashing in that palm—the eyes of the man watching the curtains leading to his bedchamber. They swayed slightly. Then she made her adieus, for she knew Loubeque was not alone.

In her own room she paced the floor nervously. What did it mean? Some one had entered Loubeque's room, was spying upon him, and the surreptitious presence had been discovered. The visitor was under surveillance. But who could that visitor be? What was his motive?

Thompson—Gibson; Gibson—Thompson. Her sweetheart and the butler-thief both might have motives for such an espy. That it related to the stolen papers she had no doubt. Suppose they were taken by some other just at this last moment? But the man behind the curtains had little if any chance against Loubeque.

It was not curiosity merely that made her pince her head outside the window. She heard the mocking voice of Loubeque, but dimly. Still it was his voice and surcharged with menace. But how could she gain an entrance, how see what was transpiring?

She quietly stepped to the fire escape. Two high and wide ledges separated her from the fire escape outside the spy's suit. She dared not look down, dared not think, dared do nothing save heave a sigh of relief when she found herself safe once more outside the spy's window. It had been easy after all. She peeked within the room, strangling a little expression of rage and shame as Thompson's threat came to her ears. Breathlessly she watched the men struggling upon the floor, unable to understand the hurried retreat of both from the room. She opened the window and slipped inside, her bosom heaving tumultuously at this opportunity to search the man's suit.

The door slapped open just as she was exploring the drawer of the table. She felt herself seized by the wrists, uttered a cry of protest and dismay and pleading, only to look into strange, brutal faces, the faces of home detectives and not the sardonically friendly one of Loubeque.

Protesting, weeping, hysterical, Lucille was dragged to the elevator and bundled into a cab. Unable to think, to reason, she only realized the full extent of her calamity when the green globe before the grim police station loomed before her eyes.

She might have been unconscious, so little was she actually aware of what was transpiring. Acute, yet merely subconsciously so she knew she defended herself stoutly against the charge of being a hotel sneak thief. She feverishly cited the obvious ridiculousness of Hugo Loubeque's making such a charge against her. The sergeant was frankly puzzled.

Obviously this girl was not a thief. The brilliant idea struck him of summoning the jeweler from whom she claimed to have received the money. Also the failure to produce Loubeque argued heavily against the house detective's case.

And all the while Lucille paced up and down the floor, white faced, miserable, her lips moving as she muttered:

"Five-thirty this afternoon—Ensign Howell calls for the papers. Five-thirty—5:30—I must be there—must be—must"—

"Fruit-a-tives" Keeps Young And Old in Splendid Health

J. W. HAMMOND Esq.

SCOTLAND, Ont., Aug. 25th, 1913.

"Fruit-a-tives" are the only pill manufactured, to my way of thinking. They work completely, no griping whatever, and one is plenty for any ordinary person at a dose. My wife was a martyr to Constipation. We tried everything on the calendar without satisfaction, and spent large sums of money until we happened on "Fruit-a-tives". I cannot say too much in their favor.

We have used them in the family for about two years and we would not use anything else as long as we can get "Fruit-a-tives".

Their action is mild, and no distress at all. I have recommended them to many other people, and our whole family uses them".

Was Troubled With Choking Spells and Shortness of Breath.

When the heart becomes affected, there ensues a feeling of a choking sensation, a shortness of breath, palpitation, throbbing, irregular beating, smothering sensation, and dizziness and a weak, sinking, all-gone feeling of oppression and anxiety.

Many men and women drag along with weary step, and become worn out and haggard, when otherwise they could be strong and healthy if they would only pay some attention to the first signs of heart or nerve trouble. On the first sign of the heart becoming weakened or the nerves unstrung Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills should be given a fair trial and you will find that they will soon correct both these organs.

Mr. James Leard, Tryon, P.E.I., writes: "Just a few lines to let you know what Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have done for me. I had choking spells, and was troubled with weakness of the heart and shortness of breath. I tried three doctors but they all failed. A neighbor recommended me to try your pills, so I got a box and they helped me so much I have taken six boxes. I highly recommend them to all who are troubled with their heart and nerves. I was not able to do any work for over two years; now I can do quite a bit."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

E. B. OSLER, President.
C. A. BOGERT, General Manager.

In your last Annual Report your Directors made reference to the general financial and commercial depression then existing, which condition was much intensified through the outbreak of the war in Europe in July last, necessitating the exercise of unusual care in administrating the affairs of the Bank. It has been our endeavor to fully provide for the requirements of deserving borrowers, particularly those engaged in producing and marketing the foodstuffs of the country, at the same time maintaining strong cash reserves and liquidity of assets. This policy has been satisfactorily carried out.

The earnings were somewhat smaller than in 1913, but justified the declaration of the usual dividends and bonus after ample provision had been made for all accounts of a doubtful character and for liberal depreciation in the value of assets.

The Directors feel that you will approve of certain unusual disbursements that were made from the profits of the year, namely, contributions to the Canadian Patriotic Fund, the Canadian Red Cross Society, and the Belgian Relief Fund, reported in detail in the Statement.

It will be observed that the issue of new Capital Stock of the 15th of February, 1913, is now fully paid up, the Capital Account standing on 31st December, 1914, at $6,000,000, and the Reserve Fund at $7,000,000.

A notable event in the history of the Bank has taken place since the shareholders last met, in the completion of the new Head Office Building, which was occupied in November last. The results obtained may be considered highly satisfactory. Allowance has been made for the natural growth of the Bank's business, and every facility has been provided for the convenience of its customers; furthermore, considerable revenue will be derived from the space rented by the various tenants of the building.

During the year branches were opened at Fort Frances, Ont., and in Toronto at Yonge and Harden streets, and at the corner of McCaul and St. Patrick streets.

The following Western Branches were closed, as the business secured and the prospects did not justify their further maintenance: Hanley, Sask.; Claresholm, Alta.; Granville Street Branch, Vancouver; South Hill Branch, Moose Jaw; Hillhurst Branch, Calgary; Riverside Branch, Calgary; Fernwood Branch, Victoria.

In accordance with Section 56 of the Bank Act, and following their appointment at the last Annual General Meeting, a complete audit of the affairs of the Bank was made by your Auditors, Messrs. G. T. Clarkson and R. J. Dilworth, whose certificate is attached to the statement now submitted.

In addition, the usual inspection of all the Branches of the Bank have been made during the twelve months under review, and the Head Office Cash, Investments, and Balance Sheet of the 31st December were verified by a committee of your Directors.

E. B. OSLER, President.

Toronto, 27th January, 1915.

It was moved by Sir Edmund B. Osler, M.P., seconded by Mr. W. D. Matthews, and resolved, that the Report be adopted.

The retiring Auditors, Messrs. Geoffrey T. Clarkson and Robert J. Dilworth, were re-appointed Auditors for the current year.

The thanks of the Shareholders were tendered to the President, Vice-President and Directors for their services during the year, and to the General Manager and the other Officers of the Bank for their efficient performance of their respective duties.

The following gentlemen were duly elected Directors for the ensuing year: Messrs. A. W. Austin, W. R. Brock, James Carruthers, R. J. Christie, J. C. Eaton, J. J. Foy, K.C., M.L.A., W. D. Matthews, A. M. Nanton, E. W. Nimmo, H. W. Hutchinson, and Sir Edmund B. Osler, M.P.

At a subsequent meeting of the Directors, Sir Edmund B. Osler, M.P., was elected President, and Mr. W. D. Matthews, Vice-President, for the ensuing term.

AUDITORS' REPORT TO SHAREHOLDERS.

We have compared the above Balance Sheet with the books and accounts of the Chief Office of The Dominion Bank, and with the certified returns received from its Branches, and after checking the cash and verifying the securities at the Chief Office and two of the principal Branches on December 31st, 1914, we certify that, in our opinion, such Balance Sheet exhibits a true and correct view of the state of the Bank's affairs, according to the best of our information, the explanations given to us and as shown by the books of the Bank.

In addition to the examinations mentioned, the cash and securities at the Chief Office and two of the principal Branches were checked and verified by us during the year, and found to be in accord with the books of the Bank.

All information and explanations required have been given to us and all transactions of the Bank which have come under our notice have, in our opinion, been within the powers of the Bank.

"CASCARETS" CLEANSE LIVER AND BOWELS

No More Headache, Bad Colds, Sour Stomach and Constipation

Get a 10-cent box now.

Are you keeping your liver, stomach and bowels clean, pure and fresh with Cascarets—or merely forcing a passageway every few days with salts, cathartic pills or castor oil? This is important.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels.

No odds how sick, headachy, bilious and constipated you feel, a Cascaret tonight will straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from your druggist will keep your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels regular for months. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a gentle cleansing, too.

LEGAL ABSURDITIES.

Fine Distinctions That Are Found in the Criminal Law.

Burglary is the crime of breaking in and entering in the nighttime of another's dwelling house with an intent of committing a felony therein. This special particularity what it says. If a door or window is broken open, or the latch of an unlocked door is raised, or an unfastened window is raised, it is burglary. But if the door or window is left entirely open or even raised as much as an inch and a thief pushes or raises it entirely open and enters, it is not burglary. It means, too, a "dwelling house." Therefore if a family is sleeping in a tent or booth and a thief enters it is not burglary. If all the other conditions are met and it happens that the dawn has broken, there can be no burglary, for that part of the definition specifying the nighttime is entirely different.

We admit the[illegible] of these distinctions is necessary, the stealing or removal of movable property, which requires that the thief must get complete control. Thus if a thief in attempting to steal a watch lifts it out of a man's pocket and it is not attached to the owner by a chain, if the thief gets it into his hand for a moment only it is larceny and felony. If, however, the watch is attached to the clothing, even though the pickpocket cannot see the chain, as might happen in a crowd, he has not had complete control, and the act is not larceny, but only a misdemeanor. The difference of the two terms relates only to the length of the sentence. But if it is your watch and you wish to use the trial of the would be thief proceed you still do well to see that the indictment does not charge the wrong word.—Clifford B. Harter in McClure's Magazine.

INGENIOUS BOOKKEEPING.

How Doctors May Have Some Keep Track of Their Business.

The Medical Record quotes from a writer in the British Medical Journal who suggests that physicians should make bankers serve as their bookkeepers. Sir John Collie is the author of this system. His plan is to keep two banking accounts at the same bank.

"The first, No. 1," says the writer, "is his ordinary current account, into which he should pay all the money he receives, whether in the form of cash or checks. It is an excellent rule never to spend a penny which has not come to one through the banking account. The physician should never get checks which have been paid to him cashed by the local tradesmen. He should either pay his creditors with his fees. Every single item received from the physician's practice each day, week and to another should go through his banking account No. 1. If the physician has been tempted to use a five dollar bill which came into him paid into his prescription or a reward or if he has bought stamps with his salary which some patient left in his office, that he should draw a check for the amount, cash it and pay the money into his bank. Then, and then only, can he regard his practice till bookkeeping.

"If this physician conducts the ordinary or what is left his practice, then, and then only, whether his other business books are kept well or not, the lawyer or the medical agency of the practitioner who wades through his affairs with relish to find some method of knowing great results and getting some idea of the real intrinsic value of the business will from the physician's bank book alone tell the total cash receipts from the practice upon which to found the purchase price.

"At the end of every year the balance should be balanced, and if the doctor cannot balance them himself or has not the time the comparatively small sum which a professional accountant will charge, say $5 or $10, will be well repaid."

The Smile of God's Love.

As the ice upon the mountain, when the warm breath of summer's sun caresses upon it, melts and divides into drops, each of which reflects an image of the sun, so life, in the smile of God's love, divides itself into separate forms, each bearing in it and reflecting an image of God's love.—Longfellow.

Fourteen Year Old French Boy On Firing Line

Ran Away From Home and Soldiers Could Not Keep Him Away

SCOUTS FOOLED

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE.

MERVILLE, Jan. 29. — Though much is often told of many of the actions in the war and the names of places hitherto unknown, or now familiar, little has been said of many of the soldiers who have done brave and courageous deeds, and their names are unknown. Let me tell of two of those who were connected with the taking of La Maison du Passeur (the Ferryman's House), of which much has been written. This undertaking was carefully prepared by our troops, and it was to this fact that we owed our success. The ground had been inspected by Under Lieutenant Pellegrin, chief of the detachment of volunteers in charge of the assault. He himself went scouting and ordered some of his non-commissioned officers to help him. One of these, Sergeant-Major Boisseau, deserves special mention for the bravery and presence of mind that he showed in his perilous exertion. He left at nightfall in a pouring rain. He had put on a German overcoat in order to slip more easily into the German lines. With great caution, very often crawling, he came within a few yards of the enemy's trenches.

Fooled the Sentry.

Suddenly a German sentry hidden behind a slope rose and shouted, "Wer da," aiming at him. Our man had an inspiration. Three paces away from the sentry he said, "Hush!" placing a finger on his lips as to beg from him an absolute silence; then he pointed towards the French lines with his head. The sentry lowered his gun, not suspecting for a minute that this non-commissioned officer was not one of his own going on a scouting expedition.

Our man got away then, and taking advantage of the darkness came back towards the enemy's trenches again. A new sentry shouted "Wer da," and again the same strategian fooled the man on watch. After exploring a good deal of the German lines, he came back towards our hearing someone moving in the darkness someone moving in the darkness shouted his "Wer dat?" Our friend, very pleased not to have to fool again, shouted back with a sigh of relief the rough word that Gen. Cambronne, made famous at Waterloo.

"I never felt so happy," he said afterward, "than this time when I was able to shout that to the German sentry."

Pluck—14 Years Old.

Men are not the only brave ones, and children very often have shown an extraordinary spirit for their age. A friend of mine living in Nantes wrote me a letter relating the story of a little friend of his.

In August Marcel Huchon, 14 years old, left his father's house and got in one of those cattle cars filled with straw, which very often accompanies our military trains. He hid there, as he could, and remained in the straw for days, getting food from the soldiers. They admired his good-will, but thought he was too young to undertake such an expedition, and a military station master in the North, forced him to step out of the train.

The young Huchon in despair, succeeded in getting away from his jailer and got in another train. More prudent this time, he left his hiding place only in Belgium and followed the regiment to the firing line.

The soldiers did not wish to expose him to the constant danger of the bullets, so they made him a cook, and he had to watch the cooking during the battle. He did not watch it for a long time, for very soon the soldiers saw him among them, and he had an overcoat, a "kepe," a gun, and munitions. The boy followed a regiment everywhere until fatigue forced him to leave the front. He was sent back to Nantes to his home, and was feeling bored in the quiet life.

Questioned about his adventures, he had little to say, and quietly remarked that he had killed 20 Germans.

Putting It on the Map.

Captain Cook shows in his "Voyages" how some of the mouth filling place names on maps are evolved. "Off New Zealand there is an island called by the natives 'Matuaro.' One of my officers, having asked a native the name of that isle, the latter replied, 'Kematautro,' putting 'the' before the name, as is the custom. The officer, hearing the sound imperfectly, repeated his question, whereupon the native repeated his reply, emphasizing it with the word 'uta,' which means 'indeed.' So in the logbook Matuaro was transformed into 'Kumetiwarrowata.'"—London Globe.

He Rivaled Cicero.

Quintus Hortensius, the Roman orator, would have come down in history with great fame had any of his speeches been preserved. He died in the year 50 B. C. He was a soldier and statesman, and his mentality can be judged from the fact that he was a rival of Cicero.

His Future Assured.

"I don't know what to do with that kid of mine."

"Is he disobedient?"

"Not exactly. But whenever I tell him to do a thing he wants to debate the matter a long time."

"He will grow up to be a senator."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Ten Minutes' Home Treatment Works Wonders, Stops Falling Hair, Ruining Scalp and Dandruff and Makes the Hair Soft, Brilliant, Lustrous and Fluffy.

Better than all the so-called "hair tonics" in the world is a simple old fashioned home recipe consisting of pain's Bay Rum, Lavolin, (de Composee), and a little Menthol Crystals. These three mixed at home in a few minutes, work wonders with any scalp. Try it just one night and see. Get from your druggist 2 oz. Lavolin, 6 oz. Bay Rum and ¼ drachm Menthol Crystals. Dissolve the Crystals in the Bay Rum and pour in the 6 oz. bottle. Then add the Lavolin, shake well and let stand for an hour before using. Apply it by putting a little of the mixture on soft cloth. Draw this cloth slowly through the hair, taking just one small strand at a time. This cleanses the hair and scalp of dirt, dust and excessive oil and makes the hair delightfully soft, lustrous and fluffy. To stop the hair from falling and to make it grow, apply the mixture briskly into the scalp with the finger tips or a medium stiff brush. Apply night and morning. A few days' use and you will not find a single loose or straggling hair. They will be looked on your scalp as bright as a new dollar and dandruff and dandruff germs will disappear and itching cease. You will find fine downy new hairs sprouting up all over your scalp and this new hair will grow with wonderful rapidity.

Any druggist can sell you the above. The preparation is very inexpensive and can be mixed at home as directed and is effective and pleasant to use.

LIFE'S BATTLE.

I am sorry for the man, for the woman, who does not know that life is a battle, who does not know what grim of toil and sacrifice it calls for everything that we are or shall. Not to know this, and to be thinking each day of the world's end, it a kind of unreality and insanity.—Theodore C. Williams.

FURIOUS FIGHTING NEAR LABASSEE

GERMAN ASSAULTS ARE REPULSED

GERMANS RENEW ATTACKS ON THE BRITISH LINES

Desperate Assaults By At Least Three German Battalions At Givinchy—Germans Reached the First Line of British Trenches, But Were Annihilated With the Bayonet or Taken Prisoners

CONDITIONS ARE QUIET AT SOISSONS

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PARIS, January 30.—3 p.m. official.—Furious fighting is in progress near Labassee. Renewing their desperate infantry assaults on the British positions, the Germans thus far have been repulsed with heavy losses. Official despatches to-day stated that at least three German battalions are engaged in this latest attempt to crush the British and drive them westward toward Bethune. Givinchy, held by the British, and the scene of bloody fighting earlier in the week, is again the centre of the German attack.

The Germans advanced from Labassee westward over the Bethune road, leading along the north bank of the canal. The absence of rain and snow in the past few days had dried up the fields in front of the English positions and the enemy spread out in loose formation in their charging upon the British trenches.

The British light artillery shattered the foremost ranks, but the Germans pressed on over the fields. Scattered groups succeeded in penetrating the wire entanglements and reaching the first line of the British trenches.

These were either annihilated by the bayonets of the British or taken prisoners. Fighting is still in progress but the despatches from Bethune expressed confidence that the German assaults would be beaten off. A German blunder caused a frightful explosion in the enemy's ranks in the Woevre district. The Germans accidentally exploded a mine for the destruction of French trenches. Instead, their own trenches were blown up, killing and wounding an entire company. They were forced to retreat to their second line of earthworths.

French artillery got the range of an artillery camp near Arras. Shells from the French guns wrecked several ammunition carts, the explosion killing a number of the German gunners. The results of the shelling were observed by French aviators.

Elsewhere along the battle front there were no important developments. The Germans showed no inclination to continue the fighting near Soissons.

An official review of the war issued here this afternoon declares that the past week has been characterized by serious German checks at Ypres and in the Labassee region, and in the absence of fighting around Soissons. German defeats were attributed to the increasing strength of the allies in both men and ammunition.

"Our supreme offensive will be postponed until we can attack with the maximum strength obtainable," it was stated.

NEW YORK, January 30.—Practically every newspaper and press association in New York received an anonymous letter to-day signed, "The Secret Order of Neutral Americans," and labelled "first warning," which demanded an "absolute and real neutrality" from government and the press on a threat of recourse to "terrorism."

The letter also demands that the press throw its support to force the removal of Secretary Bryan, require the passing of the ship purchase bill, the prohibition of the export of war material, and change of press from pro-British to pro American attitude.

GERMANY'S STRUGGLE FOR GOLD

LONDON, January 30.—On the question of Germany's financial mobilization, Sir Edward Grey said: "Germany's exports undoubtedly fell off to a much greater extent than her imports, and the adverse balance will have to be paid in gold. Superhuman efforts are being made to increase the gold reserve in the Reichs-bank, which now amounts to $530,000,000, but already withdrawals are taking place to pay for imports. Plans for the financial mobilization of Germany were carefully worked out long before the war. When hostilities began war banks were created in all the important German towns, and war bank notes were issued for the purpose of driving gold from circulation into the Reichsbank. There was one defect, however, that the Reichsbank note which replaced this gold became inconvertible into gold, which caused the note to fall to a discount."

KONIGSBERG IS MENACED BY THREE ARMIES

Development of a New Offensive South of Insterburg Indicated in Official Despatches

RUSSIANS ON MOVE

SPECIAL CABLE:

PETROGRAD, Jan. 30. — Three great Russian armies are now advancing upon the strongly fortified German seaport of Konigsberg.

The developments of the new offensive south of the railroad leading from Insterburg to the East Prussian capital was indicated in despatches from the Front to-day.

Moving along the line south-east of Insterburg, a third Russian force, whose presence in East Prussia has not been recorded in official statements, is attempting to cross the Angerap River at Darkehmen.

Its object is to march on Insterburg from the south and then move westward along the railroad to Konigsberg.

The bombardment of Bridgehead at Darkehmen was in progress to-day, and despatches to the War Office asserted the shell fire was effective.

A second Russian army, moving westward upon Konigsberg on the north-east of Insterburg, continues its successful advance beyond Pillkallen, whose occupation was officially confirmed by the War Office last night.

The army of the North-west to-day engaged with the enemy at the northern outskirts of Tilsit.

MAY LEAVE WEDNESDAY

Mounted Rifles Are Informed This Morning That They Will Probably be Moved Next Week

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

The members of the local squadron of the 8th Mounted Rifles, Third Contingent, were informed this morning by Major S. T. Medd that the squadron may leave for the mobilization camp at Ottawa on Wednesday of next week, although this has not yet been definitely decided upon.

The squadron is nearly up to strength at the present time, and the daily drilling here has had a beneficial effect on the men. They will give a good account of themselves at Ottawa and later on, judging by their bearing and conduct here.

Word has been received that Lieut. Carruthers of Kingston has been appointed to the local squadron in place of Lieut. Hughes of Bowmanville, whose illness prevented him from accepting the appointment.

The 57th detachment of the 39th Battalion is hard at work drilling, with two sessions a day. The men are rounding into shape, and they will add to the good name won for the regiment by the first and second contingents.

A squad of military police, consisting of two non-commissioned officers and two privates, have been appointed. The police look after the men off parade. Last evening they had occasion to arrest two Lindsay soldiers who accompanied the hockey excursion here, and who had imbibed not wisely but too well. The men were released in time to take the special train home.

The members of C Company will give a farewell concert to-night to Captain Carruthers and the members of their company who are leaving with the third contingent.

C Company has 33 men with the first contingent at Salisbury, 15 with the second contingent at Kingston, and 10 men are leaving with the third contingent.

FAST DAY IN ITALY

SPECIAL CABLE:

ROME, Jan. 30.—All Italy on Monday will observe a day of fasting.

Prayers will be offered to the Blessed Virgin, begging her intercession against earthquakes during the next twelve months.

The Fast Day was an annual observance in Italy for centuries, up to last year. The devout now firmly believe the earthquake of 13th January came as a divine reproof at the abandonment of the old custom.

BIG WEEK FOR THE CURLERS BEGINS MON.

Peterborough curlers face a strenuous week, beginning with 1st February. The first of the Fitzgerald-Bottom games and the return Neill-Shepard games will be played here on Monday.

Two Tankard rinks go to Toronto on Tuesday and the local bonspiel opens here the same day, continuing until Thursday.

The club will have to move their forces skilfully, not only to secure the love of the sport, but also a share of the honours.

PETES WON AT BOWMANVILLE AND TIED UP DISTRICT

The Petes tied up the district last night when they defeated Bowmanville in the rubber town by 12 goals to 8. They had little trouble in getting away with the decision, and the margin between the teams would have been a good deal bigger if the Petes had chosen to exert themselves in the last period. In the opening session they scored seven goals while Bowmanville failed to find the nets. It was 11 to 2 at the end of the second period, and with a hard game coming Monday, they let up in the last period, when Bowmanville outscored them 6 to 1. Everybody let up and took things easily and, with the forwards not checking back, Bowmanville worked in with combination. The Petes came through in good shape with the exception of Park, who was cracked on the ankle. He will be all right, however, by Monday night.

Goal—James.
Defence—Hunter and Pethick.
Rover—Halpin.
Centre—Paul.
Right wing—Maines.

HYDRO COMMISSION SEEK TO COLLECT AN ACCOUNT FOR $1,290.75

For Light That Was Never Used—Current Was Lost Through One of the Transformers—Finance Committee "Staggered"

WHO'S TO BLAME

To be presented with an account for over twelve hundred dollars for electric current that was dissipated through one of the transformers connected with the City's street lighting system, was the disagreeable experience of the Finance Committee, at a meeting that was held yesterday afternoon. It will be remembered that shortly after the present street lighting system was installed on George, Hunter, Simcoe and Charlotte streets the Power Committee of the City Council came to the conclusion that there was an excessive amount of light on these streets, especially as operating and maintenance expenses were high, and in consequence thereof ordered the lights to be "staggered". That is to say, every other light on each side of the streets named was cut out. That should have the effect of cutting the light bill in two, but instead of that the current consumption was higher during the subsequent months, up until the time the Public Utilities Commission assumed control of the system. This circumstance is attributed to the fact that the current was allowed to pass through the two transformers just the same as it did previous to the time the lights were "staggered," and the Westinghouse meter that was installed, continued to measure up the current as though the full number of lights were on.

Paid the Bill.

The sub-station where the offending transformer is located, is situated on George street, between Sherbrooke and Dalhousie streets. Since the street lighting system was installed this station has been operated by the City.

The current was supplied by the Peterborough Light and Power Company, in accordance with an arrangement with the Hydro Electric Commission of Ontario, who checked up the records respecting the amount of current used and then sent the bills on to the City for final payment. It was just such an account as this that staggered the Finance Committee, especially when it was learned that the lights were never used, and that the current was lost through one of the transformers. It appears that the Hydro Commission has paid the bill as presented by the Peterborough Light and Power Company, and is now looking to the City for payment of the account which represents the amount of $1,290.75.

Blames the Hydro.

Ald. Stratton, in submitting the bill to the Committee, said what he had been informed that a mercury retractor connected with the transformer, was the cause of the present loss in current.

PETERBOROUGH BOY ARRESTED AS A SPY WILL TELL THE STORY

In our advertising columns is to be found the announcement of a "Lecture on Germany," to be given by Mr. Melville Staples, in the Collegiate Institute hall, on Friday evening, February 5th, under the auspices of the Women's Teachers' Association. Mr. Staples is well qualified by gifts of oratory, as by opportunity and personal experience, to deal with the subject in an enlightening and interesting manner. He was in Germany, engaged in the study of music, before the war broke out, and witnessed the conditions attendant upon the rapid mobilization of the German forces, and the attitude of the populace. He had the experience of being arrested as a spy and tried, but acquitted by help of his papers. His relation of these facts will form a thrilling chapter of experience of a fellow citizen. Mr. Staples being a resident of Cavan. He is now studying theology at Knox College.

Be Fair To Peterborough

Whatever you are buying, first ask the question: "Can you show me something made in Peterborough?" Then study the Peterborough article—let it be Quaker Oats, an electric lamp, a cream separator, a lock, a suit of clothes, a carpet, or a broom. There are some thirty-five or forty factories here now, and more coming. If the Peterborough article is the equal of any other product you may have in your mind, then say: "I'll take the one made in Peterborough." This is all that is asked by the manufacturers here now.

After you have read this, read it to your family, in your business associates, too, and ask them if it isn't a fair square proposition — fair to you and to Peterborough. If you like the idea you will put it into practice. There will never be a better day than to-day to begin.

A GOOD CHOICE.

There's something in a name. A bank name identical with the name of the status of Canada, while it may not need such assistance derives advantage from the identity of nomenclature. A citizen recently returned from a trip in the United States, reaching into benighted sections where the notes of Canadian banks, as a current medium of payments, are refused, states that an exception is made in the case of Dominion of Canada one two two dollar notes. And on account of the name, the notes of the Dominion Bank are accepted when the notes of other banks are refused. There's certainly something in a name under such circumstances. Bank promoters that selected a name corresponding with the imperial status of Canada, made a good choice.

A GOOD YEAR FOR THE DOMINION.

There's a good deal in a name. A bank that shares the name of our Dominion, also, it appears, shares its prosperity. The shareholders of the Dominion Bank must have been highly pleased with the statement of the bank's affairs as presented to them at the annual meeting in Toronto last Wednesday.

For the year ended 31st December, 1914, the Dominion Bank earned net profits of $925,364, which is but some $25,000 less than during the previous year. Altogether the bank had $1,761,000 available for distribution made up of balance brought forward from previous year $647,000, net profits $925,000, and premium on new stock $189,000. Dividend requirements being at the rate of 12 per cent. with a bonus of 2 per cent. absorbed $836,000, while Officers' Pension Fund and the Canadian Patriotic Fund each received $25,000, and other patriotic donations amounted to $3,500. Incidentally it may be remarked that the bank is paying the salaries of all employees at present on military service. To the reserve fund was transferred $181,000, bank premises account absorbed $100,000, while there was set aside for possible depreciation in value of assets $300,000, leaving a balance to be carried forward of $204,000. The reserve fund now stands at $7,000,000, and the paid up capital is $6,000,000.

The bank is particularly strong in gold, silver, and other quickly available assets. These total over $27,300,000 constituting more than 40 per cent. of the bank's total liabilities to the public. An examination of the report shows that there have been slight decreases in current loans and in total deposits. The total assets now stand at $68,457,000, making the Dominion Bank rank as one of the largest of our financial institutions. Mr. John Crane is the well-known and capable manager of the local branch of this important bank.

PATRONIZE THE PATRIOTIC CONCERT.

A concert to raise funds for patriotic purposes, will be presented under the auspices of the Women's War Fund committee, in the Grand Opera House on Monday evening, February 8th. There are two main reasons for a generous public patronage. The public by attending will at once give themselves, the pleasure of helping on a good cause, having for its object the comfort of our soldiers, who are fighting for us while we rest in peace and safety at home, and giving themselves the enjoyment of a musical programme of unusual excellence, contributed by first-class artists — Frank Oldfield, Leo Smith, 'cellist; Miss Ada Richardson, soprano, and Miss Jean Kilmaster, pianiste, and the Conservatory Orchestra. This latter fact is an additional appeal in itself. We encourage home-buying and home patronage of our merchants, and we should encourage that excellent organization, the Conservatory Orchestra, a home institution, of large deserving and capability. We can thus combine local patriotism with our national patriotism. We have many appeals to our generosity, but not all of them give such splendid value for our contributions. Unfortunately all the receipts will not be profit. The Opera House, at a greatly reduced price for the occasion will have to be paid for as well as the visiting artists, but every cent of receipts beyond expenses will be turned in to provide comforts for our soldiers. Of the 800 tickets at 50c assigned for advance sale, 400 are in the hands of the War Fund Committee and 400 in the hands of the members of the orchestra. Even the friendly rivalry as to which party shall sell the most tickets, should be frowned down by the public, which can destroy the rivalry by buying up the whole 800 tickets and thus leaving neither one ahead. What we read in the recent report of what the Woman's War Fund Committee has done to help our soldiers in their hardships, should incite us to give them still further opportunity and aid.

THOROUGHNESS.

The Dominion Department of Agriculture has issued a timely publication entitled "Agricultural War Book." The main object of it is to stimulate increased crop production. This idea involves, especially in realtion to the Northwest, increased acreage.

But that is not the great essential. Mr. C. C. James, Agricultural Commissioner, Ottawa, and one of the most capable and thoughtful authorities, in a recent statement, points out that acreage alone is not the chief object, which he says in increased production of area already under cultivation.

In this he emphasized the importance of thoroughness in farming, otherwise intensive farming. One of the evils of our agricultural industry is that most farmers try to cultivate too much land, with the results of unsatisfactory return. A farm of fifty acres throughly tilled will produce, and more economically produce, more than a hundred acre farm skimmed over. Thus with more capital tied up smaller dividends are actually, and pro rata, much smaller dividends, are realized.

An an example of the benefits of intensive farming—thoroughness—Denmark is a shining mark. That country has an area of only 15,042 square miles as compared with Ontario's, 260,862 square miles, and a population very much the same—Denmark's population (in 1911), 2,757,076; Ontario's (in 1911), 2,523,287. Yet Denmark exported in 1908 of agricultural, chiefly dairy, products, since very largely increased, to the value of 89 million dollars. Denmark's total trade is 1,000 million dollars, about the same as the Dominion of Canada with four times the population and two hundred times greater area.

The cause of the immense productiveness of Denmark is the thoroughness applied to all her national affairs. Denmark, like Ontario, is an agricultural country. The Agricultural War Book says Denmark's "land is far from rich; the climate is not of the best, and the winters are long." But agriculture is, so to speak, organized down to the ground, and under the ground, and all through. There is the most complete method and intense application of it. And the results are astounding, especially in comparison. While Ontario, with the same population and nearly twenty times more land, imports butter and eggs and chilled meats from the other side of the world, Denmark sends to Great Britain every year 190 million pounds of butter, 216 million pounds of bacon, and 37 million dozens of eggs.

These things are cited to illustrate the value of thoroughness in agriculture. Intensive farming in Denmark is conjoined with intense exploitation of every one of her resources. This results in her far outstripping Ontario, with infinitely greater area and better land, and generally better climatic conditions. In Denmark the soil is tilled with conscientious thoroughness; in Ontario, as a rule, the land is merely scratched, and with corresponding results.

If we must respond to the call of the Agricultural War Book—"Patriotism and production more than usual," we shall do so more thoroughly by the practice of more thorough methods—make two blades of grass grow where one grew before, as a type of more intensive agriculture. Mr. James is authority for the fact, that Ontario does not produce in any one line of farming industry half of what it is capable of producing. This is because we apply half measures to our farming—neglect the practice of the virtue of thoroughness.

This principle applies in all our interests. Peterborough, in common with almost every other municipality, has execrable streets, considering the expenditure upon them, and the favourable conditions of construction. By the practice of thoroughness in construction Peterborough could have the best streets of any city in Canada. The soil conditions are superb—a dry porous soil of gravel—a natural good road, which with comparatively little outlay and thoroughness of construction could be converted into superb streets.

But when we neglect the basic principles of good street construction—neglect of thorough surface drainage, for which natural conditions are unsurpassed; neglect of the basic—in more than a punning sense—of thoroughly prepared and rolled foundations, we cannot expect even temporary, not to say permanent, good results. A farmer skims over fifty acres of his farm and gets less return than he would get from twenty-five acres thoroughly tilled. We skim over a wide surface of streets, scattering unscreened gravel mixed with earth clods, broad-cast, and in patches without reference to foundation or drainage. We are, therefore, forever making streets that won't stay made. Our street-making, like woman's work, is never done—never done properly and never finished.

If twenty-five or thirty years ago we had adopted the policy of thoroughness in street making and built a mile or two of thoroughly well built streets, we should have had nearly the whole city covered with permanent streets, only to be kept in repair to remain forever.

What is known as the "Gravel Road" was well built forty or fifty years ago. Its essential part, the foundation and drainage are there yet, and with comparatively little cost for manitenance it will be like the old Roman roads in Britain, built two thousand years ago — and built thoroughly — in comfortable use for years and years to come.

We, as a people—a swift people, an enterprising people — in our mania for quick results, overshoot the mark by failure to apply thoroughness of methods. We skim over our work in farming; in road building and education, and fall short of the best results. In all these things we try to cover too much ground. We farm too much land with unsatisfactory results; we try to cover by slipshod methods too much street mileage, with wasteful and unsatisfactory results; we try to cram our overloaded curriculum of school studies into the space of too short a time, with the result that we spend great sums to give a smattering of a score of subjects, and do not lay the solid foundation of education as we fail to lay solid foundations for our streets. We lose sight of the value of thoroughness and show disregard of the fitness and truth of the adage that "whatever is worth doing is worth doing well."

WORSE THAN A SPY.

At Winnipeg the other day four hundred men under training for war service arose as one man and protested against the quality of the food supplied by the Militia Department. There was such odoriferous proof of their complaint that the officer of the mess sent it all away and substituted cheese. In Winnipeg it is stated that the Government let the contract for feeding the men to a political supporter for twenty-five cents per man per meal and that, not being in that line of business himself, he farmed out the contract to a caterer for fourteen cents, making a profit of eleven cents on every meal with which every man in the Seventeenth and Eighteenth Batteries, the Army Service Corps and the Medical Corps was served—a profit amounting to over $180.00 per day! It is almost incredible but, if the facts be as stated, the man who got the contract from the Government should be court-martialled and shot. And he probably should not be shot alone.—Montreal Herald-Telegraph.

No Need For Substituting Conscription For Volunteers

Lord Curzon's speech in the House of Lords has been, as it was perhaps intended to be, the signal for an outburst of conscription propaganda in the Unionist Press, the Spectator and the Daily Mail singing together, and the Morning Post shouting for joy. The tactics initiated by Lord Curzon are simple. The Government are asked to name the ultimate number of men which they expect to have to raise. If they did so there would be an immediate opening for the conscriptionists, who, whatever the figures were, could either denounce it as too low or else prove that it could not possibly be attained on a voluntary basis. Lord Lucas, on behalf of the War Office, declined to give any figure, for the obvious military reason that all figures of the kind need to be concealed from the enemy. There is another equally good reason—namely, that no sane administrator can possibly know. Granted that it be feasible by a stroke of the compelling pen to call up some millions of Britons to the colours forthwith, we fear that the pen has not been invented which can call rifles, uniforms, ammunition, camps, or training-officers into existence with the same immediacy. Lord Kitchener can only increase our supply of these indispensable ingredients for army-making by weekly instalments, which no doubt he is in a position to gauge to a nicety. When he says that recruiting is satisfactory, he presumably means that the instalments of men do not lag behind the instalments of other indispensable factors. It would be no good telling us that we want some millions more recruits immediately, because we could not drill them or arm them if we had them. Equally it would be no good telling us that we must maintain our present rate of weekly enlistments for, say, another 40 weeks, because it is impossible to foresee whether the war will last 40 weeks or a less time or a longer.

Manifestly our busines for the present is to go on as we are doing, increasing our army weekly by such additions as can be utilized. The business of the individual eligible for recruiting is to get his name as soon as possible registered on the list of those willing to serve, so that the authorities can call him up as soon as they want him. This system, if the men of the nation continue to manifest the fine patriotism which they have shown hitherto, will last us for a very long time yet; and, indeed, the figure of registrations which Lord Kitchener gave from the very small portion of the householders' return then complete shows that he has his problem well in hand. In these circumstances one can see no likely result from the present talk about conscription, except to make a very undesirable breach in our present national unity of spirit and purpose. Undoubtedly(as Lord Handane said, the safety of the State is the supreme test; and if ever we find that necessary men cannot be had voluntarily, they will be had by compulsion. In the same way one might say that the power of life and death lies behind the discipline on a battleship, and sailors who refuse to obey orders voluntarily can be shot. However true that may be, a captain who spent his time on the bridge shouting the fact to the crew in season and out of season would not be a good officer; and politicians who talk conscription at the present juncture are guilty of a closely analogous folly.—London Chronicle.

NO JINGO TALK PLEASE.

William Howard Hearst, Premier of Ontario, addressing the Canadian Club at New York, is reported to have declared that "this is a war for the supremacy of the earth of the English-speaking people." Not at all. William Howard, not at all. This is a war to make it quite clear that no race has any right to aspire to supremacy over the earth. This is a war to establish the right of the British to be supreme in Great Britain, the Canadians in Canada, the French in France, the Servians in Servia, the Russians in Russia, the Belgians in Belgium—yes, and the Germans in Germany. This is a war to establish the world law that all nations, irrespective of their size and fighting weight, are equal and have the same rights to "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." We want no jingo talk at this stage of the war, or later —Manitoba Free Press.

End Came Quickly.

The experiences of local jewelers with prospective bridegrooms have been many and varied. Some wish to buy on the installment plan, some wish to take a half dozen sizes to be sure of a fit and some bring "beautiful verses" to see whether they can be engraved in the ring.

One jeweller in recounting his experiences said a young man came into his store and when asked whether he wished anything engraved inside the ring became confused, fumbled a bit in his pockets and finally produced a paper on which was scrawled, "The love that never endeth," which the jeweler said was just the proper sentiment.

A month later the young man returned and told the whole history of his marital life in five words, "Can't you cut that out?" pointing to the engraved sentence.

Glacier National Park.

Glacier National park is in northern Montana and is bounded on the north by the Canadian line, on the east by the Blackfoot Indian reservation and on the south and west by Flathead river. It has an area of about 915,000 acres and derives its name from many glaciers, which are scattered throughout its area. There are about eighty glaciers, between five square miles and a few acres in area. The park is a rugged mountainous region and contains over 250 lakes, which are surrounded by steep and beautifully wooded mountains or precipitous rock walls. The methods of transportation in the park are by automobile, horse stage, launches on the lakes and saddle and pack horses.

Bird Houses.

Martins, bluebirds, and wrens do not take kindly to houses made of new, bright wood. Their instincts lead them to prefer the places which more closely resemble the insides of decayed trees, in which their ancestors have nested from time immemorial. Build your birdhouses to suit the birds rather than to please your own tastes.

NOTICE

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, that an application will be made by the Roman Catholic Episcopal Corporation for the Diocese of Peterborough in Ontario, Canada, to the Legislature of Ontario, at the next Session thereof, for an Act amending the Act of Incorporation of the said Corporation, passed in the Forty-Sixth Reign of Her Late Majesty Queen Victoria, Chapter 65, so as to enlarge the powers of the said Corporation, to borrow moneys on the security of Promissory Notes and Bills of Exchange and for such purposes to make, draw, endorse, become a party to and deliver Promissory Notes and Bills of Exchange, without the necessity of affixing the Corporate Seal thereto.

The reason for the enlargement of the powers of the said Corporation as aforesaid is that it requires to borrow moneys from time to time for its purposes in various sums and on such terms of repayment as to render it highly inconvenient to execute and deliver mortgage securities on the real estate of the said Corporation.

DANIEL O'CONNELL,
Solicitor for the Applicant.

The Brussel's Burgomaster's Millions.

(Petit Parisien.)

The authentic story of M. Max is this: Some time after his arrival in Brussels Field Marshal von der Goltz summoned the Burgomaster and told him that the city had been ordered to pay a war contribution, of which it had not made a centime. "I order you," said the Field Marshal, "to pay the first installment of this indemnity, namely, at least five million francs ($1,000,000) within forty-eight hours."

The time-limit having expired M. Max called upon the Field-Marshal. Four employees from the Town Hall followed him, bent beneath the weight of enormous parcels. The Field-Marshal tore open the envelope of one of the parcels and examined it.

"What audacity!" he exclaimed. "I asked for gold and you bring me requisition notes of the German army. You are making fun of me, monsieur."

"Are not these notes redeemable?" asked M. Max with his most naive air.

"Evidently," replied the Field-Marshal.

"Well," said the Burgomaster, "as the officer who signed them told me that they were as good as bullion, I return you this gold."

M. Max afterwards was arrested and sent to the fortress of Ingolstadt.

Sidelights On the War

Canada's Gift of a Million Bags of Flour Has Been Nearly All Distributed —3,6000 P. O. Men Enlisted

LONDON, Jan. 28—Nearly all of Canada's war gift of a million bags of flour has now been distributed. The following table shows where it has gone:

For relief of local distress, 90,474.
Belgian refugees, 1,691.
Damaged flour sold, 3,219.
Sold by Wiles and Son, 1,509.
Transferred to War Office, 339,760.
Commission for relief of Belgians, 443,886.
Total, 940,530.

It is estimated that Canada's million bags of flour will make 67,000,000 two-pound loaves. The flour taken over by the War Office has already been sent to the army in France.

30,000 P.O. Men Volunteer.

Thirty thousand men connected with the British general post office have joined the army. The number of deaths among the soldiers from this branch of the Government service since the war began has reached a total of 570.

The employees who have not volunteered for service at the front have formed an organization which will provide for the families of those who have gone. The organization has levied a voluntary contribution of forty cents on every hundred dollars of the salaries of members, and this assessement will bring in nearly $400,000 a year. Already benefits have been assigned to 280 widows.

Charges that army and navy contractors have sold to the Government at higher figures than to private consumers will be pressed when the House of Commons reassembles February 2nd. It is alleged that the manufacturers have formed a ring and charge the Government, for example, $62.50 a ton for galvanized iron as against $56.75 in the open market. Cot makers put their prices up 15 per cent. when the war was declared.

A group of M. P.'s have promised an investigation into the actions of these trusts, which have been formed in the various trades.

The Belgian Government is distributing pay among the sick, wounded, and convalescent Belgian soldiers confined in hospitals in England, at the rate of five cents a day for privates and corporals and ten cents for the higher non-commissioned officers. This pay, small as it is, is welcome news to the men.

Special legislation is announced admitting Belgian medical men to practice in this country without going through the usual examinations and investigation. The customary fee of $25 is also remitted.

Badges for Civilians.

The Admiralty and War Office are now issuing blue enamel badges with the words "on war service" to men employed by firms engaged on Government war contracts. The badges show that their wearers cannot be spared for enlistment in the army, as they are needed at home to provide material and equipment.

Elaborate precautions are being taken to prevent any of the badges falling into unauthorized hands as in case of the adoption of conscription their possession would be presumptive evidence that a man was excused from military service. Each man that receives one is told that the badge is Government property and that he must give a receipt for it.

New Medical Science Idea.

England has just put into the field a scientific novelty—a motor bacteriological laboratory, fully equipped, the gift of a wealthy man who wishes to remain anonymous.

In a few days the car and equipment will be taken to the front in France, where, in charge of a medical officer, it is to be the headquarters for advanced experiments and tests, relative to the many contagious and infectious diseases to which troops always are subject. A motorcycle attached to the outfit will make trips to and from the trenches and hospitals, bringing back to the laboratory cultures for examination.

EVERYBODY VOTES BUT MOTHER

(J. W. Hedgough)

Everybody votes but mother,
She used to vote once, too,
But when she got married to father
The law said it wouldn't do.
When mother was just a spinster,
Like my spectacled sister Ann,
She had a right to the ballot,
But alas! she married a man!
So everybody votes but mother:
Father, Sister Ann, and I.
My widowed aunt and my brother,
And mother wants to know why!

Everybody votes but mother,
'Cause mother she changed her name;
Looks as though, somehow or other,
Getting married must be a shame;
They take away votes from fellows
Who have been convicted in court,
And it seems that women who marry
Are bracketed with that sort;
So that's where they rank poor mother;
They've struck her name from the roll,
While sister and aunt and father
And I all go to the poll.

Everybody votes but mother,
Through our stupid and senseless law,
And there's not on the list another
Who needs the vote more than maw;
She cares for the home and the children,
And she has a good right to a say
On the laws that affect the household
In any possible way.
So we must have a vote for mother,
Without waiting for dad to die;
For the wife, as well as the widow
And spinster, or we'll know why.

ROUMANIA'S ARMY READY TO ENTER THE CONFLICT

Nation is Quietly Preparing For the Most Effective Work in Behalf of the Triple Entente as Soon as Call to Arms is Given—Populace Are Strongly Against Germany—Officers Toast "The Day"

BUCHAREST, Jan. 30—Roumania having set her hand to the plough is not going to turn back, but is steadily and quietly preparing an effective entrance into the already somewhat overcrowded stage of the world's greatest war. In the public mind the cause of the Triple Entente nations is indissolubly linked with that of a greater Roumania, and German gold is spent vainly here in an attempt to spread the gospel of Count von Bernhardi that "might is right." Even if there never had been a Transylvania, an ex-Austrian enemy to Roumanian national aspirations, it is questionable if Roumania in the present titanic struggle would have been anything else but a confirmed Germanophobe.

The Roumanians, who in culture, love of liberty and perfervid patriotism are the French of the Near East, have to a singular degree appreciated the disinterestedness of Britain in drawing her sword when she felt her national honor impugned. Roumanian officers drink to "The Day"—the Roumanian day when their army will set about freeing their countrymen from the galling Austrian yoke. "For God and our native land!" is the battle cry which resounds from the shores of the Black Sea to the snow-capped Carpathians. In such a holy cause as that of a greater Roumania local political animosities have been blotted out. It is a united nation that calls its sons to rally under the tricolor of the motherland. They have responded nobly to the appeal, and that well-organized and superb fighting machine, the Roumanian army, is ready when the trumpet sounds the call to arms.

SUSPENSION OF FASTING DURING LENT IN LONDON, ENGLAND

The following letter in the New York Herald may be of some local interest:

"Some prominence has been given on this side to the fact that the head of the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of London has suspended the regulation as regards Roman Catholics abstaining from meat on Friday, this arising from the high prices of butter, eggs, fish and the other articles generally used in a non-meat diet. Might not this lead be worthily followed by the Roman and Anglican churches in this country? The prices of eggs, fish, butter, cream, milk, as well as vegetables, are abnormal and must be most perplexing to the house keeper in providing the daily food for her table.

We are now on the eve of Lent, when these conditions will be emphasized, unless some relaxation is made in the rules usually enforced in reference to fasting and abstinence."

KIDNEY DISEASE IN EVERY SYMPTON

New Brunswick Lady Who Suffered for Six years Tells How She Found a Speedy Cure.

Miscou Harbour, Gloucester Co., N. B., Jan. 29.—(Special.)—"For some five or six years I was troubled with backache. I tried many tonics, but kept growing steadily worse, until I decided to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. They gave me almost immediate relief."

This is the statement of Mrs. A. Mark, well known and highly respected here. Asked to give more particulars in regard to her case, Mrs. Mark said:

"My trouble started with a cold, and gradually grew worse. I had stiffness in my joints and cramps in my muscles and suffered from neuralgia. I had heart flutterings and headaches, my sleep was broken and unrefreshing and I was always tired and nervous. I had dark circles under my eyes, I was irritable and often dizzy and had a bitter taste in my mouth in the mornings. I also had attacks of rheumatism.

Every symptom Mrs. Mark mentions spells kidney disease. That's why she found such quick relief in Dodd's Kidney Pills.

DIAMOND CUT DIAMOND.

A Wordless Comedy in Which She Who Tapped Last Tapped Best.

She was pretty, and as she leaned against the counter in the marriage license bureau she carelessly stretched a forearm on the broad surface while she tapped the wood with her fingers. A one carat diamond flashed in a manner to attract attention, which apparently was the purpose sought by the attractive wearer.

She was not so pretty nor so richly attired. She also leaned against the counter, while her fiance, a large man and apparently entirely capable, filled out an application blank.

The second woman caught the sound of the tapping and turned to see the flash of the gem.

The first young woman glanced at the face of the last arrival, took a fleeting appraisement of garments and style and continued to tap. The second young woman indolently raised her arm, placed it on the counter and began tapping with her fingers. The first young woman turned in surprise. Then she dropped her arm, her lips became a straight line, and she walked to the desk where her prospective husband was writing.

The second young woman smiled and also let her arm fall to her side. The third finger of the left hand bore a two carat diamond of purest luster.

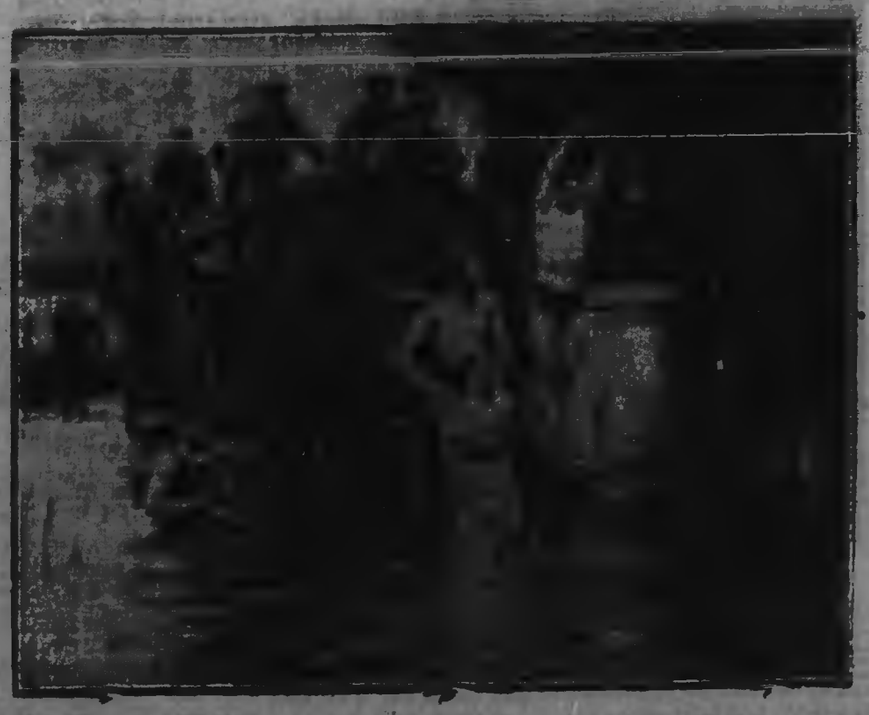
"And they never said a word," remarked the official in charge of the bureau, who related the story.—Los Angeles Express.

Paris in 1775.

Crime was so rife in the good city of Paris in the year 1775 that half a dozen corpses were shown most mornings in the morgue, and nets were lowered each night from the Pont Neuf to catch the persons thrown over by the cutthroats. Yet the punishments were by no means lenient, and Jekyll gives a horrible description of how he had seen a criminal broken on the wheel without stirring from the balcony of his own apartment, when "Monsieur de Paris" discharged the duty of his office in wig, wig and ruffles and blew poudre.

Algerian Olive Trees.

In Algiers olive trees spring up wild and are grafted where they stand. In some regions they are so close as to touch overhead. The average annual yield for a tree is eighty to 100 pounds. Some of the trees are believed to be over 400 years old. It is estimated that there are over 5,000,000 wild olive trees in Algiers. The grafting of these is being carried out systematically under the auspices of the government.



Canadian Soldiers at Salisbury not Afraid of the Wet—Members of the Canadian contingent at Shrewton have shown their adaptability to circumstances in a very novel manner. Their motor lorry became stranded in the flood, so the men use it as a bathing machine. They are evidently not afraid of cold water, but appear to like it, as shown in the picture.

LET Sunlight Soap do your washing Monday morning and you can do the light ironing Monday afternoon.

To Overcome Winter Complexion Troubles

If the chill air causes your skin to dry and scale or becomes unduly red or spotted, before you go to bed spread a thin layer of ordinary mercolized wax over your entire face. Remove next morning with warm water. This is the ideal complexion treatment for the winter girl. The wax gently absorbs the dead particles of surface skin, so gradually there's no discomfort. This gives the underlying skin a chance to breathe and to show itself. In a week or so the new and younger skin is wholly in evidence and you have a really matchless complexion. Naturally all its defects disappear with the discarded cuticle — as sharp, roughness, blotches, pimples, freckles, blackheads. Usually an ounce of mercolized wax, procurable at any druggists, is enough to renovate even the worst complexion.

Wrinkles need bother you no more if you'll use this simple face wash: Powdered saxolite, 1 oz., dissolved in witch hazel, ½ pt. Just one application will affect even the deepest lines, and soon your skin will be smooth as a child's.

Eggs Are Down To 32c A Dozen

They Are Becoming More Plentiful Each Week—To-day's Market Prices

The cold snap had little or no effect on the regular weekly market, despite the difficulty of hauling produce to market under extreme weather conditions. There was a falling off in perishable goods such as potatoes, apples, etc. Meats of all kinds were plentiful, also butter and fowl. Butter was selling at from 32c to 33c a pound. Eggs are becoming more plentiful each week. This morning they were selling at 32c and 34c a dozen. In two or three weeks they should be down to 25c.

The war correspondents' section was badly disorganized this morning. Its place was taken by the weather sharps, who regaled a mixed audience with reminiscences of cold spells, dating back to '68. The only evidence of the existence of the armchair warriors was vested in a fur-coated individual, who ventured a remark concerning the enduring qualities of the Russian Cossack. His remarks were smothered in a cold weather yarn, the narrator of which was concealed behind an ambuscade of whiskers.

The Prices.

Prices ranged as follow:
Potatoes, per bag, 60c to 75c.
Apples, per bag, $1.25 to $1.50.
Onions, per peck, 30c to 35c.
Carrots, per bag, 50c to 60c.
Cabbage, per head, 5c to 10c.

Dairy and Poultry.

Turkeys, each, $1.65 to $3.00.
Geese, each, $1.50 to $1.75.
Ducks, each, 80c to 90c.
Chickens, each, 50c to 80c.
Butter, per lb., 32c to 33c.
Eggs, per dozen, fresh, 32c to 34c.

"The Long and The Short of it"

This interesting photograph was obtained by Farm and Dairy at the time of the recent convention in Peterboro of the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association. On the left is Mr. Wm. Geo. of Toronto, the official stenographer, height 5 ft. 6 in. Next comes Mr. James Sanderson, of Oxford Centre, the president of the association, height 6 ft. 1 in. Mr. Henry Glendinning of Manilla, the well known Farmers' Institute speaker, stands next, height 6 ft. 3 in. On the extreme right is "Sandy" Trotter, of Peterboro, height 6 ft. 9 in. Mr. Trotter is advanced in years and somewhat stooped. Had he straightened up a little more he would have appeared a couple of inches taller than he does. We had hoped to have had Senator D. Derbyshire, of Brockville, Ont. whose height is 6 ft. 5½ in., in the photograph, but Mr. Derbyshire had left for home before the photograph was taken.

THE PLANS ARE UPSET

Russians Overthrow Scheme For Defence of Hungary

BIG ARMY THROUGH PASS

PETROGRAD, Jan. 30. — Armies of great numerical strength are now moving at both ends of the eastern theatre of war without the Russians having to withdraw any forces from central Poland. The entire elaborate scheme for the protection of Hungary and disturbance of the Russian campaign against Transylvania seems finally overthrown by disclosures that the new Russian army from Galicia has penetrated several days' march into Hungary westward of the Dukla Pass. This force is now in full fighting strength turned upon the left flank of parallel columns of the huge Austrian army disposed northward towards the eastern Carpathians. With astonishingly short delay the Russians have forced the Austro-German tacticians by dread alternative of deciding the destiny of the Austrian empire on the plans of Hungary. All efforts of Austrians since the appearance of three German corps amongst them in the past fortnight has been turned to avoiding this and establishing some kind of initiative which would permit a series of long dragging fights on Galician sides of Carpathians.

It is believed the Austrians can still keep in the field in Hungary probably seventeen corps more or less complete, and this should enable them to flounder on for some time, but the ultimate plight between the Russian armies on the north, southeast, and now below Dukla on the west, is beyond repair.

The Russians are now making as satisfactory progress in the extreme north. They rapidly turned the German left flank at Pogehon, above Tilsit, before the Germans could cover themselves under the customary screen of barbed wire. Concurrently with this there was valuable progress of the Russian left wing on the north bank of the Vistula, where they are stretching upwards from Dobrzyn. This concerted enveloping movement of the Russian northern army is now seen as important, threatening the entire German defensive in East Prussia down to Thorn.

An officer of the Russian invading force, which recently passed through Pilkallen, East Prussia, says the Russians surrounded the town, and the fight lasted throughout daylight hours before it was taken. It is a place of considerable size, with many works for farmers' tools. When the Russians were passing through German children were sliding on ice and ran after the Russians, asking for sugar and chocolate, which they often got while old people kept on drawing water from the wells.

Some critics expect Gen. von Hindenburg in the presence of a successful Russian offensive in the north and south may be secretly preparing a last furious onslaught on the Russian lines in central Poland, but the continuous accession of strength to all the Russian armies during the past month has assuredly barred the eastward road against him.

Two Russian forces are operating in East Prussia, according to the latest advices here. One, which advanced into the Masurian Lakes region, and occupied Angerburg, is holding the Germans on the defensive there, while the other is pressing forward on the Inster river, having occupied Pilkallen and Gumbinnen, and is threatening Insterburg at the junction of the Inster and Angerapp rivers. Insterburg, which is an important railway centre, and on the direct line east of Koenigsberg, has been fortified by the Germans, and the campaign in the north is now centering about it. Its capture by the Russians would put them in control of the railway lines leading west and southwest, and enable them to threaten the German army which is holding a position in the Masurian Lakes region.

HE BLAMES BRITAIN

Russia and France Only Doing Dirty Work, Says Crown Prince.

GENEVA, Switzerland, Jan. 30.—(Via Paris.)—Crown Prince Frederick William of Germany, has sent to the local correspondent of the Associated Press, in response to a request for a statement on the war, the following reply, dated "Near Verdun" Jan. 22:

"You ask me to send a message to the American people. Being an officer and no diplomat, I have no right to do so, but if you like I will tell you three things.

"First: Every single German and Austrian is quite certain that we will come out on top, and will give his last drop of blood to this end.

"Second: We are convinced that the day will come when the people of Russia and France will find out that they are only doing the dirty work for England.

"Third: We expect from America absolutely fair play in all questions.

"These are my personal ideas, but a good many of my countrymen feel the same. Greetings.

(Signed) "Wilhelm, Kronprinz."

Six Months' Cost of War

Far Below the Estimates of the Most Sanguine

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS Jan. 30.—The Chamber of Deputies adopted a bill increasing by 1,000,000,000 francs ($200,000,000) the issue of Treasury bonds, which limits the amount to 3,500,000,000 francs ($700,000,000). It also provides for the issuance of short time Treasury bonds.

"After six months of war the expenditures of France have amounted to only 3,900,000,000 francs ($780,000,000) of the amount originally appropriated. If before the war we had said that after six months' hostilities we would have been so far from exhausting the sum at our disposal it would have been received with smiles of scepticism. We have confidence in the unlimited resources of the country and in its will to continue the struggle to the end."

Cold Feet.

During a marriage ceremony in Scotland recently the bridegroom looked extremely wretched, and he got so fidgety, standing first on one foot and then on the other, that the "best man" decided he would find out what the trouble was.

"What's up, Jack?" he whispered, "Hae ye lost the ring?"

"No," answered the unhappy one, with a woful look, "the ring's safe enough, but, man, I've lost ma enthusiasm."

"THE BISHOP'S CARRIAGE" COMING

(Ottawa Citizen.)

One of the best theatrical offerings seen in the city this season will be found in "The Bishop's Carriage" which was presented at the Russell theatre to a good audience last night by Ralph E. Cummings and his excellent company. Not since "Within the Law," has a drama with so many surprises and novel situations been witnessed, for "The Bishop's Carriage" is a "crook" play. But it has the distinction of being a crook play without the purely crook element overshadowing all else to the exclusion of other interests. It contains many unlooked for incidents which happen quite, naturally but quite without the sensationalism which many of the plays described depend upon for their success.

Both staging and acting of "The Bishop's Carriage," are remarkably good. The story is one in which many fine dramatic situations are unfolded and it gives the strong and well-balanced company innumerable opportunities to show its powers and these are not lost. There was not one weak link in the whole cast last night, the principal characters being supported by a thoroughly capable supporting company. In the matter of staging, it is lavish. No expense has been spared to secure realistic effects. In the first act alone there is a real carriage and horse and a powerful automobile, in which the girl thief makes her entrance and exit. The other three settings are on an equally luxurious scale.

It is a difficult task to single out any single member of the company as meriting special distinction, so remarkably finished was the acting as a whole.

ROYAL SEND OFF TO Y.M.C.A. MEMBERS OF THIRD CONTINGENT

Twenty Members Were the Guests of Honour at Enjoyable Banquet Last Night---Officers Were Also Present

Twenty members of the Peterborough Y.M.C.A. who have enlisted with the third overseas contingent in the infantry and mounted rifles, received a royal send-off at the Association building last evening at a banquet given in their honour by the local branch of the Canadian Kitchener Club. There were present, besides the guests of the evening, Major S. T. Medd, Major Johnston, Lieut. E. B. Rogers, Lieut. Johnston, Lieut. Sneath, and Sgt. Elliott of the 30th Battalion Mounted Rifles. Quartermaster-Sergeant Clinton and Sergt. Williford of the Infantry, G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., Mayor Wm. Buller, Rev. R. G. Peever, Rev. Canon Davidson, Rev. James Rollins, Messrs. J. J. Howden, J. C. Connal, Jos. Wearing, C. E. Sisson and G. M. Meserve, as well as about thirty members of the Y.M.C.A.

The Association may well be proud of its representatives among Canada's volunteers, which now numbers forty-six. There are twenty-two at Salisbury Plain, four in Kingston with the second contingent, and twenty-two with the third contingent.

The following is a complete list of the "Y" volunteers, which reflects great credit upon the Association:

First Contingent—Lieut.-Col. E. B. Clegg, Lieut. Chas. H. Ackerman, C. D. Taylor, Harold Saunders, H. Parkinson, W. D. Packwood, W. A. Wood, Wm. Thompson, Chas. Moncour, Jas. H. English, Sgt. Arthur Ackerman Sgt. Keith Cumberland, Heber Rogers, W. C. Affleck, S. McKinley, H. B. Sherwood, Wm. F. Gibson, Theodore W. Quinn, Geo. F. Minorgan, S. Laing, Bert Laing, Harold Matthews.

Second Contingent — Percy Gray, Allen Harper, Robert Irwin, A. Pullen.

Third Contingent — Walter Flowers, Arthur Theobald, Wm. Rew, Arthur Skilleter, Wm. McKinley, Richard Perry, Sidney Smith, Douglas Eldred, Alvin Morrow, Allen Sharpe, C. Lightheart, Wm. Restwood, Fred Schwardager, Geo. Butcher, John Ridyard, Robert Ross, Lieut. Rogers, Vernon Henry, Harry Portsmouth, Fred Cuffe.

After a very enjoyable supper Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., chairman and toastmaster, proceeded with a very appropriate programme of toasts as follows:

The Empire—Major S. T. Medd.
Solo—Pte. Lightheart.
Canada—Mr. Jos. Wearing.
"The Maple Leaf."
Peterborough—Mayor Wm. Buller.
Our Guests—Mr. J. C. Connal.
"For They Are Jolly Good Fellows."
Young Men's Christian Association—Pte. Alvin Morrow.
Members of First and Second Contingents—Mr. C. E. Sisson.
The Kitchener Club—Rev. R. G. Peever.
Address—"A True Soldier"—Rev. J. Rollins.
Remarks—Rev. Canon Davidson, Major Johnson, Quartermaster-Sergeant Clinton and Mr. G. M. Meserve.

Mayor Wm. Buller.

Mayor Buller, in proposing the toast to Peterborough, said Peterborough was proud of her young men who were going with the third contingent and proud of those who had gone in the former contingents. Peterborough people would be proud to hear from them from the front. He assured them of a hearty welcome when they returned. It would be a long, trying trip, but they were to think of Peterborough, which they represented, one of the finest cities in Canada.

Our Guests.

Mr. J. C. Connal, President of the Y.M.C.A. Board of Directors, asked all the members of the third contingent to stand up when he rose to propose the toast to "Our Guests." He said they were an honour to the Association. Some people, when the directors of the Association called upon them for assistance, scoffed at the work they were doing. He would like them to see the twenty-five specimens of manhood to whom he proposed the toast.

The Association was trying to develop the young men of the city physically, mentally and spiritually. He had watched the development of most of the young men representing the Association in the third contingent and felt sure they would give a good account of themselves at the battle front, and hoped they would hold up the standards of the Association among the men with whom they found themselves associated.

Rev. Jas. Rollins.

Rev. Jas. Rollins made an appropriate speech on "A True Soldier," pointing out that in being a soldier a man should not forget his soul.

To be a good soldier a man had to be a good comrade. The boys would learn certain things in the Y.M.C.A. training which would stand them in good stead as soldiers. They would learn to be cheerful and good comrades.

The speakers advised the volunteers to take seriously to training from day to day. They would need to take care of the body and find. As the mind had a great place in work it had also a great place in war and should be kept clean and far-seeing.

Just as they would take care of their bodies and minds, so should they take care of their souls. The souls should receive frank recognition. While endeavouring to be a good soldier of their King and Empire they should be good soldiers of Jesus Christ.

Rev. Canon Davidson, Major Johnston and Quartetmaster-Sergt. Clinton were called upon for a few remarks.

Mr. G. M. Meserve, secretary of the Y.M.C.A., said there was an Association button for each of the guests who wished one. This button would serve as an introduction to members of the Association in the concentration camps and on the battle front.

Received Socks

Each of the twenty recruits was presented with a pair of socks by the ladies of the Kitchener League. Mrs. Knox, the President of the local branch, explained that there was a lot of other knitting ready, but she had recently received a letter from Major Bennett from Salisbury Plain, saying they were in need of more supplies there, and the ladies thought it would be better to forward the other stuff to those already in England. She assured them that they would all be outfitted before leaving Canada.

Gin Pills FOR THE KIDNEYS

St. Raphael Ont., Jan. 8th.

"Four years ago, I had such pains in my back that I could not work. The pains extended to my arms, sides and shoulders. I used many kinds of medicine for over a year, some of which did me very much good. I read about Gin Pills and sent for a sample and used them and found the pains were leaving me and I was feeling better. So I bought one box and before I had used them all, the pains were almost gone and I could keep at work. After I had taken six other boxes, I was entirely cured and I feel as strong as at the age of 30. I am a farmer, now 61 years old." FRANK LEALAND was first put in it was understood that about seventy-eight horsepower would be required. The Peterborough Light and Power Company installed a Westinghouse meter to measure up the amount of current used."

Ald. Stratton—"The Commissioners claim that it is no fault of their's. As this matter was given effect during the existence of the 1914 Power Committee of which Ald. Johnston was Chairman I would refer it to Ald. Johnston."

"It's no use referring it to me; I have nothing to do with it," said Ald. Johnston.

"It's a case of where the Hydro-Electric Commission of Ontario did not protect this City," put in Ald. Green.

Ald. Duffus—"If there were too many lights, who was responsible?"

"The Hydro-Electric Commission laid the system out," replied Ald. Johnston.

Ald. Stratton—"I thought the Power Committee recommended it."

Ald. Green — "That's not correct. The Hydro Electric engineers of the Hydro Electric Commission recommended it. We did not know what we wanted. When the system was completed we found that we had too many lights and decided to cut half of them out.

"When did this bill turn up?" enquired Ald. Duffus.

"Some weeks ago," replied Ald. Johnston.

Company Knew.

Ald. Stratton—"I am informed that the Peterborough Light and Power Company knew that they were supplying us with current that was not being used for lighting purposes. They claimed that it was not their business. We were paying for it."

Ald. Johnston—"If they knew it they were not doing what was right. Our man at the sub-station should have been aware of this. Anything that I did was done with a good honest intention.

"Both transformers kept on the line when one would have done the work" was the report that was made by Mr. H. O. Fisk, Manager of the Peterborough Public Utilities Commission.

Ald. Johnston—"I don't care who is responsible, it's an injustice."

"The matter does not reflect on the work of the Power Committee. I think the Hydro-Electric Commission is to blame," said Ald. Green.

It was finally decided to refer the matter to the Hydro Electric Commission of Ontario. Ald. Green expects to be in Toronto on Thursday, in connection with the sewerage disposal system and he will wait upon the Commission.

The appropriation for street lighting for 1914 was $4,550. Of this amount, $1,010 has been spent.

GERMANS RESUME THEIR ATTACKS ON THE WEST

German Aviators Bomb Dunkirk in Hope of Destroying the British Staff Headquarters----Allies Gain Foothold on Great Dune, Near Nieuport----Town of Thann is Almost Destroyed

LONDON, Jan. 30.—German forces in great strength have renewed the battle of Soissons. Two attempts to cross the Aisne were made to the east of Soissons. Both attacks were repulsed by the French. The first was made at a point known as "the Mill of the Rocks," and the second was directed against the bridge head held by the French to the north of the Venizel bridge.

In retaliation French aviators made a night attack with bombs on the camps of the German troops. Bombs were rained on the trenches and dugouts occupied by the invaders for three hours, from 11 o'clock on Thursday night to two o'clock yesterday morning. Two aviators were engaged in the attack, which centred on the German strongholds in the region of Laon and Le Fere, and points across the river from Soissons. No report of the extent of the damage is made in the official communique received from Paris last night.

Confirmation of the Berlin report of an attack by German airmen on Dunkirk is contained in the French statement. The raid was carried out at midnight of the 28th. It was the second German raid on Dunkirk within a week.

This French coast town is the headquarters of Gen. French, commander of the British Expeditionary Forces, and it is believed that the object of the air raiders is to destroy these headquarters. Paris states that while the damage wrought was insignificant the air raiders killed and injured a number of persons.

Two German aviators were brought down by the French and British gunners, according to yesterday's reports.

The most important action was fought in the sand dunes to the east of Nieuport. Here the French assert the Franco-Belgian forces were able to gain a foothold on the Great Dune, where a terrific fight occurred on Jan. 17. The Berlin report says the allies' attacks were repulsed. At one place, according to Berlin, the allies succeeded in penetrating as far as the German trenches during the night, but by a bayonet attack they were routed.

Artillery combats, with here and there an attack by infantry, repulsed as soon as attempted, are recorded on the remainder of the battle front.

In Alsace, particularly to the north, in the region of Cernay, the opposing forces are now strongly entrenched. Neither side seems capable of dislodging its adversary.

The unhappy town of Thann has been practically destroyed by the fire of the German 21-centimetre guns. Its inhabitants have taken refuge in Montbeliard. Cernay, on the other hand, has been evacuated under the pressure of heavy fire from the French guns.

The entire Cernay garrison has been transferred into the quarries northwest of the town, facing Steinbach, and as the enemy already holds the fringe of woods through which an attack from the southwest would have to be pushed, the task of the French, if they wish to capture the place, will be extremely hard.

Thus the two shells of the towns of Thann and Cernay, riddled by shrapnel and devastated by flames, have become the strategical objectives of the rival armies, and the situation has become like that around Ypres.

"At the east of Soissons the Germans have made two attempts to cross the Aisne—one at the mill of the rocks and the other at the head of the bridge, which is held by our troops, to the north of the bridge of Venizel. These two attacks were repulsed.

"During the night of Jan. 28, Dunkirk was bombarded by more aviators, who caused some insignificant losses, but killed or wounded a few persons.

"Between 11 o'clock the night of Jan. 28 and 2 o'clock of the morning of Jan. 29, two of our aviators launched numerous bombs upon the enemy's works in the region of Laon, Lafere and Soissons. On the morning of the 29th a German aeroplane was brought down east of Gerbevillier. Its pilot and mechanic, a German officer and a sub-officer, were made prisoners."

"The day of Jan. 28 saw nothing more than local engagements, which resulted favorably to us. In Belgium, in the vicinity of Nieuport, our infantry secured a footing on Grande Dune, a locality which was mentioned in the communication of Jan. 17. A German aeroplane was brought down by our artillery fire.

"In the sectors of Ypres, Lens and Arras there were yesterday artillery engagements which at times became fairly violent. Several infantry attacks were undertaken, but at once driven back by our fire. In the sectors of Soissons, Craonne and Rheims there is nothing to report. Between Rheims and the Argonne yesterday saw artillery engagements, but not of great intensity.

"It has been confirmed that the German attack repulsed by us the night of Jan. 27-28 at Fontaine Madame cost the Germans dearly.

"On the heights of the Meuse and in the Woevre yesterday was quiet. In the Vosges there were artillery engagements, our cannon at several points silencing the fire of German batteries and machine gun detachments.

"We have everywhere consolidated the positions occupied by us Jan. 27."

MEN LEAPED OVERBOARD

German Sailors Couldn't Stand Fire From British Ships

EDINBURGH, Jan. 30. — Matter which is printed by The Scotsman this morning throws a new light upon the severity of last Sunday's battle in the North Sea. Strong testimony as to the terrible and deadly character of the British gunnery is afforded in the composition of the large body of German prisoners. Practically every large vessel and most of the smaller vessels of the raiding squadron are represented in the men rescued. In every case their experiences were the same as those of the survivors of the Blucher.

Horrified by the carnage on board their vessels, scores of men leaped overboard and were picked up. Their ships, swept by shot and shell from the British guns, were unfit towards the end to do more than trust to their engines taking them out of the action.

The experiences of these men confirm the statements that the large German vessels and many of the smaller ones sustained damage which will keep them off the sea for a long time. Indeed, it is questionable if some will ever appear again.

The loss of life on board was so great and the scenes during the action were so terrifying that the men regarded the ships as doomed. During the transference of a batch of prisoners from the British ships to the shore one lost his reason and leaped overboard, but was promptly rescued.

Beware of Trouble

It is the wisest thing you can do to have your watch examined at this time of the year.

The cold weather is apt to worsen the old—that strains the mainspring and affects the motion.

MILK PRODUCTION AND HEALTH

One of the most important subjects under discussion at the Sixth International Dairy Congress at Berne, Switzerland, dealt with the effect of systematic breeding for great milk production on the health and resistance of dairy cattle. At this conference were gathered all of the greatest authorities in the world. Their opinions and conclusions are therefore of interest to dairy breeders everywhere.

The concensus of opinion seemed to be that in such breeding a limit is easily reached where milk yield is consistent with the highest degree of health. If this limit is transgressed, particularly by special feeding, confining cows altogether in barns, and frequent calving, the resistance of the cows will suffer, there is tuberculosis at an early age, and the offspring are exposed to tubercular infection. Plenty of pasturing and good care in sanitary barns that are not overcrowded is necessary to maintain the health of good milking cows. The congress expressed a wish that more work along this line be prepared for the next congress.

THE MUNICIPAL PROGRAMME FOR MONDAY

City Council Will Have a Number of Contentious Questions to Deal With —School Board Will Be a Factor

THE SALARY QUESTION

Judging by all accounts there will be wigs on the green by the time Monday night's meeting of the city council is over. There is already enough material on file to warrant a long session with an occasional oratorical display thrown in for good measure. Ald. McIntyre has promised battle to the recommendation fathered by the Finance Committee relative to their inability to dispense with a few civic officials, and reduce salaries to a war basis. Ald. McIntyre has named Street Inspector Fitzgerald as one man whom the Board of Works Department could dispense with, in the winter time at least.

More Money Wanted

The Board of Education will loom large on the municipal horizon especially when their request for an additional eighteen thousand dollars on the construction of the East and West Ward Schools is heard. The Aldermen have both barrels loaded and triggers cocked for this item of expenditure. They are of the opinion that eighty-five thousand dollars was a sufficient amount to cover the cost of the two new schools. This matter was brought up at the meeting of the Finance Committee which was held yesterday. The School Board have asked the Council to issue debentures for that amount. Some of the members of the committee were of the opinion that it would be well for the Council to submit such matters to the people in the form of a money by-law, and let them decide whether the Board should have the money. According to the Provincial Act the Council has no option but to pay whatever the amount the Board may require for educational purposes. It has been suggested that some steps be instituted to modify this power to some extent. However, as matters now stand the Council is powerless to control the expenditure of the School Board. Some of the Aldermen, including Ald. McIntyre, do not intend to let the matter get by without an expression of opinion.

The Investigation

The School Board's request for an investigation into the charges made by City Solicitor Gordon should also provide an illuminating discussion. It is alleged by Mr. Gordon that certain members of the Board did unlawfully receive commissions from the Board which they represented. It is also the intention of the Board to ascertain Mr. Gordon's qualifications for the dual positions of a member of the School Board and the City solicitorship.

Ratepayers who purpose attending meeting should book their seats early as there will likely be a full house, and an overflow meeting is hardly possible even if it were legal.

Opening Ceremony Of New Hall

The Protestant Benevolent Federation Hold Entertainment

An enjoyable entertainment was the feature of the opening of the spacious new quarters of the Protestant Benevolent Federation in the old opera house building last night. There was a large attendance of members, their friends and ladies, who were not only treated to a very pleasing programme, but also to a pleasant surprise in the commodious rooms which have been secured and equipped for assembly and lodge purposes. There is a comfortable reading room well supplied with papers, magazines and other periodicals. A large room has been specially appointed for ladies' purposes and is already being used by various societies in the city. Then there is the expansive assembly hall, formerly the auditorium of the Bradburn Opera House. It has undergone an extensive renovation, repainted and decorated and affords another large hall for concerts, public meetings, conventions and similar purposes for which, it is understood, it will be rented. Comfortable benches provide accommodation for a gathering of hundreds, if necessary, and the hall might also be used for socials and at homes. Last night the interior was adequately decorated with bunting and on the stage a number of handsome Union Jacks stood out prominently against the freshly painted background.

The hall was well filled when Mayor Butler, who was chairman for the evening, opened the proceedings with an address of welcome. A quartette composed of Messrs. Fred. Hartshorn, Jas. Ridyard, Percy Nash and A. Lee sang "It Was a Dream," with pleasing effect and responded to an encore with a humourous number. Bandmaster Beer, of the Salvation Army, played a cornet solo, his selection being "When the Swallows Homeward Fly." The new bandmaster made a fine impression, and is apparently a decided acquisition to the Salvation Army Band and the broader musical circles of the city. His tone is finished and easy, and the variations of the number displayed his technical skill. It is learned that he was for a time soloist with the International Staff Band in London, Eng., and leader of one of the first bands in that city. He has had a band experience covering twenty years. More recently he came from Calgary and is a chartered accountant by occupation. His encore was "Alice Where Art Thou," played with nice expression.

Mr. Wm. McLaren gave an amusing reading entitled, "St. Peter at the Gate," and in this and his encore stories proved that his humour is just as natural and spontaneous as ever.

Mr. Fred. Hartshorn tickled the audience with a humourous sketch, and as an encore sang "The Most Miserable Man on Earth."

Mrs. Locke's vocal solo, "Dream of Home," was sung in good voice, and was cordially welcomed.

An instrumental quartette composed of four members of the Salvation Army Band, composed of F. Robinson, euphonium; Stanley Richardson, tenor horn; Fred Calvert, 2nd cornet, and Bandmaster Beer, solo cornet, was heard twice with an encore on each occasion. Their selections were splendid, the instruments blending with fine harmony and richness of tone.

Rev. F. A. Conners told several humourous stories that raised a hearty laugh.

Altogether it was a very pleasant evening, and a happy opening of the new hall. Among a number of gentlemen on the stage with Mayor Butler were Rev. F. A. Conners, Alderman Johnston and Alderman McIntyre.

Munitions Intended For Germany.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 30.—Federal detectives of great and amazing activity were ordered held yesterday by Federal officials at San Diego, Cal., pending an investigation of their doings.

Exhibits of the practices of a German ship off the coast and a report of the chartering of a schooner for a voyage from Topolobampo, Mex., to the Island Tres Marias, off Acapulco, Mex., the inquiry.

The munitions are consigned ostensibly from W. C. Hughes, 202 Hughes street, New York City, to John Hughes, said to be a former soldier of the Czar's army, now living in Topolobampo, Mex., for use by the Carranza forces.

The 100 Mile Battle in Galicia.—The Austro-German forces are trying to raise the siege of Przemysl by pressing northward over the Carpathians. Their main effort is in the centre. The figures on the map signify: (1 and 1)—Battle raging between Dukla and Wyszkow, the Russians pressing south at Kukla in a counter move, while yielding towards Wyszkow; (2)—Austrians claim to have captured 700 Russians and five machine guns at Volovec, but the Russians claim success here; (3)—Russians retreated from Okormezo to Wyszkow; (5)—All quiet further east.

County Constables Appointed For Havelock And Bridgenorth

The County Council yesterday paid some attention to the work of Miss Beavis at the House of Refuge, where her father is employed as caretaker. It was stated that Miss Beavis was receiving $10 a month as a hired girl, and while it was believed she was kept busy, it was stated she did not appear to be engaged in the rougher work of the House, which it was supposed she would do.

Reeve Fitzgerald of Lakefield said he did not know where the Council could secure a better girl for the work at the House.

One of the members said he thought $15 a month would secure a good girl, or that was a big wage.

Reeve Fitzgerald: Not these days. Some have been offering $30 a month up our way, and they can't get girls.

Warden Kindred: We can get any amount of them down our way for half $15.

It was stated that some of the old ladies of the House of Refuge had been doing work which it was understood Miss Beavis should have done.

Reeve Squire: The old ladies should not be asked to do that kind of work. Let them knit for the soldiers. We could give them the yarn and they would be only too delighted.

Reeve Walsh of Douro felt that the old women should be kindly treated, but he believed that old persons became childish, and a little work keeps them occupied. The care of one old person often proved a problem, and a girl who can get along with 30 or 40 of them has her hands full.

Reeve Fitzgerald observed that the country people must have something to kick about. One man told him that eggs should be supplied to the old people, because they hadn't teeth to chew meat.

Deputy-Reeve Deyell remarked that if Mrs. Beavis was assuming some of the work which it was thought the daughter should do, that was their affair. In any case, the new committee could make inquiries and do as they saw fit.

No complaint was made of the manner in which the work at the House of Refuge was done, but some thought a hired girl should give more appearance of doing a hired girl's work rather than the appearance of being always "dressed up."

The matter was left with Mr. Deyell, as chairman of the committee.

Auctioneers' Licenses.

Reeve Shaw introduced a measure to cut in half the license for resident auctioneers in Harvey, Galway, Cavendish, Burleigh, Anstruther, and Chandos. A County license is good in all these townships, but men doing only local work will pay only $25 for their license hereafter.

County Constables.

Warden Kindred asked that a County Constable be appointed for Havelock, and Mr. K. Coon was named, on the motion of Reeves Brown and Shaw.

Mr. Jobe said no constable had been appointed for Bridgenorth since the death of Mr. Nicholls. He suggested John Coon, who was appointed, on the motion of Reeves Griffith and Squire.

DAREN'T FALL BACK.

Germans Still Have Two-Thirds of Armies on Western Front.

LONDON, Jan. 30. — The Times' military correspondent, analysing the present disposition of the German forces, arrives at the conclusion that the preponderance of the German troops still are on the western frontier, where, he estimates, there are 94 divisions, as against 43 divisions in the east.

"In other words," the correspondent says, "their pride would not allow them to shorten and rectify their western line, which would alone have enabled them to detach sufficient forces to bring about a decision in Poland and capture Warsaw. As a result, the bulk of the active corps are in the west still, while in Russia the bulk of the troops are second and third-line men. It may be expected that Germany will make a last violent effort in the west to break the allied line before the allied armies are all assembled and the other neutral nations come into the war."

A NEGLECTED COLD WILL VERY OFTEN TURN TO CONSUMPTION.

Never neglect what at first seems to be only a slight cold. Perhaps your start to cough, a little irritation in the throat causes, then it gets lower down, settles on the lungs and bronchitis sets in, and you start to raise phlegm of a greenish, yellowish color, and you cough persistently.

If you let the simple cold run it will surely develop into something very serious, and perhaps consumption.

On the first sign of a cold or cough go to your dealer and procure a bottle of

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP.

A few doses will convince you that it is just the remedy you require.

Mrs. J. W. Pearson, Amherst, N.S., writes: "Some time ago my daughter had a very bad cough which settled on her chest. She had no rest day or night. I gave her everything I could think of, but without doing her the least bit of good. At last I thought of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, so I got a bottle for her. She had not taken half of it before she got relief, and with the remainder she was completely cured. Now when any of the family have a cough we always know what to get for it."

Picton Here Monday Night; The Big Game Of The Year

Keen Ice Assured and the Battle Should Draw the Biggest Crowd of the Season to Brock St. Rink

BOTH TEAMS ARE FIT

The Petes came through as expected at Bowmanville last night, and now the stage is set for the final games to decide the championship between Picton and Peterborough.

The first gun will be fired at Brock Street Rink on Monday night, when Picton will visit Peterborough.

This will be the game of the season. There is no doubt that the biggest crowd of the year will be on hand. The reserved seat plan is already on sale, and the tickets are going fast. By to-night it is probable that there will be very few reserved seats on hand, judging by the way they are going.

The game will be called at 8.30 o'clock sharp.

The prospects are that there will be keen ice, and the conditions will be of the kind that Picton has been clamouring for.

The Petes, too, are at their best when the going is good, and Monday's game will do a lot towards settling the argument.

The return game will be played at Picton on Wednesday night.

PETERBORO' CURLERS WON IN ORILLIA

While Peterborough's hockey teams were winning last night the Curlers kept up the good work in Orillia, when four rinks finished six up on the first half of the Neill—Shepherd games. It is stated that Mr. Neill's rink carried off the honours, although all four rinks had more or less share in the victory. The return game will be played here on Monday. The rinks were made up as follows: L. Bowes, Geo. Benor, R. Sturgeon, G. W. Morrow, Skip; Herb Martin, E. G. Patterson, Jas. Skinner, T. F. Matthews, Skip; A. Webb, A. Archibald, R. M. Waddell, Harry Foote, Skip; Percy Fitzgerald, T. H. Hooper, Alex. Kay, R. Neill, Skip. The curlers went by C.P.R., under the wing of Mr. Skinner, who 'subbed' for Sir Thomas S—. The special car was a feature.

PETERBORO' JUNIORS ELIMINATED LINDSAY

Outplayed Visitors Last Night and Won by 6 to 2, Putting the Scugog Team Out of the Race----The Hardest Fought and Most Exciting Game of the Season

Before a crowd that was three-fourths composed of Lindsay rooters the Peterborough Juniors handsomely beat Capt. Simpson's Scugog youngsters at Brock Street Rink, last night, putting Lindsay out of the running and giving the district to the Port Hope team, who made it sure by beating Cobourg last night. The score by periods was 2—0, 3—1, and 6—2, with the Petes always in front. Three hundred fans accompanied the Lindsay team and although they made a lot of noise before the battle started, they had little to whoop for after the first few minutes. The Peterborough people, who will not support anything but a winning team, and who seem to ignore the fact that the youngsters must be encouraged in order to develop material for a winning aggregation, stayed away, and missed by long odds the most exciting and one of the best games of the season. There was not a slow moment from the first face-off and the teams battled until the players looked ready to drop on the ice. It was life or death for the Lindsay gang, while the Petes played as if the championship were at stake, and the result was a grand game.

The Petes showed their best hockey of the season. They beat Lindsay because they checked them every inch of the way from centre ice back to the nets, while they had on the visitors in working in on the goal. Lindsay probably had more shots, but the good work of the Petes' defence and the persistent back-checking of the forward line kept them shooting at long range, while on the other hand the home brigade worked inside with good combination, and went to the mouth of the net for their shots.

Legros, in the nets for the Petes, made up for his off-night in Port Hope by a sensational performance last night. He had a host of shots to handle, a lot of them from outside the defence, but a lot more mean, tricky drive from scrimmages around the nets, and he kicked them out in grand style and cleared coolly. Of the rest, Morrow was probably the most prominent. He checked splendidly and Lindsay found him hard to stop when he broke away for a rush. Two of the Petes' counters were the result of pretty dashes by the big defence man. Every man on the forward line worked his head off and the back-checking of the quartette had everything to do with the final result. There was some one back with every Lindsay rush. Roy Smyth, who had the elusive Art Carew to look after, stuck to the visitors' good left wing like a shadow and had the better of the argument. In addition to looking after Carew he did a lot of rushing on his own account. Jackson and Richardson were always going, and Knapman's back-checking was a feature.

For Lindsay O'Laughlin contributed a grand performance. The Petes' were breaking right in on top of him but he fooled them half a dozen times when they had no one but him to beat, while he looked after long shots in good style. "Chuck" Carew, at rover, was the best of the rest. He never let up for a moment and worked like a beaver around the nets. Sandercock, always a bad man at home, got tossed a couple of times with good, lusty body checks, when he tried to bore in on the Peterborough nets, and after that he did a lot of long-distance shooting.

Referee McCord did nothing to show that he has improved since his last appearance here.

The line-up:

Lindsay		Peterborough
O'Laughlin		Legros
	Goal
Sandercock		Morrow
Haugh		Long
	Defence
Carew		Knapman
	Rover
McElroy		Jackson
	Centre
Griffis		Smyth
	Right Wing
A. Carew		Richardson

Referee—W. A. McCord, Toronto.

It was a real battle from the opening, with both teams going strong. Both Legros and O'Laughlin had several shots to handle in the first minutes, but turned them off easily. Peterborough's better combination began to tell and, after several close calls, Jackson and Richardson broke inside on some neat passing and Richardson drove goal No. 1 past O'Laughlin. Two minutes later Morrow broke away from his own goal, and went the length of the rink for the second counter. He circled around the Lindsay defence and beat O'Laughlin from close in. There was no further scoring in the period, although a host of good chances were spoiled by the good work of the goalkeepers.

The second period was even faster, and more hard fought. The goals were bombarded in turn, but while the Petes were getting inside on their combination, the visitors' efforts were from long range, or in scrimmages, and they could not beat Legros. Half a dozen times the Petes were inside with no one to beat but the goalkeeper. Twice O'Loughlin stopped point-blank shots from Smyth's stick, and Long hit the goal-post on another occasion. After seventeen minutes' hard going Art Carew scored for Lindsay on a quick shot following a pass from the corner. Lindsay's joy was short lived, however, for a minute later Morrow got away for another nice rush and beat O'Laughlin with a pretty shot. The figures remained at 3 to 1 until the end of the period, although Jackson had a grand chance when he got inside, and had only O'Laughlin to beat. He tried to pull the goalkeeper out and hit the post with his shot. In the last period, although the visitors kept trying, the Petes distinctly outplayed them, and they never had a chance. Early in the period Smyth increased the Petes' lead by scoring on a side shot. Lindsay fought back and finally Art Carew scored on a long, low shot, and the score was 4—2. Any chance Lindsay might have had at this stage vanished a couple of minutes later, when Jackson slammed in a rebound. Smyth made it 6—2 when he took a pass in front of the nets and scooped the rubber past O'Laughlin. Both teams looked tired when the gong sounded.

The summary:

First Period—

1—Peterborough, Richardson, 5 mins.

2—Peterborough, Morrow, 2 mins.

3—Lindsay, A. Carew, 17 mins.

4—Peterborough, Morrow, 1 min.

FORECAST OF WINNERS IN THE SECOND ROUND

English Cup Second Round Will Be Played To-day—Manchester v. Aston Villa the Tit-Bit—Chelsea v. Arsenal Excites London

To-day is English Cup Day again, and the sixteen games of the second round will command the interest of all. The only club outside the two big leagues is Rochdale, and as they have to visit Oldham their career in the Cup is likely to end. It is worthy of note that in the half dozen instances in which Southern League clubs must oppose Football League clubs the latter are highly favoured, as four of them have choice of ground. Swansea, notwithstanding their remarkable victory over Blackburn Rovers, are not likely to reach the third round of the competition, with Newcastle as their hosts. Birmingham has a stiff journey at Brighton. Aston Villa, who has to meet Manchester City, are confronted with a big task, but they ought not to do worse than draw and win on the re-play. Bury has choice of ground against Bradford. As the latter were extremely fortunate to win against Portsmouth, the Bury team's task does not seem a hopeless one.

London's Tit Bits.

Southend United game has to journey to Burnley, and the home club will in all probability be on the winning side. The Arsenal, drawn away from home in the first round, will again be away, as they have to meet Chelsea, and this game should provide London with some excitement. Fulham, after their long journey to South Shields, has been properly treated in being drawn at home, and Southampton, who they will oppose, has no cause for complaint, as they were at the Dell in the last round. Fulham will start strong favourites, and their supporters, and also impartial critics, will be surprised if they do not advance a further stage in the competition.

Face the Tigers.

Northampton Town has again been unfortunate, but a side able to defeat so handsomely such a strong home team as Grimsby Town will not be perturbed at having to tackle Hull City, the conquerors of West Bromwich Albion, at Hull. The City, who has visited Grimsby in the League, could only draw there on Oct. 24, so that comparative form points to a victory for the Southern Leaguers—but they will do well if they compel a re-play.

Trotters Should Win.

Millwall, in the course of their Cup-tie history, have made some long journeys, and their visit to Bolton to meet the Wanderers will not be the first they have paid to Burnden Park. Much will depend as to their chances of success on Davis, their centre forward, who has fluid on the knee, and who has not been able to turn out of late, but there is an excellent prospect of a hard, unyielding struggle, and form points to a home victory.

Spur's Task.

The visit of Tottenham Hotspur to Norwich will arouse tremendous enthusiasm in East Anglia, and the City has done enough in past years to compel the 'Spurs to treat them with great respect. The Norwich ground is one of the most peculiarly constructed in the country, and there is no doubt it is a considerable asset to the home club, who have lost only one match there this season. Tottenham, however, will be expected to prevail all the same. Queen's Park Rangers, having disposed of one Second Division club, has now to tackle another. They are drawn at home to Leeds City, who are a different proposition from Glossop. There is, however, ample ground for the view that the London club will once more reach the third round.

Both at Home.

Both the Sheffield clubs are drawn at home, and both ought to win, the Wednesday against Wolverhampton and the United against Liverpool. With regard to the latter match, Liverpool visited Bramall Lane on Nov. 21, and they were then beaten by the odd goal in three, a result that forecasts the probable happening to-day. Everton will, on form, prove too strong for Bristol City, and Bradford City, who have already drawn at home against Middlesboro and should have played them in the League on the day on which they will meet them in the Cup, should dispose of the Teeside club.

HOCKEY

The Sacred Heart rink was the scene of a fast and exciting game of hockey when the Park Street aggregation clashed against the South End seven. The South End seven won by the score of 6 to 3. The line-up was as follows:

Douglas McDonald was a satisfactory referee.

Mahood's Northends beat the South End team 4—1. Lack of team play was very much in evidence. Follows is the line-up:

North End—Goal, W. Rutherford; defence, Hagerman and O'Brien; rover, Risher; wings, Patterson and F. Rutherford; centre, Mahood.

Catchpole starred in goal.

MRS. GEORGE MEHARRY.

The many friends in the City of Mrs. George Meharry will regret to learn of her death which occurred at the Nicholls' ospital at 7 o'clock last evening, under very sad circumstances, leaving to survive her, besides her husband, a two-weeks' old babe and thirteen months' old twins.

Her maiden name was Miss Millicent Pearl Jewell. She was a Presbyterian in religion and an attendant of St. Andrew's Church.

The funeral will take place on Monday afternoon from the family residence, 62 Victoria Avenue, to Little Lake Cemetery, for interment.

Helen Kilby, beloved wife of Mr. Jas. Bradley, passed away at the family residence, 617 Aylmer street, yesterday afternoon, in her 72nd year. The late Mrs. Bradley had been in poor health for some time, and her condition became serious a short time ago. The deceased lady, with her family, came to Peterborough from London, England, in 1870, and has resided here until the time of her death. She was a conscientious and consistent member of George Street Methodist Church, and her demise is regretted by a large circle of friends and acquaintances. Her loss is mourned by her husband, five sons—John of Cavan, James of Edmonton, Charles of Winnipeg, William of Rochester, U.S.A., George of Toronto—and two daughters—Mrs. A. Ash, this City, and Bertha at home; also one brother, Daniel Kilby of Toronto.

The funeral will take place on Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock to the Little Lake cemetery. Service at the house at 2 p.m. It will be conducted by Rev. Mr. Peever.

Her maiden name was Miss Charlotte Donovan, daughter of the late John Donovan, who was a resident of East City. Twenty-one years ago she removed with her husband to Arctic Centre, P.I., where he passed away three years ago.

About five months ago the late Mrs. Downey returned to Peterborough with her two daughters and was taken ill shortly after her arrival, and removed to St. Joseph's Hospital, where she passed away this morning.

There are left to survive, one son, Emmett, Brockport, N.Y.; three daughters, Mrs. Defrain, Kendel, N.Y.; Charlotte and Gladys, Peterborough; two brothers, Messrs. Barney and Timothy Donovan, Longford Mills, Ont., and one sister, Mrs. Guy, of Toronto.

SURPRISE FOR LADIES.

The men of Charlotte Street Church are apparently going to spring a surprise on the ladies of the congregation. What form this surprise is to take was not definitely decided at last night's meeting, which consisted of some less than a hundred. Watch for further developments.

Must Examine Doctors.

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., Jan. 30.—Ernest Gobell, with a respiration of 225 per minute, is mystifying the local doctors. Gobell, who is out of work and has been living at the civic shelter for the past few weeks, has been examined by eighteen doctors. When his trouble becomes acute his extraordinary respiration is given a check temporarily by pressing back his eyeballs. Yesterday after this treatment was applied the young man's heart failed to beat for three minutes. Then the pulsation was resumed by a severe punch in the stomach. Gobell has been in this country but a few months and is anxious to return to the old country. An effort to have him deported will be made.

BLOEMFONTEIN, Orange River Colony, Africa, Jan. 30.—A preliminary hearing in the case of Barend Wessels, a member of the South African Parliament, who was arrested early in December on a charge of treason, was held here Thursday. According to the evidence given, he induced 500 burghers to join the rebels. Later the case was adjourned without date, and Wessels was held without bail.

Said Farewell To Rev. Mr. Sawers

At Ministerial Association Luncheon Yesterday At Noon

The Ministerial Association met in special session yesterday at 12.30 o'clock at the Oriental Hotel to bid a kindly farewell to Rev. Mr. Sawers, Rector of St. Luke's Church, who leaves next week for Cobourg, to assume the Rectorship of St. Peter's Church in that town.

After partaking of a sumptuous repast an adjournment was made to a private room, where many brief addresses bore testimony to the appreciation of Rev. Mr. Sawers as a Christian gentleman and Minister, and as a citizen of this City. His removal would be a distinct loss, but a decided gain for Cobourg. Each Minister spoke of the pleasant relations with Mr. Sawers during his residence here.

Rev. Mr. Rollins occupied the chair.

CITY HALL PARAGRAPHS

At last night's meeting of the Finance Committee, it was reported that a local lady had been admitted to the Mimico Asylum and that the City would be held liable for her maintenance. Ald. AT HOME OF THE BELMONT CLUB

Was Held Last Evening—A Number of Out of Town Visitors Present

The annual "At Home" of the Belmont Club, last evening, was the outstanding social event of the season. The Conservatory Hall never looked prettier than it did on this occasion, with its profuse decorations of flags and bunting, and gayly coloured pennants. The music was all that could be desired and encores were frequently demanded. Mr. Asa Huycke's orchestra of five pieces furnished the music to the unbounded satisfaction of all concerned. At midnight refreshments were served, after which dancing was resumed. A large number was present from out of town. These included the Misses Read of Bobcaygeon, Miss Stevens of Lindsay, Miss White of Trenton, Miss Loucks of Campbellford, and Messrs. Thompson and Kimmerly of Belleville.

A LETTER FROM SALISBURY PLAIN

Mrs. Daniel Connelly, 367 Rogers Street, East City, has received the following interesting letter from her son, Private Dan Connelly, with the first 57th Contingent at Salisbury Plain:

Bustard Camp,
Salisbury Plain,
2nd Battalion, "A" Company.

My Dear Mother,—Just a few lines to let you know that I received your Christmas box and also your loving letter. We are having bad weather here, raining every day. We are in tents with four blankets to sleep on. We are getting plenty of long marching, and I met Frank and had a letter from James at Kingston. He says he likes it fine, plenty of drilling and shooting. Major Bennett is with our Company yet. He is a fine man and just like a father. Col. Watson is C. O. of our Battalion. We have a fine body of men and we have just received our new uniforms, and overshoes, new underwear and top shirts. This is a funny country; they have straw roofs and old stone houses, which look old fashioned; but they have good, hard roads all over the country. No snow at Christmas. We had six days' leave and free train fare all over the country. I will be glad when we are at the front—till we get a bird's-eye view of the Germans.

Well, I guess Santa told you all the news for this time, so bye-bye, from

Your loving son,
"Dan."

British Retake All Lost Trenches

FOUR BRITISH STEAMERS TORPEDOED BY A SUBMARINE

Sensational Activities of German Submarines

Admiralty Anticipates Further Raids and Loss of More British Merchantmen--Flotillas of Destroyers and Light Cruisers are Patrolling Irish Seas.

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

LONDON, Eng., Jan. 31.—Von Tirpitz' threat to destroy the British commerce again was carried out to-day when a German submarine torpedoed and sank a freighter off Fleetwood, near Liverpool on the direct route between England and Ireland. The affair caused a great sensation here as Britain's Trans-Atlantic shipping is thus severely menaced.

LONDON, Jan. 13.—Latest reports this afternoon say that two more British steamers, making four in all, were torpedoed by a German submarine in the Irish Sea.

LONDON, Feb. 1.—"Von Tirpitz can't starve England out — and he knows it. His submarine raids are comparable to the efforts of a squad of sharp-shooters against a whole army. His main purpose is to frighten England and he will never succeed."

This was the statement to-day of a high admiralty official. He would not permit his name to be used. Like other naval officers, both here and at Paris, he asserted that sensational activities of German submarines on Saturday and Sunday are features of a new policy of warfare first publicly suggested by Grand Admiral Von Tirpitz of the German navy.

The Admiralty anticipates further raids and loss of more British merchantmen. No attempt is made to conceal this belief here. Having demonstrated their wide cruising radius by sinking three British vessels in the Irish Sea, and two others in the English Channel off Havre, German under-sea terrors are expected to make fresh attacks.

Flotillas of destroyers and light cruisers were patrolling the Irish Sea off Liverpool to-day, hoping to catch sight of a German submarine that chased the Leinster off the entrance to Dublin Bay yesterday.

It is now generally accepted here that the U-21 was accompanied by at least one other of the latest and most powerful design of German submarines which sent the Kilcoan, Ben Cruachen and Linda Blanche to the bottom. Some Admiralty officials profess to believe that a whole squadron of German submarines is now operating off the west coast. The Tako Maru and Icaria, sunk in the English Channel off Havre, are believed to have been victims of a single German raider.

Despatches from Liverpool to-day said that several steamers passed out of the harbour on their regular sailing to-day indicating no great alarm there. The Liverpool authorities have not availed themselves of their power of forbidding all sailings, and it is unlikely that they will do so.

LONDON, Feb. 1.—The Pall Mall Gazette commenting editorially to-day on the German submarine raids declared htat, "Since the Germans have chosen to adopt this method of warfare, we accept the fact without wasting rhetoric in condemnation."

"There is nothing more futile than the childish cry 'it isn't fair,'" said the Gazette editorially. "Why complain of breaches of the law of warfare when there is no policeman, judge or executioner to enforce the laws."

"We expect nothing but a grunt from a pig, nothing but an outrage from a Prussian. When power departs from the first principle of warfare—namely, that the proper objective of his armed forces is the armed forces of the enemy—and resorts to fancy operations, it is the confession of defeat."

"Von Tirpitz' touch has none of the jubilant touch of Lord Nelson's touch."

EXPECTS 2,250,000 GERMANS IN THE WEST BEFORE SPRING

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

LONDON, Feb. 1.—Colonel Repington, military expert, in an analysis of the situation says:

"In another effort to break through to the coast before the Allies have assembled their full strength, the Germans now have in the Western theatre forty-seven army corps, or about 1,800,000 men. We may expect more than two and a quarter millions of Germans at the front very soon, and behind these are the remaining reserves, untrained. What the Allies must prepare to meet is the replacement of first line troops by half prepared levies and the assembly at one or more points of a great mass of active army corps for a fast decisive attempt to break through between Arras and the Oise. This is likely to be the front, and such an operation probably will begin in February or March. If there is no such advance the Allies will act in their own time and all together. So whether the Allies already have broken the German offensive or whether one more convulsive effort can be expected we can make up our minds to be easy concerning the result."

PRESENTATION TO GEORGE BUTCHER

Who is Leaving For the Front

George Butcher, the son of Mr. John Butcher, for so many years the highly respected sexton of St. John's Anglican Church in this city, has joined the 3rd contingent to go to the front in service of his country.

He has been employed at the Colonial Weaving Co.'s factory, and on Saturday was presented by his former fellow-workers with an elegant wrist watch, accompanied by their sincere regrets at his departure, and heartfelt wishes for his safe return from the seat of war.

When beating the whites of eggs with a rotary egg beater, hold the beater at an angle instead of straight up and down in the bowl. By doing this the work is accomplished much quicker. A pinch of salt added to the egg makes it beat more quickly, and if hard to beat a pinch of cream of tartar is also said to be beneficial.

SIXTEEN CAPTURED THE TRENCH

Interesting Letter From a Man Lately Returned From the Front —Is on Three Months' Leave

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Garrett, of this city have received the following letter from his nephew, Pte. S. Whatley in Warminster, England, who is at home there, on a three months' leave from the front.

It is as follows:

Dear Uncle and Aunt,—Just a few lines to you, hoping this will find you all well, as I am pleased to say to leaves me at present.

I guess you will be kind of surprised to hear I am home from the front. I have been out there just about three months and have had some pretty warm times. I shall be jolly glad when it is over. South Africa was a picnic to this war; it is simply like hell let loose daily. It is nothing more than a perfect butchery. Where we lose one man the Geramns losé five or six. As regards their abilities at fighting, individually, one Britisher is worth four Germans. I will give you an idea. On the 16th of November, 250 of the Prussian Guards came up and took our first line of trenches which we had left empty in the morning. When our captain observed this, he gave us an order to charge them, and sixteen of us charged out the whole crowd, leaving most of them dead upon the field. Never shall I forget that day. They shelled us for hours, and I am glad to say we had only two killed and two wounded. The captain has since been ecorated with the Distinguished Service Order and received the personal congratulations of Sir John French. It practically saved the situation, and kept the Germans from breaking through the lines. Since leaving England our losses have been enormous. On one occasion, after being in the trenches for fourteen days and nights, we could only muster 200 out of 1,100, so you can guess we have had our share; in fact all branches of the army have, and it would be hard to select any particular regiment for special mention, as some brave deeds are done daily, and pass by unnoticed. Well, I guess Stanley will be going out some time this month, as all of the Canadians calculate to go. I hope it will soon come to a finsh, but I am afraid it will be some time yet. Stanley is still here. He managed to come down for the New Year. It seems like old times to be together again. Well, how is dear old Canada looking. I wish I was coming back to-morrow; I would rather be at work than soldiering. How are all the folks around. Remember me to Aunt Jane and Uncle Fred.

8,000 Syrian Refugees Landed

In Alexandria by the "Tennessee" —Half Are Destitute

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

ALEXANDRIA, Jan. 21—The American cruiser Tennessee, which for several weeks has been engaged in bringing refugees from Asia Minor to Egypt, has up to the present landed 8,000 Syrian refugees at Alexandria. Twelve hundred more are expected when the cruiser comes in to-morrow.

Four thousand of the refugees now here are destitute. At least two-thirds of them are of Russian nationality. The local government is dealing temporarily with the problem of housing clothing and feeding these paupers. Nevertheless many of the children are scantily clad and further relief measures are needed.

GERMANS TRY TO HALT MARCH ON KONISBERG

Desperate Fighting is in Progress in the Forests of Pilkallen Region---Tabriz Occupied by Russians

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

PETROGRAD, Feb. 1.—Tabriz has been occupied by the Russians, it was officially announced here to-day. Russian troops entered the city Saturday afternoon. The above was unofficially announced in a Paris despatch Saturday. It indicates that the Russians have secured the upper hand in fighting the Turks in Persia and the Sultan's plans for Egyptian invasion will likely be much influenced thereby.

PETROGRAD, Feb. 1.—Strongly reinforced to-day, the Germans in East Prussia are concentrating their efforts to halt the march on Konigsberg by smashing at the Russian centre west of Pilkallen. Desperate fighting is in progress in the forests of Pilkallen region, but official despatches to-day claimed further slight gains for the Czar's ninth army west of Warsaw. Russian forces have recaptured trenches occupied by the Germans, in an infantry charge on Friday night. German dead were strewn along the battle front near Borzhymow. Official despatches to-day claimed that four regiments of Gen. Von Mackensen's forces participated in a German charge and that they suffered heavy losses. The Russians captured three officers, sixty men and a machine gun in the bayonet charge that resulted in the recapture of the lost trenches. Austro-German divisions are losing heavily in their attempt to push northward through the Carpathians to the relief of Przeymsl, between Dukla and Uszok passes. A general engagement is in progress in the Uszok region. Russians have taken many prisoners. Only small outpost engagements were reported in despatches from Bukowina to-day.

AUSTRO-GERMAN ARMIES WILL FIGHT TO RETAKE ROUMANIA

In the List of Neutral Nations---Forces in Bukowina Will Exert Every Effort For Victory Over Russians in Hope That Success Will Prevent Bucharest Government From Joining Allies.

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

LONDON, Feb. 1.—With a temporary quiet in the western arena interest centres again in the east, where the Germanic allies are making every effort to induce Roumania to withhold her hand.

Military authorities here and in Petrograd expect to see the next great offensive on the extreme Austrian right in Bukowina. German forces have been sent into this region to reinforce the Austrians and drive out the Russian invading army. A victory here, Berlin and Vienna believe, will cause the Bucharest government to reconsider its decision to join the allies.

The only thing holding Roumania in check at present, it is stated, is uncertainty regarding the action Bulgaria would be likely to take. Bulgaria, it is asserted, is still demanding that part of Macedonia now under Servian rule as the price of her neutrality, and this Servia is reported to be not willing to part with.

Greece, it is said, also objects to Bulgaria extending her boundaries westward, taking the ground that this would place a wedge between her and her ally, Servia. Thus, seemingly, the whole Balkan situation remains involved, and it is stated that it is not likely to be cleared up until the demands of Bulgaria are satisfied.

In East Prussia a Russian offensive has developed in the extreme north, where the renewed fighting seems to confirm the belief that a definite effort to advance north of the Mazurian lakes district, where previously the Russians were defeated, has been decided on by the Russian General Staff.

More vital to both sides, however, apparently is the campaign in the Carpathians, where to the southwest of the Dukla Pass the Russians have delivered an energetic attack and, according to their account of the combat, compelled the Austro-Germans to retreat, leaving behind ammunition and stores. This attack, according to military observers, indicates an attempt by the Russians to turn the flank of the Teuton allies, and if it should prove successful, the observers say, it would have serious consequences for the large Austro-German army in and about the Carpathian passes.

Another skirmish with the Turkish advance guard not far from the Suez is reported from the British forces in Egypt. It was not of a serious character. On the other hand, British marines are said to have landed at Alexandretta, in Asiatic Turkey, and to have cut the telegraph wires.

COURAGE IS COMMON IN THIS WAR.

LONDON, Feb. 1.— Every Englishman knows how to die bravely. The Irish, Scotch and English soldiers face the bayonets, the machine guns as though out on dress parade. It is the men who sicken and die in the trenches, or at home after an arduous campaign that our sympathy goes out to most. There are thousands of such men behind the battle lines who went to the front without the strong constitution and good pure blood to withstand the deprivations, the hardships of the campaign in Belgium and France. It's a warning that we should pay strict attention to our stomach, liver and blood. If one is all out of sorts he should take an invigorating tonic and alternative such as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery which cures diseases of the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition. It eliminates from the blood disease breeding poisons. It makes the blood rich and pure, and furnishes a foundation for sound, physical health. Fifty years ago, Dr. Pierce, of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N.Y., found that certain barks and roots manufactured by using glycerine without the use of alcohol or opiates, made into a concentrated extract, which he called Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, made a stimulating tonic for the stomach, helped the digestion and assimulation of the food and eradicated poisons from the blood. This is nature's cure for indigestion, and by correcting the stomach and thereby feeding the blood on pure materials, the red blood corpuscles are increased and the body established in a healthy state. No one suffers from catarrh who has plenty of red blood corpuscles and a good digestion. Catarrh in all its forms is a stagnation of the blood. Introduce pure red blood into the system by taking the "Medical Discovery" and health is assured.—Adv.

"THE BATTLE CRY"

Old Milt McBriar, for once startled out of his case-hardened self-control, wheeled to demand angrily, "What hell's trick is this?" His eyes were blazing and his face worked with passionate fury.

A second Deputy answered him. "An' Milt McBriar I wants you, too, on an indictment for accessory ter murder."

Juanita felt Dawn's spasmodic fingers clutching her arm and felt her own knees grow suddenly weak. She heard a soft clatter of parcels on the snow-wrapped cinders as young Milt droped them and leaped forward, his own eyes kindling, and his right hand frantically clawing at the buttons of his coat. But before young Milt could draw his weapon from its arm-pit holster, Jeb McNash had wheeled to face him, bending forward to a half crouch. The younger McBriar halted and bent back under the glint of the revolver which Jeb was thrusting into his face.

Haveys, armed and grim of visage, began drawing close about the captives in a menacing cordon.

Dawn clung with bloodless lips and white cheeks to the elder girl as she watched her brother holding his weapon in the face of the boy whom she suddenly realized she loved more than her brother.

Then the Sheriff spoke again. "Thar hain't no use in makin' no trouble, Milt. Ther Grand Jury hes done acted an' I reckon ye'd better let ther law take its course."

"Why don't ye take me, too?" demanded the heir to clan leadership in a tense, passionate voice. "I'm a McBriar. That's all ye've got against any of these men."

"Ther Grand Jury didn't indict ye, son," responded the Sheriff calmly.

Then the older McBriar became suddenly quiet again and self-possessed. He turned to his boy.

"Milt," he said sternly, "you keep outen this. Thar's other work for ye. You ride over home an' tell every man that calls hisself a McBriar—" his voice suddenly rose in the defiant crescendo of a trapped lion—"tell every man that calls hisself a McBriar, thet ther Haveys hev got me in their damned jail-house—an' ask 'em how long they aims to yet me lay thar."

Young Milt turned and went at a run toward the livery stable. Over his shoulder as he went he flung back at Jeb, who stood looking after him with lowered pistol, "I'm goin' now, but I'll be back ter hev a reckonin' with ye!"

And Jeb shouted, too: "Ye kain't come back none too soon, Milt. I'll be hyar when ye comes."

Then the group started on its tramp toward the Court-house and the little jail that lay at its side.

Juanita suddenly realized that she and Dawn were standing as if rooted there. The older girl heard an inarticulate moan break from the lips of the younger, and then as though waking out of sleep she looked absently down at a litter of beribboned parcels which lay about her feet. That message which Old Milt had flung back to his people on the lips of his son, would send tumbling to arms every man who could carry a rifle.

And the Haveys were grimly waiting for them. The Haveys were already here. The two girls could not ride across the ridge now. They cold only sit in their room at the wretched hotel and wait.

Juanita was glad that little Dawn could cry. She couldn't. She could only look ahead and see a procession of hideous possibilities.

It had been a few minutes after noon when Young Milt had rushed into the livery stable and ordered his horse. In that one instant all his college influences had dropped away from him, and he was following the fierce single star of clan loyalty. His father who had never been any man's captive was back there in the vermin-infested little "jail-house." And when Young Milt came back, the one Havey clansman he had marked for his own would be the boy under whose pistol muzzle he had been forced to give back—young Jeb McNash.

The stroke had taken the McBriars completely by surprise. The boy must reach his own territory and rally them to their fullest numbers even from the remotest coves. This battle was to be fought in the enemy's own stronghold and against a force which was ready to the last note of preparedness.

So nothing could happen until to-mororw. Nothing would happen in all likelihood until the day after that, and meanwhile the two girls in the hotel must sit there thinking.

The little town itself lay dismal and helpless with its shacks scattered over its broken uneven levels. Here and there a shaggy-coated horse shivered at a hitching rack; here and there men, in twos and threes, stood scowling. On the chocolate-coloured mountains the snow was still spitting.

Dawn perhaps found it hardest, for in this one day Dawn had grown up, and to-morrow would bring the boy whom she now confessed loving, though she confessed it with self-contempt, leading a force to meet that of her own people, and at the front of her own people was her brother, fighting to avenge her father. Juanita whose eyes could not escape ironical reminders when she glanced down at the Christmas packages, seemed to hear over and over the voice of Anse Havey saying, "I'm doin' it because ye asks it."

She had sought to avert an assassination and it seemed that the effort would precipitate a holocaust.

Anse was very busy, but he found time to come to her that afternoon. In the bare little hotel loby the firelight glinted on a number of rifles as their owners lounged about the fire.

And in Anse she saw once more the stern side. His face was unsmiling and in his eyes was that expression which made her realize how inflexibly he would set about the accomplishment of the thing he had undertaken, but as he spoke to her a sudden softness came into his pupils.

"God knows I'm sorry," he said, "that this thing broke just now. I didn't aim that ye should be no eye-witness."

Juanita smiled rather wanly. Old Milt, he told her, would soon be released. "We ain't even goin' to keep him in the jail-house no longer than mornin'. We couldn't convict him an' it would only bring on more trouble."

"Why was he arrested, then?" she asked blankly.

"Just to keep him out of mischief over night," he smiled. "Even the law can be used for strategy."

"What will happen when the McBriars come back?" she demanded in a shaken voice.

He shook his head. "I can't hardly tell ye that. I'd like right well to know myself."

But the next morning, Anse Havey came again and cautioned the two women not to leave their rooms and not to keep their shutters open. All that day the town lay like a turtle tight drawn into its shell. Streets became empty. Doors were locked and shutters barred. But toward evening, to the girl's bewilderment, she saw Haveys riding out of town instead of into it. Soon there were no more horses at the racks. By night the place which was to be asaulted tomorrow seemed to have been abandoned by its defenders.

Old Milt McBriar had been liberated and had ridden out in the morning, boiling with wrath, to meet the horsemen who were hurrying in. The figure of Bad Anse Havey she saw often from her window when, in disobedience to her orders, she looked out, but for the most part the force of his clansmen had evaporated.

Then came another wretched night and with the second forenoon the snow-wrapped town settled down to the empty silence of a cemetery, but with early afternoon the new procession began to arrive. A long and continuous stream of McBriar horsemen, each armed to the teeth, rode past the hotel and went straight to the Court-house. The girl had seen Anse Havey alone, and seemingly unarmed, going that same way an hour before.

A wild alarm seized her. Where were all the Havey forces now? Was Anse trying to hold his prisoner alone against his enemies? Had all his clan deserted him? Was he already the discarded leader of his wolf-pack? The girl sat down to wait. She was very faint and it seemed to her that she sat there for eternity and all she saw was a spot on the wall where the flaking and dirty paper had been patched.

Slowly a shaft of pale light came through the window at a low angle. The sun was sinking through the yellow ghost of a glow. Then she heard again the sound which she had heard on her first night in the mountains, only now it came from a hundred throats.

It was the McBriar yell and after it came a scattering sequence of rifle and pistol shots. The clan was going away again, and shooting up the town as they went, but what had happened down there at the Jail and Court-house? The girl rose to her feet and clasped her hands to her lips to stifle a scream.

CHAPTER XXIX.

Later she heard the story. The McBriars had come expecting battle. They had found every road open, and the town delivered over to their mercy! For a time they had gone about looking for trouble, and finding no one to oppose them. Then Old Milt and his son had ridden to the Court-house to demand the keys of the jail. They discovered Judge Sidering sitting in the little office which adjoined his court-room, and with him, entirely unarmed and without escort, sat Bad Anse Havey. When the two McBriars, backed by a score of armed men, broke fiercely into the room, others massed at their backs, crowding doorway and hall.

Judge Sidering greeted his visitors as though no intimation had ever reached him that they were coming with a grievance.

"Come in, Milt, and have a chair," he invited.

"Cheer, hell!" shouted Milt McBriar. "Give me the keys ter thet jail-house an' give 'em ter me quick."

Opening the drawer of his desk as if he had been asked for a match, Judge Sidering took out the big iron key to the outer door and the smaller brass key to the little row of cells. He tossed the two across to Milt in a matter-of-fact fashion.

Five minutes later the McBriar chief was back, trembling with rage. He had found the jail empty.

COULD NOT GO TEN STEPS
FOR THE PAIN IN HIS KIDNEYS.

When you get a pain in the back you may rest assured that it comes from derangement of the kidneys, for were there not something wrong with the kidneys the back should be strong and well.

Doan's Kidney Pills regulate the kidneys, and there is no further excuse for any kidney trouble to exist. What more needs to be said? While Doan's Kidney Pills are not a "balm for every ill that flesh is heir to," they are a positive, never-failing remedy for every disease that has its inception in the improper action in those delicate little filters of the blood, the kidneys.

Mr. Adelard Cleroux, Eganville, Ont., writes: "I was troubled with my kidneys for four years. They were so bad, at times, I could not go ten steps for the pain they caused me. My doctor could not do me any good. A friend advised me to use Doan's Kidney Pills. I bought five boxes, and now I have been cured for over three years. I will recommend them to whoever may be suffering from kidney trouble."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box; 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

AN OLD RECIPE TO DARKEN HAIR

Sage Tea and Sulphur Turns Grey, Faded Hair Dark and Glossy

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural colour and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or grey; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Everybody uses this old, famous recipe, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the grey hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.

Was Troubled for Years With Kidney Disease

And This Treatment Cured Me—This Statement Endorsed By a Baptist Minister.

The great majority of people are familiar with the extraordinary curative powers of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. But for the benefit of those who are not we continue to publish from day to day reports from persons who have been actually cured.

MR. MOSHER.

The case described in this letter was an extreme one, and the writer was in a very low condition when he began the use of these pills. The cure was so marked that Mr. Mosher's pastor did not hesitate to vouch for his statement.

By their unique combined action on the liver, kidneys and bowels, Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills cure in complicated cases which defy the action of ordinary kidney medicines.

Mr. W. H. Mosher, Brockville, Ont., writes:—"I used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and firmly believe there is no medicine to equal them. I was troubled for years with kidney disease, and this treatment has cured me. When I began the use of these pills I could only walk from my bed to a chair. Now I can go to the field and work like any other man. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are an excellent medicine."

This statement is certified to by the Rev. E. H. Emett, Baptist minister of Brockville, Ont.

By awakening the action of liver, kidneys and bowels Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills cure Constipation, Headaches, Chronic Indigestion, Kidney Disease, Liver Complaint and Backache. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

"It heals like magic" is a favourite expression where Dr. Chase's Ointment is used. It works quickly, stops all itching at once, often heals in a single night. PRECIOUS JEWELS SOUGHT BY A KING

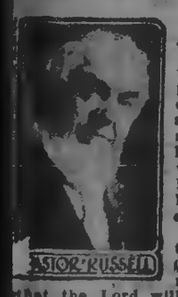
Diamonds Polished by a Divine Hand.

FELLOWSHIP OF THE BRETHREN

The World of Mankind the Mine—Rough Diamonds in the Miry Clay—Washed in Blood Most Precious—Cut on the Wheel of Discipline—Polished by a Famous Lapidarist—Reflecting and Refracting Light of the Divine Character—Set In a Royal Diadem.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its insertion.]



Toronto, Ont., Jan. 31.—Pastor Russell is here to-day. We report his discourse on the text, "They shall be Mine, saith the Lord of Hosts, in that Day when I make up My jewels." (Malachi 3:17.) He said in part:

Our text points to the close of the Gospel Age, and not only tells us that the Lord will not gather His jewels sooner, but also implies that the only class to be gathered at that time will be the jewel class—He comes to make up His jewels. We have here a contradiction of the ordinary thoughts on this subject—that He has been gathering His jewels all along for the past six thousand years, evidently an erroneous thought, since He has appointed a time in the end of the Age in which He will gather, or make up, His jewels; and that everybody who is respectable, half-way decent, is to be gathered to the Lord and share in His Kingdom. Our text distinctly points out that only a very exceptional class will be sought for and gathered.

The class here described as jewels is contrasted in the context with other classes—"the proud," who have much of the success of the present time; and "the workers of wickedness," who tempt God and are not careful to please and serve Him. Such evidently are the majority of mankind. The jewel class is described as "they that feared Jehovah"—that reverenced Him—"and that thought upon His Word."

But, we inquire, where are jewels usually found? The answer is that they may be found in very unexpected places. For instance, the diamonds of South Africa are sometimes mingled with the ordinary gravel, and sometimes imbedded in bluish-black clay. They all require to be searched after, and to be washed from the mire, before being prepared to refract the light. So some of these jewels that the Lord is now seeking out from the world are found in the ordinary walks of life, and some came from deep down in the mire of sin. In the world of mankind the Lord does not expect to find the jewels in perfect order—shaped, cut, polished and ready for the setting in glory. On the contrary, by one class of His servants He lifts them out of the mire of sin and the horrible pit, cleanses them through the merit of His own precious blood and through His Word; and then through other servants and providences He polishes them with Divine skill, that they may reflect and refract the light of the glory of God—the Divine character—Justice, Wisdom, Love.

As the diamond in its rough state, uncut, unpolished, would have no more value than a common stone for ordinary purposes, so those whom the Lord is selecting and preparing as His jewels are to derive their ultimate value from the cutting, shaping, polishing, of their characters under Divine providence. As it is written, "We are His workmanship." We cannot suppose the illustration to be perfect in every particular; yet we may readily see that while Divine Grace is to be credited with the entire outcome—the beauty of the finished gem—nevertheless Divine Grace operates according to principles and conditions, under Divine Law. As the experienced diamond miners reject the soft clay and various of the hard stones, in seeking for those of the desirable kind, so the great Jewel-Gatherer operates according to a principle in seeking for His jewels.

The hardness of the diamond may be used to represent character, and we are to remember that character belongs to the individual. Each must have his own character, and only in proportion as each has it can he hope to be accepted as a jewel; for those without it will not endure the tests.

As the diamond-seeker lays hold upon everything in his path that gives evidence of having the diamond quality, so Divine Grace, operating in the diamond field of the world—Christendom—lays hold upon all who have anything resembling character. The soft, the pliable, the uncrystallized, are not being sought now, and coming in contact with Divine Grace are passed by. Only such as give evidence of character are thought worthy of even washing and testing.—Ephesians 5:26.

The hard crystallization of the diamond corresponds to willingness toward righteousness in the individual; and unless there be such willingness toward God and righteousness there is none of the jewel quality which the Lord is now seeking. Those whose wills are formed, crystallized, set, determined for righteousness, are those whom the Lord seeks. But the great Jewel Seeker accepts some in whom the crystallizing process is incomplete, and helps their incrustation, developing in them by His providences the quality of firmness for righteousness, at the same time polishing them.

But even when the rough diamond has been found, it would be of no value except as it could be cut; indeed, it would be of less value than other stones for many purposes. So it is with those whom Divine Grace finds in the mire of sin, having nevertheless will or character desiring righteousness, truth, goodness, justice—the great Lapidarist must really give them all their value by His skill in shaping, cutting and polishing them. Yet, on the other hand, He could not cut, shape or polish that which had not the essential quality, or character, or will for righteousness.

Those who are in the hands of the great Lapidarist and undergoing His polishing process, must first have passed through the previous experience of having been found of the Lord Jesus, must have been washed, and must have been accepted as having wills desirous of harmony with the Divine mind. Therefore they may take pleasure in all the trying experiences and difficulties through which our Lord Jesus causes them to pass as various parts of the process necessary to their completion as Jehovah's jewels, to be made up by the close of the Gospel Age and to be set in the gold of the Divine nature, to reflect the beauties of the Divine character.

It is in harmony with this thought that the Apostle encourages us to rejoice in tribulation, knowing that it is working out for us patience, experience, hope, brotherly kindness and love—the facets essential to the jewel in the eyes of Him who is shortly to gather His jewels. The Apostle again speaks of even the most trying experiences of the Christian life as "light afflictions," and of the present life as but "a moment," saying, "Our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory."

The earthly lapidarist takes firm hold upon the jewel which he has already tested and proved to have the requisite jewel quality; and, encasing it in a suitable instrument, he presses it against a lap-wheel, with just the required amount of pressure to effect the necessary shaping and polishing. The process requires great skill; hence only skilled workmen are employed in this department.

So with the Lord's jewels, their value depends much on proper cutting; and this is entrusted only to the skilled hands of our Lord Jesus, of whom we are assured that He Himself passed through similar experiences of testing at the Father's hands. He knows just what we need to perfect us, that we shall be pleasing and acceptable to the Father, to reflect and refract the light of His glory when it shall fall upon us in our finished state.

A part of our lesson is to have faith in this great Master-Workman, whom the Father has appointed to shape and polish us. We may require much more trimming on some sides of our character than on others; and often the disposition is to draw back, to be not fully submissive, to fear that the Lord has abandoned us to trial. But infinite wisdom assures us that this is not so, and that to draw back would leave us "unfit for the Kingdom."

The world has seen the wheel of discipline which has been cutting the Lord's jewels for centuries, but it has not understood the necessity and the value of the process. It may have even caught an occasional glimpse of the jewels, but not to any advantage—not so as to be able to know the real merit of their characters or the value of the cutting and polishing; for even the already finished facets are smeared with the cement and slime from the grindwheel. But the great, loving Lapidarist knows and has explained it all to the jewels; and they know in part now, and by faith are trusting all the remainder.

The Lord knows just how much pressure to apply—just how much friction is necessary—and will not cause tribulation which He cannot and will not overrule for our good. Being thus assured that all things are working together for good to them that love God, His living jewels can rejoice in tribulation, knowing that it is working out in them "the peaceable fruits of righteousness"—meekness, patience, gentleness, brotherly kindness and love; that such experiences are essential and that without these they could never be amongst the gathered jewels.

We are not to suppose that those who are now pressed against the wheel of tribulation are thereby made miserable. On the contrary they realise a joy and peace which the world can neither give nor take away. And when we remember that their severe experiences and polishings are "but for a moment," as compared with the longer discipline of those who will be dealt with during the Millennium; and that in proportion to their trials they are granted more grace and will receive a reward exceedingly abundant, more than they could ask or think—then we can see that these jewels now being prepared by the Lord are highly favored above all men.

The process of seeking and polishing the jewels has already been in progress for more than eighteen centuries; and the Scriptures indicate that now the end of the Age is upon us—the time for gathering these jewels and setting them in the glory of the Divine nature. The signs of the times clearly indicate that the great Time of Trouble with which the Gospel Age is to end is even at the door, to prepare the world for the coming blessings of Messiah's Kingdom. Hence if we are to be amongst the acceptable jewels we have need to give diligence and to co-operate with the great Master-Workman, that the shaping and polishing of our hearts, our wills, may be perfected quickly, and that we may be ready to share a glorious part when He comes to make up His jewels.

Through the Prophet the Lord indicates that as soon as His jewels shall have been gathered, there will be a general change in His dealings with the world. Our context shows how it is at the present time, while the polishing of the jewels progresses. Frequently the unfaithful and the worldly seem to have the advantage; but after this polishing of the jewels is completed, and they have been set in the crown of rejoicing at the end of this Age, "Then shall ye return, and discern between the righteous and the wicked, between him that serveth God and him that serveth Him not."

Now, while evil predominates, while the Prince of this world reigns, and while "they that tempt God are even delivered," it would be difficult by outward evidences to judge who are the Lord's favored ones. Indeed, his living jewels seem to be less favored and to have more afflictions, trials, persecutions and difficulties than others. Consequently amongst them are not found many great or rich of wise, but chiefly "the poor of this world, rich in faith." But when these shall be glorified with their Lord in the Kingdom, then there will be a general change. No longer will the wicked and those who tempt God be found in power, influence and prosperity, and the meek, the godly, suffer persecution and tribulation. On the contrary, of the time when Christ's Millennial Kingdom shall be inaugurated it is declared prophetically, "In His Day the righteous shall flourish," "evil-doers shall be cut off," and Satan shall be bound.—Psalm 27:7-9; 37:9.

Our context gives another suggestion respecting the disposition of this jewel class during the time of their polishing. We read, "They that feared (reverenced) the word spake often one to another; and the Lord hearkened and heard." What could be more natural than a desire for communion with all who are of "like precious faith;" all who are similarly undergoing polishing at the hands of the great Lapidarist, all who are of the same disposition as respects God and righteousness? Our Lord points out that love of the brethren will be a marked quality in all the jewel class; and the tendency of "the brethren" is to meet frequently, either in person or through the printed page, and to speak to each other.—Malachi 3:16.

The Apostle Paul distinctly calls to our attention the necessity for this class to meet together. He exhorts, "Forget not the assembling of yourselves together, * * * and so much the more as ye see the Day drawing nigh."—the Day of gathering of the jewels. It is to this same end that our Lord has made some of His people collectively, saying, "Where two or three of you are met in My name, there am I in the midst."

When we read that these faithful ones "spake together," we naturally inquire respecting the subject upon which they communicate. It is not stated here, but is clearly pointed out elsewhere in the Word of God. The Apostle calls attention to the fact that such "mind Heavenly things," and contrasts them with those who "mind earthly things." Their conversation, therefore, will not be respecting earthly pleasures, food and raiment, the ambitions of the natural mind, the pride of life, etc., but will be respecting the things which are uppermost in their hearts; they are seeking "first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness," and in earthly matters are "content with such things as they have."

Another thought in this connection, which we should not overlook, is that brought to our attention in the words, "And the Lord hearkened and heard." As the sons of God meet to talk over the Divine Plan, the Divine Wisdom, Justice and Love, to help one another and to encourage one another with psalms, hymns, spiritual songs and the exceeding great and precious promises, how much they would be blessed if only they could always have in memory this statement! Whenever the people of God are speaking together, He listens to their conversation, to note who speak forth those words that are loving, gentle, pure, true, as distinguished from those who are careless of the truth, or whose words are vain or frivolous, or worse than this, slanderous, vnmitous and selfish.

Let all the sons of God remember the importance of honesty, "truth in the inward parts," when they come together to study the Divine Word and to help one another. "Let nothing be done through strife and vain glory"; but let each esteem the other greater than himself in saintliness—seeking to see in each other, as far as possible, the good, the noble, the true, and to watch his own heart and to know of his own blemishes. Thus let personal humility and love of the brethren keep pace with our growth in knowledge of Divine things; otherwise let us be assured that we are in the sifting and separating time; and that all who have not this spirit of humility, patience, gentleness, brotherly kindness, love, will surely be separated.

Such will not be amongst those gathered as jewels; for those whom the Lord will gather will be pure, stainless. They are to be faultless in love before the Father; and perfect love casts out not only fear, but also selfishness, animosity, evil surmises and evil speaking, self-love and pride. Beautiful indeed will be the Lord's Jewels, polished after the likeness of the great Jewel, our Lord Jesus Christ.

HAD DYSPEPSIA

So Bad Could Not Take a Drink of Water Without Suffering.

Dyspepsia is one of the most difficult diseases of the stomach there is to cure. You eat too much. Drink too much. Use too much tobacco. You make the stomach work overtime. You make it perform more than it should be called on to do. The natural result is that it is going to rebel against the amount of work put on it. It is only a matter of a short time before dyspepsia follows.

That old, forty year old remedy, Burdock Blood Bitters, will cure the dyspepsia and will cure it to stay cured as we can prove by the thousands of testimonials we have received from time to time.

Miss Sarah McRae, Newfield, Ont., writes: "I write to say that I have used your Burdock Blood Bitters, and have found it the best remedy I have ever used for dyspepsia. Two years ago, I had stomach trouble so bad that I could not even take a drink of water without suffering. I took six bottles of B.B.B., and have been entirely cured, and can now eat anything without any bad after effects."

Burdock Blood Bitters is an old and well tried remedy but on account of the many substitutes we would ask you to make sure that our name appears on both the label and wrapper as this preparation is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Don't Know of War Yet.

Not until March will the population of the most northern portion of the Mackenzie Basin, which extends north of Edmonton to the Arctic Ocean, know that the greatest war the world has ever seen is in progress.

This was the statement made by Mgr. Gabriel Eli Breynat, O.M.I., titular Bishop of Adramyte, and Apostolic Vicar of Mackenzie, who passed through the east recently, en route for Rome.

Belgium's Indemnity.

Apart from the war indemnities imposed by the Germans upon several towns in Belgium, the country as a whole has been called upon to furnish a war indemnity of $7,000,000 per month as long as the war lasts.

After a moment's thought Elsie wrote as follows: "In summer I love to ferment among the flowers in our garden."

"What's the trouble?"

Italy's Blind Poet.

The Italian poet Scapinelli, who was born at Modena in 1585, was blind from his birth. He held a professor's chair successively at Bologna, Modena and Pisa, and, having then been recalled to occupy the place of chief professor of eloquence, on which he had long set his heart, in the first of these universities, died there in the forty-ninth year of his age. Scapinelli, besides several prose compositions, wrote verses both in Italian and Latin, and all his works are distinguished not only by their learning, but by a purity and elegance of diction rare at the time when he flourished. He was accounted, indeed, one of the most finished scholars of his day.

All Around Shooting.

He had spun a few tall stories about his deadly shooting experiences, and every one in the carriage was growing weary when a Scotsman spoke.

"I remember when out shooting rabbits one day," he said, "I was preparing to go home, when I noted one round the side of a haystack, and after dodging after him awhile and always missing him a brilliant idea struck me. Bending the muzzle of my gun into a half circle, I took steady aim and fired."

"And did you kill him?" sarcastically inquired the sportsman.

"No," was the ready reply; "I shot myself in the back."—London Telegraph.

Very Nicely English.

This curious Bengali English was used to advertise a circus in India: "Some horse will make very good tricks. The klown will come and talk with that horses therefore audience will laugh itself very much. The lady will walk on horses back and horse is jumping very much also. One man will make so tricks of trapeze audience will fraid himself very much. One lady will make himself so bend, then everybody he will think, he is the rubber lady. This is the very grand display. This is the very better gymnastics. One man will walk on wire tight, he is doing very nicely because he is professor of that."

SHORT TALES FROM WRITERS OF THE WORLD WAR BATTLES

ATTACK AND COUNTER ATTACK IN THE FOREST OF ARGONNE—A STRUGGLE FOR A FEW YARDS.

THE special artist of the Sphere sends a picture illustrating the fierce fighting which is taking place in the Argonne forest country. A trench held by the French had been taken by the Germans. The French commander ordered a counter attack, and his men retook their lost position, when the Germans made a second attempt to capture the coveted line. The situation was one of intense strain, says the Sphere, the Gallic spirit rising to the highest pitch of exultation. Masses of gray figures attempted to charge across the intervening space, but "les Poilus" held them back. Every day these trenches are held by the opposing forces, who snipe one another from the cover of the earth works. Then the situation will froth up into such an incident as is depicted here.

Sleepy Briton Defends Whole Village Unaided

Wounded Sergeant Tells How His Opinion Changed Respecting Recruit Known as "His Lordship" and Noted for His Dislike of Exertion.

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 30.

"Never again will I judge a man by his appearance," said a wounded sergeant, when asked for his most thrilling battle experience. "When we started for the front we had in our company a man whom I simply could not stand. He was tall, well built, rather good looking, with light hair and mustache, and most awfully lazy. There was no mistake about it—he had wealthy parents, a man who had never travelled without a valet, and never walked when an automobile was near enough to be called.

"On the moment of his arrival in our midst we named him 'his lordship,' and bets were made that he would succumb after the first day's march. Not a bit of it. It is true he looked tired at the start, but he looked no more so at the finish. But when we reached the place where we were to rest for the night, he calmly unwound his puttees, underneath which he wore real red silk socks. We felt a bit shy. Silk socks for a soldier are clearly against the army regulations.

"But this was nothing to what he did. He got out a nice leather box, opened it, extracted some sort of instrument and proceeded to manicure his nails. The beggar did it as coolly as if he had been in his own Mayfair flat.

"All the boys gathered round him to watch the performance, but I put an end to it by promising him four days of the 'ordinary,' which he was to undergo after the taking of Berlin, for, you see, we could not very well spare the men just then.

"We were finally placed in the trenches. 'His lordship' did everything ungrudgingly, but he could not sleep without a pillow, so he paid four packets of cigarettes a day to a fat fellow, and rested his head on the latter's stomach. But we began to respect him from the day when he laid low sixteen Germans with eighteen cartridges. It was 'some shooting,' and he did it as nonchalantly as if he were in a rifle gallery; but he was so lazy that he would not brush the perspiration off his forehead. Instead, he asked his neighbor to do it for him.

"Well, we left the trenches—that is some of us did, and some did not—and then one day we were ordered to take by assault a village occupied by a Bavarian regiment.

"To give added courage to the men, our captain said:—'You see these houses? There are beds in them, and these beds are for your use if we take the village.' Take my word for it, we did not lose any time, and if I did not hustle then, I never hustled in all my life. I was among the first to reach the nearest house—at least I thought I was, but when I dashed in I found 'his lordship' calmly stretched out on a bed previously occupied by a German officer, whom he had thrown out of the window.

"We thought that we could have a good night's rest, but about three o'clock in the morning we were told to get up, as a German regiment was marching against us. I awoke my men, and all rose without a murmur, all except 'his lordship.'

"'Get up!' I shouted.

"He opened one eye, looked at me and said, 'Not on your life.'

"'What do you mean?' I was choking with anger. 'We must retreat; a whole German regiment is about to attack us.'

"'If it is the whole German army, I will not give up my bed to them,' he answered with some heat—the first time I saw him get hot about anything at all.

"'I order you'— I started to say, but he shut his eye, turned on the other side and slept. I added eight days to his 'solitary,' and as I could not very well carry him out on my shoulders I left him to his fate.

"We retired upon an adjoining hill, without a shot, and this village to await reinforcements. At dawn our captain, who was watching the enemy through field glasses, exclaimed with surprise:—'This is curious! They have not entered the village yet. They content themselves with shooting at the houses.'

"I looked in turn. It was true, the Germans were held back by somebody, and every now and then one of them fell. And then I saw at one of the windows a white apparition. It was 'his lordship,' rifle in hand, defending his bed.

"Our reinforcements arrived, we took back the village, and—can you imagine where I found 'his lordship?' He was fast asleep in the bed. I shook him; he opened an eye and muttered:—'Bring me my coffee.' I gave him four more days of 'solitary,' and the general added an order to have him mentioned in despatches.

"I suppose he is still fighting and doing good work, while I have taken the pledge never to judge a man by his looks."

BELGIAN OFFICER'S DAUGHTER TELLS THRILLING TALE OF CLEVER ESCAPE

Turned Back Once from Holland Frontier on Way from Brussels, She Passed as Wife of Gentleman Who Possessed a Privileged Permit to Cross the Dutch Border and Thus Gained Freedom.

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 30.

A Belgian officer's daughter and wife of London solicitor who happened to be at her old home in Belgium at the outbreak of the war has now succeeded in making her escape from Brussels and tells a thrilling tale of the hardships she had to undergo and the ruses she had to adopt before she was able, after five months' separation, to rejoin her husband in England.

It was not till December 11 that she found herself in a position to make the attempt, when she obtained a conditional passport entitling her to travel within the eastern half of Belgium.

"Then," she says, "I 'contracted' with [illegible] agents' who make a specialty of conveying passengers in unlawful fashion across the Dutch frontier, and I left the Belgian capital as one of a party of ten under his guidance."

The railways being closed to them, they had to proceed by easy stages on foot or in country cabs when they could get them to the frontier town of X——, and put up at an inn while the contractor hurried to the "Kommandatur," or office, of the local German administrators. He returned looking "rather glum," saying that they had each to apply in person.

"We entered the Kommandatur, and the trap so cunningly laid for us by the Germans, to find ourselves placed under immediate arrest. Each of us in turn was closely cross-examined and re-examined both publicly and in private, by a Prussian colonel and lieutenant, and then, certain contradictions having struck our warders, we were searched one by one in a neighboring room; the women, at any rate, in most horrid fashion, hardly an inch of their clothing or of their person escaping the fingers of the searcher, a 'nun,' of whose real profession and sex I am still in doubt.

"On hearing the order for the search one of my lady companions, a well known Brussels actress, swooned, or pretended to. And when a male companion of hers failed to reappear the mystery was explained to us by the old colonel, who told us that a secret code and official reports to the Belgian government had been found hidden away in the lining of his jacket. He was a spy and would be at once conveyed to the citadel of Antwerp and dealt with. To-morrow, pouf! pouf!' grimly added the Prussian veteran, by way of comment. As for ourselves, as we were, to all appearances, associated with such a person, we would at least be detained as 'suspects' pending further inquiries."

Not until nearly midnight were they allowed to return to the inn, which they did under an armed escort. "Sadly we sat in the dining room, bewailing our misfortunes, when all of a sudden the young actress, now in tears, confessed to us that she, too, was a Belgian secret agent—in fact the partner of the doomed man—and that upstairs, in her bag, there were State [illegible] begged us, therefore, as patriots, in case she was arrested, to burn those papers.

"A little later—about two o'clock—in comes a German N. C. O. and an escort to order forcibly her return to the Kommandatur. Completely collected now, she bade us an revoir with a nervous smile and a glance which I shall never forget. When she had gone one of us glided up to the bedroom to fetch the precious papers. The question was how to destroy them without attracting the attention of the sentries placed before our window. There was no other fire burning in the house save in the dining room. Then one of us, again a woman, hit upon a novel plan for disposing of the papers. We moved the table and, as if to pass the time, started dancing all round the room and in front of the hearth. And then as each of our 'merry' party neared the fireplace he or she flung a share of the papers into the flames until the whole lot were consumed. Then upon some abrupt remark, by one of the sentries we quieted down very gradually to allay any lurking suspicions in his mind.

"At dawn a German N. C. O. arrived from the Kommandatur and politely told us in excellent French that his chiefs were satisfied of our innocence in the matter, but that as no one could leave the country without a special permit from the Governor General we should have to return to Brussels by the way we had come, this time under German supervision. As for our former guide, he was in a fortress."

But back in Brussels she determined to have another try. "After spending a sorrowful and memorable night in the fortress city I accepted a rather timid offer by a gentleman, who possessed a privileged 'permit' to cross the Dutch border, to accompany him and his wife. He was, however, very much unnerved at the thought of the punishment that might befall him in the event of his administrative and social misdemeanor being found out.

"Still, one fine morning, about five o'clock, off we went, the two of us, in a carriage driven by a courageous 'jobber.' As we drove along we encountered crowds of would-be emigrants, who had been roughly sent back by the German frontier guards, and who shouted to us again and again:—'It is no use trying. The won't let you through.' My escort got nervous at this point, and suggested giving up the attempt altogether. But I would not hear of this, and alternately coaxed and lured [illegible] stops at every turn as we near the frontier zone and inquires as to the attitudes of the German military posts at various points. Every one thinks the business a most hazardous one. But no matter. 'Vorwarts!' as the mad Kaiser would say.

"Suddenly we pull up. Two sentries, with fixed bayonets, appear at the horse's head and cry 'Halt!' No joke, this. Only the other day a whole party were shot down for failing to stop when ordered. A moment later both doors of our carriage are simultaneously thrown open by two German officers, one on each side, who demand our passports.

"'Husband and wife?' A timid 'Yes!'

"The danger climax is reached. Will they notice that our passports bear different names and different conditions? The officer who is inspecting my husband's permit grunts his approval, and inquires of his colleague regarding mine. The colleague in reply points out to me that my passports does not authorize me to travel across the frontier. I explain that I should like to see my husband to the frontier limit, adding with a smile, 'Surely, sir, you will understand that wish. It's a pleasure to meet people who speak French so well, and to whom one can explain things.'

"My German officer beams, my reference to his linguistic accomplishments evidently pleasing him and, with a friendly nod to the driver, says:—'All right, go ahead!'

British Red Tape Keeps War Clerks Busy in Field

Records and Accounts Cover Wide Range, from Company Details to the Official Despatches of the Commander in Chief to the Government.

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 30.

The enthusiastic recruit, eager to complete his training in order to "do his bit" in "whipping the German," does not always get his heart's desire. If he has been a clerk in a city office or a bank, and if it is discovered that he is gifted with a certain amount of intelligence and knowledge of accountancy he is as likely as not sent to an office at headquarters and hardly ever hears even the sound of a gun. For on service it is often the pen rather than the sword that is most in request. I have it on the authority of a staff officer that red tape follows the British army everywhere—even to the front.

Although the regulations emphatically declare that office work in the field is to be restricted to what is absolutely indispensible, there is nearly as much of it to be done on active service as at home. The amount, indeed, is quite prodigious, and garrison and camp abound with reports and returns and documents on every imaginable subject. Scarcely anything is considered too trivial for this clerical attention.

Thus, if Private Tompkins has lost a haversack a long memorandum must be compiled explaining how, when and where the disaster occurred, and if Colonel Jones is of opinion that the ration bread issued to his regiment is not up to sample, another memorandum is wanted—this time probably in duplicate or triplicate. To avoid undue accumulation when a regiment or division is actually in the fighting line all the multitudinous documents concerning it—except such as have to be kept for reference—are despatched to the nearest base camp or garrison. The former are marked "K" (keep) and the latter "R" (record). At regular intervals they are examined, and those found unnecessary to preserve are destroyed.

For use in the field a regiment or battalion takes with it a "conduct book" of non-commissioned officers and men, a cash account and a "war diary," together with certain other books. The "war diary" is kept by the commanding officer, and is made out in duplicate. Its object is twofold: (1) to furnish a trustworthy record of the operations, and, (2) to collect valuable information for future guidance. Such a volume is entered up daily, and among the various points with which it deals are the recording of despatches and telegrams, marches and movements, operations against the enemy, and casualties sustained in action. Where important battles are concerned detailed accounts are added in appendices. At the end of each month one copy is sent to the base for transmission to England.

For all practical purposes military documents are classified either as "State" or "Return." Between the two there is a technical difference. Thus a "State" is merely a written, telegraphed, or even a verbal report, the object of which is to keep a commander furnished with the fighting efficiency of the troops under him. Promptness, rather than absolute accuracy, is therefore required of a "State." A memorandum of this description is furnished daily. It shows the general condition of the troops employed and the number of the officers and men, guns, &c. After an action a "State" is at once prepared giving the total of killed, wounded and missing.

A "Return" goes more into detail than a "State," and as it is drawn up for statistical purposes and subsequent reference, accuracy in its compilation is essential. On this account "Returns" are rendered weekly or monthly instead of daily. A considerable number are required. They cover all sorts of subjects, from discipline and casualties to cash accounts and soldiers' wills. These last are written in the paybook, which the soldier carries with him.

The prompt notification of casualties is an important matter on active service. All deaths resulting from wounds or injuries in the field are recorded on a special list, and transmitted to the adjutant general's office at the base. Before a dead soldier is buried his identity disk, paybook and any personal effects found on him—including his will—are examined and put aside. These articles are then handed over to the officer under whose care he happened to be at the time of his death. A similar procedure is adopted with regard to the enemy's killed and wounded that fall into our hands. In the case of prisoners of war who are captured a receipt is given them for any money or valuables taken from them.

The commander of the division, regiment, battalion, corps or base has also to issue a set of "orders" every day. These serve as the official channel of communications between the commander and all ranks under him and describe in succinct form the military happenings of the previous twenty-four hours and any directions for the future. Among the various matters mentioned therein are those of descriptive movements, arrivals and departures, rewards and punishments, casualties and admissions to and discharges from hospitals.

Practically the only person qualified to write despatches in the field is the commander in chief. These are addressed to the government. In preparing them the commander in chief is assisted by the written reports of subordinate commanders serving under him. A despatch has to describe in detail every action fought, irrespective of its magnitude, and also to treat of gallant or meritorious conduct of individuals or units.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

SORTER BLIND

By Agnes B. Dustin

"YOU'RE all het up, Jane, cooking dinner for the men-folks. Let me do up the dishes. I'd just as soon help a bit when you're so busy as not, and had rather." Marm Kinne's sturdy bulk hesitated in the sitting-room door as she appealed to her bustling daughter-in-law.

"Now, Marm, you go right back and sit down in your rocker," Jane urged kindly. "There's no hurry about the dishes, and I'm not going to have you get all tuckered out. Just leave things to me."

Back in her cushioned rocking-chair Marm Kinne slowly fumbled in her work basket for her steel-bowed spectacles, set them far down the bridge of her nose, and picked up the weekly "Clarion." Now and then as she read Marm fidgeted in her chair, hitched nearer the light, then shoved back again, yawned prodigiously, and shortly pushed the paper off her lap.

"Nothing's happened, and nothing seems likely to, nary a thing," she told herself with disgust. "What's those turkeys yeeping about?" she wondered. "Presume they're hungry. I'll just step into the further but'ry and fetch them a bite."

Marm softly crossed the piazza and entered the back pantry, where a tin bucket of curds and whey, hot from the stove, stood cooling on the wide shelf. With a dish of white curds in her hand the old woman descended the steps and sought the turkey coop in the shade of the Red Astrachan tree.

"There, you poor little yeepers, these will sorter comfort your stomachs," she consoled, sprinkling the warm and peppered curds generously on the feeding board with evident satisfaction of spirit.

"What are you doing, Marm?" shrilled Jane's voice from the kitchen window. She hurried down the path and solicitously helped the old woman up the piazza steps. "Those turkeys don't need a crumb, for I've only just filled them up. Now, hadn't you better go and have your nap, Marm? You mustn't tire yourself this terrible hot weather."

"I just thought I'd rake up the yard. Sam's littered it some, dragging hay," confessed Marm, apology in her tones.

"It wouldn't do a bit of good till the last load is in," vetoed Jane, a little impatiently. "I'll see about it then, so don't you fret. You've worked hard for over seventy years, Marm, and now Sam and I want you to have some leisure. I guess I'm capable of doing what is to be done here, and you needn't feel called to worry. Just take things easy."

Marm left the kitchen with lengthened face and sought her creaking rocker in evident perturbation of spirit. "Take it easy! Haven't I been tugging to take it easy all summer?" she wrathfully appealed to the household cat, contentedly washing his face in the armchair opposite. "I don't want to buck up against Jane, but this doing nothing is going to stop. Seems as if I'd fly off from the handle sitting here, and I can't stand it, and I won't! Sam and his wife mean well, but they're overdoing this 'eisure business. It's against natur'. I'll have to show 'em— Land, if that isn't Billy Bogle driving by with the nurse he got over to Centerville! Seems as if Mis' Towle did say in here yesterday that the nurse couldn't stop longer because of her husband's taking rheumatis worse. I dunno what Mary Bogle will do alone with that two-weeks-old baby. It's dretful pindling too, they say, and Mary was never more than middling gumptious. I dunno but—I wisht—"

A half hour later Marm appeared, bonneted and shawled, before her daughter-in-law. "I'm going along down towards Hannah's, Jane," she declared, "and you needn't be a mite surprised if I stay a couple of days. John will bring me home when I want to come."

"Why, Marm, Sam will harness up and take you down," was Jane's cheerful response. "That hill is steep, and you might step on a rolling stone and fall. I'll go right out and call him."

"No, you don't," denied Marm vigorously. "I'd rather amble along as I've a mind to. It's too pretty an afternoon to be driven."

"Well, it isn't such a great ways," conceded Jane reluctantly. "Do be careful, and take your time going, and I hope you and Hannah will have a real good spell of visiting."

Jane accompanied her mother-in-law to the gate, and with copious admonitions watched her step sturdily off down the pleasant hill.

Two days later John Kinne, Hannah's husband, drove into the yard to borrow the corn cutter and Jane hastened out.

"Marm didn't get all tuckered out walking down, did she, John?" I tried my best to have her let Sam drive her, but she wouldn't."

"Marm? What are you talking about, Jane?" probed John. "I haven't set eyes on Marm for a week."

"Haven't seen Marm?" shrilled Jane, growing as white as her stiffly starched apron. "Where've you been? Isn't she down at Hannah's?"

"She's not," denied John, staring hard at his sister-in-law. "I just came from home, and Marm hasn't been there."

"Marm's lost, or something awful has happened to her," wailed Jane wildly. "She tramped off by herself day before yesterday—said she was going to Hannah's, and now — she ain't—nowheres."

The two stared at each other in bewilderment until Jane's energetic good sense came to her rescue.

"You turn right round, John, and drive to all the neighbors," she cried, snatching up her sunbonnet. "We can see if they've heard anything. Put the lick on, for mercy's sake, and get somewheres! Oh, my soul, this comes of letting old folks traipse off by themselves!"

Jane's lamentations were snapped off short by the buggy whirling into the nearest neighbor's, Billy Bogle's, yard; and there Marm Kinne stood revealed to her distracted relatives, contentedly pinning a large wash to the line.

"Why, howdy, John and Jane," Marm called genially. "I hope you didn't get worried about me. I was going to send word to-night. You see, I stopped here to Mary Bogle's instead of going on to Hannah's, for Mary was needing help real bad. Come right in, can't you? The baby's right cute."

Jane descended abstractedly from the buggy and followed the older woman's bustling figure indoors. "You'd better go and get your corn cutter," she directed from the doorway to the gaping figure holding the slack lines; then she plumped down in the nearest chair.

"Take off your bunnit, and can't you stay to supper?" urged Marm. "I've made rin biscuits, and we've got peaches and sponge cake. Mary and I put up twelve quarts of peaches yesterday. Mary could pare them real spry. Come right in now and see the folks, Jane."

Jane duly admired the baby and talked to lackadaisical Mary Bogle, but her surprised attention centered on Marm—a transformed Marm, she told herself, who bustled actively about, discharging the duties of hostess with the old hospitality Jane remembered as characteristic of Sam's mother when Jane first came to the farm. It struck Jane as strangely odd that Marm should have to leave her own home in order to exercise her gift for hospitality. A great enlightenment dawned slowly in Jane's mind, and she shortly followed her mother-in-law into the tidy kitchen.

"I guess I've made a mistake, Marm," Jane contritely owned. "I don't see how I came to be so sorter blind. I reckon you can do what work you like on your own place and have company and such without going to the neighbors. I'll send Sam down after you to-night; and I'll just step over and ask Hannah to come up to-morrow, and I'll tell her you will make us some sponge cake."

Marm's unfaded eyes rested fondly on her daughter-in-law. "You've always meant well, Jane," she declared soothingly. "I haven't wanted to badger anybody, but it would seem real good to be puttering round doing the old chores."

SEASIDE CATCHES.

Everything From Whales to String In Flotsam on British Coast.

It may come as a surprise to the reader to learn that whales and porpoises often visit British shores, and that several whale-hunts have taken place at prominent seaside resorts.

According to an old fisherman interviewed by the writer recently, whales are often found when the tide is out lying half-buried in the sand. It was not so very long ago that over sixty bottle-nosed whales were stranded in Mount's Bay, near Penzance. They came in with the tide, and were left helpless at low water. Crowds of holiday-makers made their way to the beach to inspect the whales, some of which measured quite 25 feet from nose to tail. Several mischievous lads slashed the leviathans with pocket knives, and eventually the wounded monsters were killed by gunshot. Later, when the tide returned, the living whales, nearly forty in number, floated off into the sea.

A large whale was once thrown upon the beach at Scarborough, and when it came to be measured it was found to be no less than 49 feet in length.

Perhaps the largest whale ever caught by chance was the one towed into Ostend Harbor many years ago. It measures over 100 feet in length, and weighed 249 tons. Four thousand gallons of oil were obtained from the blubber, and the skeleton was conveyed to London and exhibited to the public at so much per head.

The sea is constantly throwing up strange things upon the shore. Much excitement was caused at Mundesley-on-Sea, Norfolk, some time ago, when it became known that old gold coins were being washed up on the beach. Men and women flocked to the shore in the hope of securing treasure-trove. It is said that on various occasions over $250 in gold coins were picked up on the foreshore, scarcely a day passing but that guineas, half guineas, George shillings and sixpences were found on the sands. One man discovered a guinea and a half guinea well within an hour. Some of the older coins which were flung up by the sea dated to the reigns of Charles II., William and Mary, and George III., and it was surmised that they came from the numerous wrecks which took place on the coast years ago.

There is a class of men and women who earn a livelihood by walking along the coasts of Britain gathering together what articles of value they come across. The larger portion of their "finds" consists of rubbish such as bits of string, bottles, old boots, fragments of fishing-nets, old iron, wood, and so on, but now and again they are lucky enough to discover some valuable relic which has been thrown up by the sea. One man who picked up a living on the sands once found a Roman sword, which he sold to an antiquarian for $50, while on another occasion he picked up a little mosaic box with a map of ancient Britain cut into the lid and worth nearly $500.

Made Him Famous.

A. M. Palmer, the famous theatrical manager, once told a story which illustrated the reason for Mansfield's success on the stage. Mansfield before he was known to fame was cast for the part of Baron Chevrial, a part so small that other actors refused to play it. The night of the first performance Mansfield made the hit of the production owing to the realistic manner in which he simulated death from paralysis. It afterward transpired that he had employed a physician to coach him in portraying the effects of a paralytic stroke.

Feats of a Strong Man.

Well known in the old buffalo days of Saskatchewan was Joe Beaupre, famed a thousand miles as the biggest eater in the north. Joe was not six feet tall, but he was a broad, deep, thick sort of man, with a hand like a ham and a stomach like nothing else in the world. He would eat an entire boxful of apples at one sitting and think nothing of it. Once, having encountered a gentleman who thought he was some eater, Joe consumed fifty-three pounds of buffalo meat in one day and topped off with a raw turnip, a six pound piece of pork, some lard and two loaves of bread. The best his competitor could do was thirty-seven pounds of meat. Beaupre was so strong he never would fight any man for fear he should kill him. One day, while sledding on a narrow trail with an obstinate horse, he became angered, struck the horse on the head with his fist and killed it. He loosened the harness and threw the dead animal on one side of the trail. He never really knew how strong he was. Beaupre died of rheumatism while still a young man.—Saturday Evening Post.

The Seventh Inning Stretch.

It is a simple ceremonial, but impressive, like all manifestations of the soul of a multitude. I need only close my eyes to call up the picture vividly. It is a day of brilliant sunshine, and a great crowd of men is seated in the open air, a crowd made up of all conditions, ages, races, temperaments and states of mind. The crowd has sat there an hour or more, while the afternoon sun has slanted deeper into the west and the shadows have crept across greensward and hard baked clay to the eastern horizon. Then, almost with a single motion—the time may be somewhere between 4 o'clock and 5 o'clock—this multitude of divers minds and tempers rises to its feet and stands silent, while one might count twenty perhaps. Nothing is said. No high priest intones prayer for this vast congregation. Nevertheless, the impulse of 10,000 hearts is obviously focused into a single desire. When you have counted twenty the crowd sinks back to the benches. A half minute at most and the rite is over.—Simeon Strunsky in Atlantic.

TO CHECK A COLD.

It is easy to check a cold if you begin in time. Frequent doses of Dr Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine keep the cough loose, allay the inflammation and so prevent it spreading to the bronchial tubes and lungs. Mrs. S. M. Moore, Shortreed, B. C., writes: "I wish to state my gratitude for Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, for it cured a cold which a friend said would soon put me in the grave."

HARDNESS OF WATER.

Solid Streams at High Velocity Are as Rigid as Iron.

In the American Magazine a contributor gives a most interesting description of the resisting power of water. He says that a solid stream of water shot out of a hose at tremendous velocity is just as powerful and destructive as a rod of iron. An extract from the article giving an idea of the hardness and resisting power of water follows:

"Here is a fact which is probably novel to the average man who has not spent much of his life thinking about motor speed boats. This is what we may call the hardness of the water when a boat is running at speed. Water at fifty miles an hour is not the limpid liquid we are accustomed to bathe in. If you put your arm overboard from a hydroplane running at fifty miles an hour and strike a wave crest the probability is that you will break your arm or wrist, because at that speed the water has not time to give, not time even to change shape, and striking it is like striking so much metal.

"In the great hydraulic mining nozzles, where a stream of water under enormous head is used to wash down hillsides, a swordsman, in attempting to cut into one of these streams, will shatter the sword without being able to penetrate the water. The stream is like a bar of iron. The fact that water at relative speed is so hard—or that its inertia is so great, to be a little more accurate—is the reason why a skipping stone travels over the surface and is the reason why a hydroplane boat slides over the surface instead of plowing its way through.

"The picture we must have in our minds, then, of a speed boat is that she is traveling not in water, as we ordinarily understand it, but over the surface of a semisolid, very much as a sled travels over snow."

Walking is fine exercise, but there's a difference between stretching your legs a bit and having them pulled.

As a general thing, the kind of man who makes hay while the sun shines has something saved for a rainy day.

Women of the future will be bald, says a German scientist. There's such a thing as carrying this equality thing too far.

The militant suffragettes have a grim sense of humor in choosing for their distinctive weapon the butcher's cleaver.

A Man's Question A Woman's Answer

Forcible Sermon by Rev. J. E. Webb at Murray Street Baptist Church Last Night

"It would be infinitely better that two young people should never meet, than coming together in this blessedness of marriage. They let their intellects be downed by the lust of their bodies." Such was the theme of the sermon delivered by Rev. J. E. Webb at the Murray Street Baptist Church, last evening on "A Man's Question and a Woman's Answer."

Rev. Mr. Webb took his text from Genesis 24, verse 58: "And they called Rebekah, and said unto her: Wilt thou go with this man? And she said: I will go."

The twenty-fourth chapter of Genesis was a prelude to the marriage of Isaac and Rebekah and the twenty-seventh chapter was the sequel. Because the young husband set his soul on things material and matters physical and the young woman tried to plan all her future life, leaving God out, their lives were failures. Isaac loved Jacob as his favourite son, because Jacob brought him venison. The same thing would be expressed to-day that Isaac loved Jacob as his favourite son because Jacob was a money maker. A man living only to make money finds himself in the [illegible] found himself in the twenty-seventh chapter of Genesis.

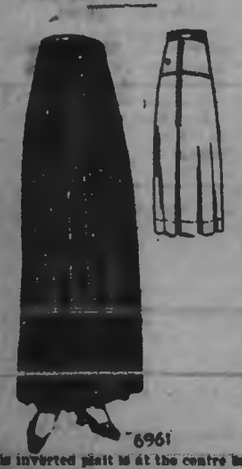
The life lived simply for the flesh was enough to damn any home. One heard the expression on all sides "she married well". So many people were under the impression that "marrying well" meant a large purse. If the possibilities of a cheque book meant more than the exploits of a mind of intellect, then they could be said to have "married well." "No girl marries well unless she gets a man who brings her that which makes every day a new day, and who brings her mind upwards."

Rebekah had something to do with the spelling of this home, too. Discrimination, deception, discord and disaster was the record of Isaac's home. Lots of women who will climb up on a chair from a little grey mouse, will snatch the wheel of her destiny out of the hand of Almighty God.

There was nothing said about the death of Rebekah. Perhaps the curtain was mercifully drawn. "If we attempt to live our lives apart from Him and if we begin our home without resting its concerns of Jesus Christ, the less said about the deathbed the better."

Isaac failed and Rebekah failed. God keep us from anything like this.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE



This inverted plait is at the centre back, the old position, and serving the old purpose of producing width at the lower edge for convenience in walking, a consideration which sounds odd after all we have been through. The plaits at the side front give some spring to the skirt and strike for it the happy medium between the straight skirt and the new extremely full one. The yoke is deep and terminates under the front panel, a very good style point. The front closing is smart looking and convenient for the woman who likes to get into her clothes quickly. Wool mixtures and serge are good materials for this design.

What length skirts shall be is the question most women are asking themselves, and the answer is not exactly easy to state. It is one thing to decide that skirts are going to be very short, on the authority of the fashion journals, but another to find them so short in actual existence. On the promenade the short skirt is the exception, however smart it may appear, the rest being moderate, perhaps a little shorter than last winter, but not the six inches from the ground we have been led to expect. It may be that spring will see the short skirt universally worn.

Price 10 cents.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required and age of a child.

INTERESTING LETTER FROM PETERBORO' BOY WITH FIRST CONTINGENT

The following interesting letter received by Trainmaster J. D. McMillan, of Lindsay, was written by a Peterborough boy, Harvie Staunton, who went to the front with the 4th Regiment of Lindsay, and afterwards transferred with a number of other Peterborough boys to the 48th Highlanders:

Lark Hill, Jan. 11th, 1915.

Mr. J. D. McMillan, Lindsay, Ont.:

Dear Sir,—Received yours of recent date, when I got out of hospital. I was in for operation on leg for varicose veins, and the operation was entirely successful, and I am now able to be about again and do my work with the company. It is good to be back into the line again, as it gets so tiresome in hospital doing nothing but read papers, etc. I was up to London and the north of Ireland for a short time after leaving hospital on sick leave. While in London I visited the G.T.R. offices, and met a Mr. Curtain, an old Lindsay boy. He knew you and many of the railroad men about there. I think he said his father was on construction car, and wished to be remembered to all his old Lindsay friends. We have been having terrible weather here; all the villages in the valley have been flooded out. The village close by here had water waist deep on the main street, and the people have to live in the upper stories of the houses and go about in boats. The mud in the camp grounds is over your boot tops as soon as you step outside of the door, and if you stray away from regular paths it is knee deep. In the trenches in France they say that the mud is up to the waist, and the suffering has been intense.

I have been talking to quite a few of the wounded, and they say it is something terrible. They say it is not war, but murder and butchery, and in many cases worse. The Germans are doing the most disgraceful things that one hates to even think about.

The rain has been so bad that we had to give up drilling for over three weeks and no fatigue duties, such as making roads, unloading lumber, coal, building huts, etc. Imagine unloading lumber off the open coal cars that only hold from 5, 8 and 10 tons. They seem so small after seeing the fifty-ton coal cars on G.T.R. and the old-fashioned chain couplings. The brakes work from side of car, by pressing down on a lever and putting a pin through a hole above it and holding it in that manner.

While I was visiting relations in Ireland I had quite an experience with the Irish railways. I left Belfast 10 p.m. for Strabane Christmas Day. They only run the one train on that day. I got there at 2 a.m. No train until next day for Letterkenny, as it was Christmas. I happened to get on a mail extra and got there at 5 a.m. Next day was Boxing day, and only one train running, so had to wait until after 11 a.m. for train to destination. Arrived there at 1 o'clock, and the whole journey, should only take about four hours. The last stretch was twelve miles by the waggon road, but the railway was narrow guage, and went here and there wherever they could get between the rocks, and must have been about 70 miles. I had a very pleasant time there though, and hate to leave to go back to the mud at camp. I see by the papers that there was an accident at Campbellford. Hope the boys are all well again and able to be around.

I wish to thank all the ladies of Lindsay who so kindly sent each of the boys from the old town a very acceptable present, and the boys wish to join with me in doing so. The cigarettes and tobacco were fine, as it is a treat to get some Canadian tobacco again. The socks and woollen goods are always acceptable, as we have to change so often on account of the wet.

I am sorry that things are so slack this winter, as it makes times so hard from every point of view, but we have to expect such things in a time like the present, so we hope it will soon be over and good times come again.

We got word that we would be going to France at end of January to complete our training as it is such bad weather here and so much rain.

Well, I guess this will be all for present, as it is almost time to turn in for lights out, and to-morrow is going to be a hard day. Remember me to all the boys and best regards to your self. Yours truly,

HARVIE J. STAUNTON.

SUNDAY MORNING SERVICE AT ST. JOHN'S CHURCH

Lessons From the Life of Solomon

Taking as his text, I. Kings, 11:4—"For it came to pass, when Solomon was old that his wives turned away his heart after the gods; and his heart was not perfect with the Lord his God, as was the heart of David, his father," the Rev. Canon Davidson, in a very brief address, reviewed the tragedy in the life of Solomon, caused by his provoking God.

Solomon began his reign in the fear, favour and guidance of God "Give, therefore thy servant an understanding heart," cried he, "to judge thy people, that I may discern between good and bad."

Great prosperity had attended him. Large public buildings had been erected. For himself he had built a mighty palace which required thirteen years to complete, also a mansion in the forest of Lebanon, as well as one for his wife, the daughter of Pharaoh. National undertakings had been brought to successful issue, such as the wall around Jerusalem, great cities, vineyards, orchards and pools, his crowning achievement being the erection of a temple unto the Lord.

His kingdom had attained to the highest point of worldly glory. He lived a busy, exciting, luxurious life. Distinguished visitors came to see the magnificence of his court and were lavishly entertained. Even the Queen of Sheba journeyed from a far country to see for herself the glories of which she had heard, and she exclaimed: "The half has not been told."

And, however, if adversity hath killed its thousands, prosperity hath killed its ten thousands; Solomon could not stand prosperity, and he set his heart on other gods.

As full cart load and hay down cease so does too much fortune bend and break the mind.

Greatness stands upon a precipice, and if prosperity carries a man ever so little beyond his poise, it overbears and dashes him to pieces.

Lust is an enemy to the person, a canker to the mind, a corrosive to the conscience, a weakness of the intellect, a besotter of the senses, and a mortal bane to all the body. Luxury is a vampire which soothes us into a fatal slumber, while it sucks the blood of our veins.

What a contrast! In his youth Solomon was an instrument used by God. In his old age, he turned his back upon God, loved many strange women, built for them temples in which to worship their heathen gods, even joining their priests in their worship.

Was he happy? No. In desperation he cries: "Then I looked on all the works that my hands had wrought, and on the labour that I had laboured to do; and, behold, all was vanity and vexation of spirit; and there was no profit under the sun. He that increaseth knowledge increaseth sorrow, for, vanity of vanities, all is vanity."

When the heart has no more to wish for, it yawns over its possessions, and the energy of the soul goes out like a fire that has no more to devour.

Because Solomon forsook his God his old age was one of sorrow and remorse.

At last he died. A striking legend from the Koran pictures him entering the temple, arrayed in his kingly robes and taking his position before the altar, while leaning upon his staff. On account of his royal estate no one dared approach him. There he stood like a painted king. A worm, however, had been devouring its way through his staff and he fell flat upon his face.

The worm in the staff represented the dry rot that had crept into his life—the life that in its inception had promised so much.

Vanity of vanities, all is vanity!

BUTTERMILK PAINT

To make buttermilk paint, use three pounds of Portland cement for each gallon of buttermilk, and add enough colouring matter to give the desired shade. The paint must be stirred frequently while it is being used to keep the cement from settling to the bottom of the vessel. Apply it soon after it is made. It will dry in about six hours, and will shed water slowly. Venetian red or almost any colouring may be used. Buttermilk paint is adapted to outside work where a glossy surface is unimportant. It is also good for covering injuries on fruit trees after pruning. For this use make the paint thicker with cement.

The kitchen, better ventilated and more comfortable, the stable for all kinds of farm stock, the less feed it will require to keep them in good condition.

FIRST IMPORTANT PART OF GOVERNMENT IMPROVEMENTS AT BANFF COMPLETED.

To tourists to the Coast who will use the Canadian Pacific Railway, either going or coming, this summer, the attractions offered by the railway will be greatly supplemented by the work already done by the Dominion Government in the development of the Banff National Park. While the general scheme of Thomas H. Mawson, the well-known authority on town planning and landscape improvement, will be far from completion this year, the new concrete swimming pool and bath house originally planned by the Government and incorporated into the scheme, have just been completed. The pool occupies a site on the side of the Sulphur mountain, where there is a large spring of sulphur water rising out of the mountain side. The pool and bath house lie parallel to the mountain side, one end abutting the well-known Basin, the other covering a tunnel entrance to the Cave. The structure of reinforced concrete is build upon a bench excavated in the mountain side, 4,575 feet above sea level, and about 200 feet above the bottom of the Bow River Valley, of which it affords an excellent view. The pool itself is 150 feet long and 75 feet wide, with a depth varying from 3 feet to 8 feet. The sides are formed by light reinforced concrete walls, lined with white enamelled brick, and finished at the top with a terra cotta scum trough and hand rail. The bottom is a reinforced concrete pavement on an asphalt base. The bath house has a length of 137 feet, is 57 feet wide, and 40 feet high. The roof will provide daylight for the dressing rooms, as it consists of 4,000 square feet of prism lights. To soften this light, and also to protect the prisms from the steam is an arch diffuser from the steam arising from the bathers, there is an arch diffuser sash over the dressing room, with openings from which the air and steam are removed by a fan. There are a total of 128 individual dressing rooms in the bath house, with fresh water shower baths and other toilet facilities.

The growth of the co-operative movement in Saskatchewan is shown by the increase in creameries in that Province. There were only four of these in 1907 with a patronage of 213 and an output of 66,246 lbs. of butter, while in 1914 there were thirteen creameries with a patronage of 3,625, while in 1914 there were thirteen creamries with a patronage of 3,625 and an output of 1,161,230 lbs. of butter.

The Dairy Branch of the Department of Agricultural of Saskatchewan is holding meetings throughout the Province in respect to the promotion of dairying, for which the C.P.R. is providing specially equipped cars. The Department of Agriculture for Alberta commenced on January 25th, with a series of short course schools of agriculture to facilitate which the C. P. R. provided eight cars.

The immigration movement between the United States and Canada has naturally lessened in volume during the past few months, but it is still in favour of Canada. During the week ending January 19th, for instance, there entered Western Canada from the U. S. A. 162 settlers with cash valued at $45,317, of whom sixty nine were American citizens and 38 farmers. In the same period of 1914 there left Canada to reside permanently in the United States 52 persons of whom fifteen were farmers.

Luck Favours French Wrestler, Who Got Back to Friends

Montreal, Jan. 30.— A variety of thrilling experiences that befell Raymond Cazeau, the French wrestler, now a soldier fighting in the French army, are told of in a letter received yesterday by George Kennedy, manager of the Canadien Club. Cazeau, with a slightly wounded leg, is now convalescing in a hospital in Paris, and writes from there.

To be wounded, captured by the Germans, left on the roadside to die, and to finally fall into the hands of his friends once more, have been among the adventures of the fiery Bordelias grappler.

"I was wounded in the leg while carrying despatches," Cazeau writes, "and unable to make my way further, after crawling many miles, I collapsed by the roadside. This was near Lille.

"I regained consciousness; it was through a German soldier prodding me with a bayonet. I was ordered to get up and join a band of French prisoners who were being shipped back into Germany.

'I got to my feet, but immediately fell down again, and pretended I had fainted. Evidently the Germans thought I was on the point of death, for they left me lying there and went on their day. A little later our French troops recaptured the place, and I was sent back to the hospital."

RIOTING IN TURKEY.

Mobs Have Wrecked and Looted Establishments in Capitals.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—H. F. Baldwin, a correspondent at Salonika, writes that if reports received there are to be credited all Constantinople is "one simmering revolution."

"The Turkish capital is [illegible]," he writes, "that unless Enver Pasha, former Minister of War and leader of the Young Turk party, is deposed from his control of affairs, Turkey's ruin is inevitable and certain.

"Executions are frequent. Turkey's declaration of war was the signal for an outbreak of mob violence. The mob looted and wrecked Totakalin's Cafe, a Russian establishment which was much frequented by war correspondents during the Balkan campaign. All the bakeries and Eurdpean stores were served similarly.

"The mob, inflamed with Totakalin's wines, and amazingly garbed in clothes stolen from the stores totally wrecked a large German establishment at Galata bridge where English clothing was advertised for sale."

Turk Offensive Collapses.

PETROGRAD, Jan. 30. — Telegraphing from Tiflis, the correspondent of The Bourse Gazette says that the fresh attempt of the Turks to assume the aggressive in the direction of Olti has collapsed, and the flanking Turkish column has been destroyed. The enemy's losses were enormous.

News has been received in well-informed quarters here that the situation in Turkey is very bad. The troops suffer through want of clothing. Contagious disease prevails in the Turkish army. Moreover, there is a good deal of bad blood between the different races composing it. In a railway carriage containing a mixed lot of prisoners, the Kurds attacked the Turks and cut off their ears. The carriage was drenched with blood when it arrived at its destination.

Capt. Casimir-Perier Taken.

TROYES, Jan. 30.—(Via Paris.)—Capt. Claude Casimir-Perier, son of the former President of France, was taken prisoner during the recent battle of Soissons, according to The Petit Troyen. The paper adds that the distinguished conduct of Capt. Casimir-Perier in this fight gained him special mention in the army orders.

Turks Reach Gulf of Suez.

CAIRO, Jan. 30.—(Via London.)—The Turkish outposts have reached the vicinity of Tor and Kubri, on the Sinai Peninsula. Up to the present the fighting has consisted only of small outpost affairs.

Tor is on the Gulf of Suez, about 140 miles south of Suez.

AUSTRIA SEIZES FOOD.

Government Decides To Organize a Monopoly on Grain.

VENICE, Jan. 30.—(Via London.)—The Austrian Government has decided to organize a grain monopoly on similar lines to that established by Germany. The Austrian Minister of Agriculture yesterday announced that the army has procured supplies of grain sufficient to last until the end of August.

Owing to the quantities of barley and maize now being taken for breadstuffs, according to advices from Vienna, there is a serious shortage in the supply of fodder.

G. T. R. To Suggest a Wage Cut.

OTTAWA, Jan. 30.—It is still the intention of the Grand Trunk to ask about 24,000 of their employes on the G. T. R. lines, both in Canada and the United States, to accept a decrease in wages on April 1 next, should traffic receipts continue to show a decrease said E. J. Chamberlin, president of the road, who is in Ottawa to-day.

Mr. Chamberlin explained, however, that if the men registered a protest the company will be agreeable to submitting the matter to a board of conciliation appointed by the Minister of Labor, and abide by the decision of the board.

COULD END WAR NOW.

But Cost Would Be Too Great, Says Petrograd Bourse Gazette.

PETROGRAD, Jan. 30.—In connection with the sitting of the Duma an important semi-official pronouncement as to the attitude of the Government towards the war appears in The Bourse Gazette. The communication refers to the rumours of the possibility of concluding a separate peace with the Dual Monarchy, or at any rate with Hungary. It affirms that such ideas are devoid of foundation, and continues:

"Peace will be made only after complete and final victory over Germanism. Only in that event can enduring tranquility prevail in Europe. This result could actually be obtained now, but for its attainment it would be necessary to sacrifice 200,000 or 300,000 lives. Rather than bring about such a slaughter, the Government, fully assured of the final victory of our arms, thinks it better that the war be prolonged.

"A separate peace with Austria-Hungary is a practical impossibility. To obtain peace it would be necessary for the Hapsburg Monarchy to acknowledge itself defeated, but even if this event the conditions under which peace could be effected would hardly be acceptable to it.

"Moreover, there is little ground for anticipating a separate peace with Hungary, which could be obtained only at the price of the detachment of the Crown of St. Stephen from Austria. The first fundamental condition of such a peace would be our demand and that of our allies that Hungary, being separated from Austria, should not only abandon Germany, but also come openly into our camp.

"It is hardly to be supposed that the Hungarians would agree to such a demand, which would force them to begin an armed struggle with Austria."

AIRSHIP DIDN'T RETURN.

Berlin Admits Loss of Parseval Craft at Libau.

BERLIN, Jan. 30.—(Via London.)—The Parsefal airship, which flew over Libau, the Russian port on the Baltic, on Jan. 25, did not return.

The report that the German cruiser Kolberg was sunk in the battle in the North Sea last Sunday, is untrue. All the German ships, with the exception of the Blucher, have returned.

The above despatch apparently confirms a statement by the naval general staff at Petrograd, that a German airship, which dropped bombs on Libau last Monday, was brought down by gunfire, falling into the sea. The airship was destroyed and the crew captured, it was stated. The statement, however, referred to the balloon as a Zeppelin.

Regarding the Kolberg, Vice-Admiral Beatty, commander of the British fleet in the North Sea fight, stated that German prisoners reported that the Kolberg was sunk. The British Admiralty in its statement regarding the fight also referred to the Kolberg as "reported" sunk.

Some persons need troubles of their own to divert them from worrying about the troubles of others.

KAISER'S NEW TROOPS THROWN BACK— DEMORALIZED BY BRITISH BAYONETS

GERMAN REINFORCEMENTS FLEE IN DISORDER BEFORE BRITISH TROOPS

Attacked British Lines Near Ypres But Wavered Under a Hot Machine Gun Fire and Fled When the Allies Charged Them at the Point of the Bayonet.

GERMAN TRENCHES DESTROYED BY SHELL FIRE

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PARIS, Feb. 1.—The Kaiser's fresh troops have been hurled into action near Ypres, and have been thrown back by the British with severe losses. Bayonet attacks unnerved the new regiments and they retreated in disorder. Official despatches claimed the destruction of German trenches by the allied artillery at several points along the Aisne, and the capture of German positions west of Soissons. The German reinforcements received their baptism of fire in a charge against the British positions to the south east of Ypres. A daylight attack was ordered. The Germans advanced at the double quick upon the British trenches. Their lines wavered under a hot machine gun fire, and they then broke and fled in wild disorder when the allied soldiers leaped from their trenches in a brilliant bayonet attack.

The news of the repulse of the Germans near Ypres, was received with great enthusiasm here. For several days reports said the German general staff was massing fresh regiments near Ypres for a mighty smash through the allied lines. The ease with which the first attacks were repulsed inspired confidence. The French artillery has maintained an incessant bombardment of the German positions along the Aisne for the last 24 hours, and aerial scouts report that the shelling has been remarkably effective. In the Soissons region the British gunners effectually silenced a German battery which had resumed shelling Soissons from a plateau on the north bank of the Aisne.

The president hinted that other than belligerent vessels are available for purchase.

BELFAST, Feb. 1.—Because of reports that more German submarines have been sighted in the Irish Sea between Liverpool and Belfast, the authorities here to-night ordered all boat services between Belfast, Liverpool and Manchester suspended.

LIVERPOOL, Feb. 1.—The underwriters here to-day raised rate of insurance on coast-wise shipping from 5 to 20 shillings per 100 pounds as the result of the German submarine raid off Fleetwood.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—No nation has protested against the passage of the ship purchase bill, said Secretary of State Bryan to-day, "and it is not likely that any nation will or would, if bill does not necessarily raise any diplomatic questions." An official close to the president to-day declared that President Wilson had no intention of taking any steps in the ship purchase matter that would involve the country in an international complication.

OTTAWA, Feb. 1.—Members of the Commons and Senate have commenced to arrive in the Capital in considerable numbers for the opening on Thursday. It is likely that the debate on the address will be proceeded with on Monday. The mover will be W. G. Weichel, the German-Canadian member for North Waterloo, and the seconder, Honore Achin of Labelle.

It is likely that early in the session there will be a conference between Sir Robert Borden and Sir Wilfrid Laurier to be followed by a party caucuses. It is believed that while there will be some criticisms of the details the House will give unanimous support to the government's war measures.

At noon to-day the Dept. of Justice officially confirmed the report that Sir F. X. Lemieux has been appointed to succeed Sir Charles Peers Davidson as Chief Justice of the Province of Quebec.

MERELY PIRACY

London Globe Says that the Captains of German War Vessels Should Not Be Held as Prisoners of War

TRY THEM FOR MURDER

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, Feb. 1.—A demand that captains of German war vessels responsible for the torpedoing of merchant vessels and for the bombardment of coast cities be tried as "pirates" and not considered prisoners of war, was made by the London Globe to-day.

"The sinking of vessels carrying non-combatants without notice is mere piracy," the Globe declared. "The persons guilty are not entitled to the privileges of prisoners of war if captured.

"We have one pirate in our hands, the captain of the Blucher. Let us make a beginning by trying him for the murder of helpless women and children at Scarborough."

Captain Brinkmann was picked up by British boats after the Blucher was sunk in the North Sea naval engagement on Jan. 24, and was landed at Leith, Scotland. He is now a prisoner of war at Edinburgh.

Presentation To Capt. Carruthers

Members of "C" Company Said Farewell to Their Commanding Officer and Their Comrades

Captain A. G. Carruthers, and the third contingent volunteers of C Company of the 57th received a royal send-off at the impromptu entertainment held in their honour in the recreation room in the armouries on Saturday evening, under the auspices of the non-coms. and men of the company. Captain Carruthers was the recipient of a set of military brushes and an address.

He returned for a few days from Kingston, where he has been preparing himself to take the post of Quartermaster of the 39th Battalion.

There was a thoroughly enjoyable programme of vocal and instrumental number, with Sergt-Major Wilford of the Third Contingent, Overseas Forces, chairman. Col.-Sgt. John Williams read the address to Capt. Carruthers and made the presentation, while Lieut. A. F. Tomlins of C. Company made a few remarks.

The address was as follows:

Captain Carruthers,— On behalf of the N. C.O's and men of C. Company, please allow me to congratulate you on your appointment as quartermaster of the 39th Battalion for overseas service. I am sure, sir, that every man of this company, while pleased at your appointment, is sorry to lose the services and guidance of so good and popular a company officer, but we console ourselves that what is our loss will be the gain of so many who are so dear to us, for we know from experience that your first thought after you duty to King and Empire, will be for the that your first thought after your duty to think for, and whose needs your duty and thought will be to provide for.

Therefore, sir, we part with you, wishing God speed and a safe return to those you love. But before parting, sir, allow me on behalf of the N. C. O's and men of the company whose future we know you have at heart, to offer you as a slight memento and token of esteem, this small presen, knowing quite well that every time you use them you will think of those you so reluctantly, yet so honourably, must leave behind.

On behalf of the N. C. O's and men of C. Company.

JOHN WILLIAMS,
Col.-Sgt.

GERMANS ARE GLOATING OVER NEW POLICY

Success of German Submarines in Sinking British Merchantmen Commended by Berlin Papers

Special Cable to The Examiner:

BERLIN, via Amsterdam, Feb. 1.—Germany was jubilant to-day over the success of the new policy of submarine warfare launched by Grand Admiral Von Tirpitz. Berlin papers reprinted in part the Von Tirpitz interview with Karl Von Weigand of the United Press, lauded Von Tirpitz and commented freely upon the probable success of the plan "to starve out England."

"Hence forward, British navigation will have to reckon with the German submarine danger," said the Tageblatt. "British shipowners can only avoid this danger when they stop traffic."

"Let us hope that the commercial war now being taken up by the German submarines in Great Britain's home waters will go to the very root of the British trans-ocean trade," said the Tages Zeitung.

It was accepted that Von Tirpitz has only started.

Will Not Leave Until 8th At Least

Mounted Rifles Receive Further Word To-day

The local squadron of the 8th Mounted Rifles will not leave for Ottawa on Wednesday as was told the men on Saturday. Since then further word has been received that the squadron will not leave Peterborough until February 8th at least. Meanwhile the Mounted Rifles are being drilled twice a day.

The regulations in regard to drunkenness will be vigorously enforced. On Saturday a member of the squadron became intoxicated and wound up in the police station. This morning he was fined $2.00 and he will be struck off the strength of the regiment.

A Kingston despatch says:

Kingston, Ont., Jan. 31.— The recruiting of the third contingent in the third divisional area is going on very well, the total now being 1,551 men.

For the 39th Battalion (Belleville), 783 men have been accepted, and for the 38th Battalion, of Ottawa, 422 men have volunteered to date. The total for the 4th Mounted Rifles is 335 men. The total enlisted is about one-half the number required.

The Visit of Miss Saunders

A series of meetings was held in the Peterborough Association during the visit of Miss Saunders, the National General Secretary of the Young Women's Christian Association. An address was given on "Women and the War," on Monday afternoon, and was especially well attended, and at it an opportunity was given to describe the great needs of protective work for girls in this country as part of the battle for right which the women of Canada must carry on while the men are fighting at the front. One evening address was devoted to the Women's Movement and the religious impulses underlying it, showing the need that the Young Women's Christian Association should take its share in all that will strengthen the highest interests of women in industrial and educational life to-day. Several addresses were given on subjects concerning the personal religious life of girls.

The Peterborough Association has every hope of a good winter's work, with its delightful building open to the girls of the City, and a General Secretary, Miss Pocock, who has had considerable experience among girls both in the East and West of Canada.

DEATH RATE FOR THE MONTH SHOWS DECREASE

Figures Do Not Represent the Actual Number of Deaths —Decrease in Building Permits.

VITAL STATISTICS

According to the vital statistis for the month of January there has been a substantial decrease in the death rate as compared with the corresponding month for last year. During the month which closed yesterday there were twelve deaths registered as against thirty-one for the initial month of 1914. The number of deaths recorded is no indication of the actual number of deaths, as few of the undertakers succeed in getting in the complete returns at the end of each month. At this season of the year it is customary to deposit some of the dead in the vaults so that a burial permit is not required; consequently the record of such deaths do not reach the City Clerk's office until the actual burial takes place, which may be some time in the spring. However, as similar conditions prevaled a year ago, it is safe to assume that there has been a substantial reduction in the death rate.

Marriages.

Marriages have fallen off during the month, only nine couples having essayed a matrimonial career, as compared with thirteen for a corresponding period of last year.

The stork paid forty-four visitations in January of this year, and forty-five during a similar period of last year.

Building Permits.

January was a poor month for building permits only two being issued during the month, one to the Bonner-Worth Company for one hundred dollars and one for eighteen hundred, the latter for the erection of a house, and the former for the construction of a shed.

The great success depends on your hearty co-operation. Be at the meeting for sure. 2d-26

Referred To His Happy Associations

Rev. F. J. Sawers, M. A., of St. Luke's Delivered His Final Sermon as Rector of St. Luke's Last Evening

At the close of a very eloquent discourse on that beautiful hymn of John Greenleaf Whittier, "Dear Lord and Father of Mankind," before a congregation that taxed the capacity of St. Luke's Church, Rev. F. J. Sawers delivered a few words of valedictory last evening, the occasion being his last service as Rector of St. Luke's. His associations with the people of St Luke's had at all times been of the very happiest character. The whole-hearted, enthusiastic support that had always been accorded him, he greatly appreciated, and he trusted that his successor would be tendered the same loyalty and co-operation in his continuance of the work in this Parish. St. Luke's congregation had an enviable reputation for the enthusiastic manner in which it carried out various enterprises undertaken, and he ventured to say that in this respect St. Luke's had few equals in Canada. During his residence here he had endeavoured to do his part in other works outside his own particular Church, believing that it was a Minister's duty to show an active interest in matters appertaining to the good of the community. The many friends he had made outside his Church had been one of the pleasures of his stay here.

In conclusion, he wished his congregation God's richest blessing in continued good work in the Parish.

Germans Take Over A Greek Dreadnought

Affair Has Caused Sensation in Greece and May Result in Greece's Entrance into the War—Mobilization of Her First Line Troops is Now in Progress.

Special Cable to The Examiner:

ATHENS, Feb. 1.—It is understood here that the German government has taken over the Greek dreadnought, Salamis, which was under construction at Stettin, Germany. The affair has caused quite a sensation here and in some quarters the incident is viewed as a virtual declaration of antagonism to Greece. The mobilization of all first line troops and reservists is in progress, and it is current gossip that Greece will join Servia in resisting further attacks by Austria or Germany's forces. Austrian and German citizens are leaving the country by all trains going northward.

ROME, Feb. 1.—Pope Benedict's efforts to bring about an agreement between the warring powers to exchange invalid prisoners, have come to nought, the Vatican's diplomats reported to-day. All the nations to whom His Holiness addressed his pleas, replied that even though invalid or badly wounded prisoners might not recover sufficiently to return to the fighting line they might reveal important military secrets.

PARIS, Feb. 1.—A violent artillery duel was in progress to-day from Ypres north to the sea-coast. The army of the German Crown Prince continued shelling the allies' trenches outside Verdun in an effort to press closer to the forts; the shell fire has been ineffective. Comparative quiet has reigned in the Vosges and in Alsac for the past 24 hours, the official despatches asserted to-day.

According to a newspaper despatch received here to-day, the Austrians have suffered an overwhelming defeat near Tarnow, losing 12,000 killed, wounded or captured by the Russians; the remainder are in full retreat.

Nonogenarian Passes Away

Death of Mr. Alexander Edmunds, Aged 95 Years

At the good old age of 95 years and 6 months, Alexander Edmunds passed away last evening at his residence, 338 Stewart Street, City.

The late Mr. Edmunds was well known in and about the city, having resided here for about sixty years. He was born at Colborne, Northumberland County. He was in the employ of the [illegible] number of years in the capacity of manager, but for the past twenty-five years has been retired.

He was well known among the farmers of the district, having bought grain on the market here while in the employ of the Milling Company.

A man of retiring disposition, he never sought any public offices and was always respected for his straightforward business methods. A Methodist in religion he was an attendant of George Street Methodist church.

Messrs. J. W. Pearce, M.P., Belleville, and J. B. Pearce, ex-Warden of the County of Peterborough, now of Norwood, are nephews. His wife predeceased him twenty-five years.

One daughter survives, Miss Mary J. Edmunds, who has always resided with him.

The funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon from the late residence, 338 Stewart Street. Rev. R. G. Peever will conduct services at the house at 2 o'clock, the funeral to take place at 2.30 p.m. to Little Lake cemetery for interment.

FORTY BELOW IN MANITOBA

In a letter to the Examiner Mr. Wm. L. Clancy of Gilbert Plains, Manitoba, states that at the date of writing, January 27th, the thermometer was lower than 40 below zero.

Volunteers Honoured

St. John's Men With 3rd Contingent Receive Wrist Watches

To the large number of men who are either at the front or preparing for it from St. John's congregation, seven more at least may be added, viz.: Major Medd, C.O.; Messrs. Da Eldred, G. Harris, R. Perry, A. Theobald, E. Tucker and W. Flowers, of the Mounted Infantry, who may leave within a few days. After evensong last night, a reception and presentation was held in the school house. Short addresses were given by the Rev. Canon Davidson, Mr. H. Rush, Mrs. J. Howden and Mr. R. J. Devey, from which it appeared that the recruits had been valued active workers in the choir and congregation. Midget wrist watches were handed to Mrs. Howden and Mrs. Devey by Mr. Rush. The ladies then buckled them on to the six enlisted men, on whose behalf Messrs. Theobald and Tucker replied suitably. At this stage Major Medd arrived, and in a short speech expressed thanks for the hearty reception accorded him, and stated that whether they returned or not every man was out to do his duty.. The rector referred to other officers and men, who had gone, and mentioned that a complete list was being prepared to be placed in the church. The prayers of the church would be offered on their behalf as in the last few months.

The singing of "Blest Be the Tie," and "God Save the King" ended an impressive gathering.

Banquet For Volunteers of Home Guard

The Home Guard will hold a banquet in the Oriental Hotel to-morrow night in honour of the members of the Guard who are leaving for the front with the Third Canadian Contingent. Over thirty of the Home Guard have volunteered for active service and their officers and comrades will say farewell to-morrow night.

PATRIOTIC POSTAGE RATES.

The government has made arrangements by which the ordinary letter rate of two cents per ounce for letters sent from Canada to the United Kingdom is to apply to letters addressed to British and Canadian troops in the Continent. The ordinary rate on Canadian letters from Canada to the Continent is five cents for the first ounce and three cents for each additional ounce. This concession of identical postal rates represents a very considerable point in favour of the friends and relatives of soldiers. We shall soon have about 30,000, or perhaps more soldiers in the fighting line, and a saving of three cents on each of the thousands of letters that reach them will amount to something appreciable.

COPPER AND CONQUEST.

With all his other great achievements the Kaiser has solved a dream of the alchemists, heretofore believed to be, and proven to be, impossible—the transmutation of metals. He has transmuted copper into gold; that is he has initiated movements that have made copper as valuable as gold. Copper is an indespensable element in modern muntions of war; and at the present time more valuable to Germany than gold. The vaults of the Reichs Bank may be crammed with gold—which they are not—but it is more worthless to Germany than copper; for with the seas closed against Germany the avenues to importing copper are closed. Germany is in bad straits for copper. Supply and demand regulate prices, and the demand is so great, so vital, and the supply is so short in Germany that the price of copper in that country is $776 a ton, more than three times the price in England—$291 per ton. There is a famine in copper in Germany, as shown by the price quoted and the fact is the Germans are seizing all the old brass and copper kettles, candlesticks, and other brazen bric-a-brac it can lay its hands on. With food supplies short, with copper also short, Germany is facing the end, and even so base a metal can negatively be an instrument in the subjugation and downfall, of the Kaiser — quite the reverse of his proclaimed ambition, "world domination." Copper or the want of copper will prevent the realization of the boast of the Emperor—"our German people will be the granite rock upon which Almighty God will complete His building of the civilization of the world." According to present conditions it is a dark look out for the "civilization of the world," according to militarist ideas. Germany cannot conquer without copper, and she can't get copper unless she breaks the British blockade of her ports, and that is not probable.

PRECAUTIONARY.

Quebec, under the administration of Sir Lomer Gouin, is progressive in many ways. As the latest example he has introduced legislation that will prevent a good deal of perversion of representative responsibility. It provides that no member of the legislature or legislative council, on pain of expulsion from office, shall receive any remuneration, costs or fees, in respect of promoting the passage of any measure submitted to the legislature. Seekers of legislative favours are debarred from employing a legal firm, one member of which is a member of the legislature or legislative council. If the legislation sought may be designed, as is often the case, to serve the interests of a private individual or corporation at the expense of the public interests, there is possibility and probability that the representative of the people, if allowed to give legal service in connection with it, will be actively engaged in antagonizing the interests he is elected to promote. The bill also provides that no one who is a legal partner of a member of the legislature shall appear before any committee in advocacy of any measure of legislation or even sign his name to an application for such legislation; and shall not be an agent or uphold or oppose in any manner whatever any proposed legislation. Such legislation might not be amiss in Ontario. Though offences of the kind forbidden by the proposed Quebec law, may be few, it is well to have a protection that will insure as far as possible, the application of the principles of morality in law-making. Our representatives, parliamentary, legislative and civic have enough unseen temptation presented without open permission to serve two masters. Representatives of all kinds should obviously be entirely untrammelled in the discharge of their duties. They are elected to use their positions in the interests of their constituents, and they will be much strengthened in resisting temptation if the tempter invites action that will bring a member under the penalties of the law. No representative in any body can have a free hand or discharge his duty honestly and fearlesaly if he uses, or is permitted to use, his representative position for personal advantage. He may, as a bare and doubtful possibility do this and still be a faithful servant of the people. It is possible; but there is a risk; for, unfortunately, we don't elect many angels to representative positions.

LET WELL, ALONE.

The way things have worked out in this war, there does not seem to be any need of readjusting the relations of the self-governing Dominions with central power of the Empire. The unity of the Empire, as demonstrated by the unity of cooperation, could not be improved by the dominions having, as Sir Robert Borden demands, represention in the councils of Great Britain. Sir Robert's making Canada's permanent naval assistance contingent upon this representation, is a matter of bargaining which does not seem consistent with conditions. For a century or more Canada has been dependent upon the protection of the British navy, and decent ideas of gratitude would counsel repaying the debt without conditions, as the naval aid of Great Britain has been given without conditions. Australia has nobly done her share in providing a national navy, as an integral part of the Imperial navy without bargaining. She has done her duty in this regard and has kept her plighted faith, as Canada has ignored hers. Sir Robert Borden's policy in regard to Canadian representation as a condition of Canadian naval assistance, is in principle identical with the policy of Mr. Henri Bourassa, who takes the stand that Canada should not help in this war because Canada had no voice in the decision that brought on the war. Canada takes no part in naval defence because Sir Robert Borden insists that Canada's aid shall be contingent on her being represented in the deliberations that guide the foreign policy of Great Britain. Logically this condition of representation would lead to the unthinkable condition of Canada withholding military aid in the Empire's time of stress as it has in effect withheld naval aid. In regard to the relations between the central entity of the Empire and the Dominions, it would seem that we could with justification revive a cry that was freely heard in 1911—"Let well enough alone." The strength of the bonds of Empire, their effective strength, never has had, and will never have such a tremendous test, as that to which it has no magnificently answered, and is magnificently responding—without huckstering conditions. The unity of the Empire in this great struggle and test has been, and is the wonder of the world, and no improvement is indicated. It will be well to "let well enough alone."

CANADA'S CONCEPTION OF THE ISSUE.

It is announced in the despatches that Canada is about to follow up its earlier contributions to the British forces in he field with a fresh contingent of 25,000 men. And this, in all probability will be followed by many other additions of troops, and perhaps in growing batches, from its training camps, for, above all things, Canada is bent now on doing what it believes to be its full duty by the Mother Country. Canada, we take it from the tone of its press and its public men, is not going to question such requisitions as may be made on its loyalty and its patriotism. But it has entered upon the performance of its duty with no shallow or false conception of the issue involved in the struggle.

Thousands of the Dominion's young men have rushed to the colours; thousands are now hastening to the recruiting stations; neither with these nor with those who are to follow them is the incentive trench-fighting, bomb-throwing, home-wrecking, town-destroying, but, as is often put to them, and as they often put it to themselves, "for a hastening of the end of all these things."

If we catch aright the impulse of the Canadian volunteer, giving up everything that is dear to him on earth save country and honour, he is moved not by a love of war but by hatred of it, spurred on by a determination to do all that in him lies to put an end to it, by putting an end to the atrocious perversion of worthy human aspirations and ideals that make it possible. It is impressive to read of the young men of Canada, conscious of the gravity of their undertaking, regardful of the dignity of the enterprise, going to war by thousands in the hope that a lasting peace may be secured, not only to their own country and to the empire of which it is a part, but to all the world. — Christian Science Monitor.

CANADA'S VANISHING TRADE WITH AUSTRALIA.

The Department of Trade and Commerce has now issued a detailed report of the new Customs tariff of Australia as affecting trade with Canada. This report certainly dashes any hopes Canada may have had of increasing the trade with the Commonwealth, along the reciprocal lines that Sir George Foster went to Australia to advocate. Indeed, it looks as if we shall lose what trade we have. Not only have the duties been sharply raised on practically all lines that Canada has been exporting to Australia, but the tariff provides that to the market value of the goods shall be added ten per cent., and in addition the amount of railway fare to the seaboard!

Canada's trade with Australia has been steadily growing since 1906. Last year the exports to Australia amounted to $4,673,997, which is almost double what they were six years previously. The largest items consisted of automobiles and automobile parts, $1,348,936; clothing, $91,198; drugs and chemicals, $94,194; fish, $389,304; agricultural implements, $1,127,467; paper, $495,920; manufactures of wood, $255,271. All these goods will now be taxed more heavily, while the preferential tariff for Great Britain remains the same.

It is possible Australia may have come to the decision to restrict the trade with Canada rather than to encourage it from a perusal of the customs figures. These show that Canada's exports to Australia have for many years been out of all proportion of her imports from that country. Thus in recent years Canada has bought around $400,000 worth of goods from Australia per year. Last year the Canadian imports from Australia jumped up to $862,185, but that was small compared to over four and a half million dollars' worth that Australia bought from us. There is no doubt that the two countries were drawing closer together in trading matters, but if this new tariff is ratified when the Commonwealth Parliament meets in April (the new duties are already operative), this tendency will receive a severe check.—Montreal Herald-Telegraph.

IS GERMANY FACING SERIOUS SHORTAGE OF FOOD SUPPLIES?

Whether the new food regulations in Germany will enable that country to stave off starvation or not, this much is certain, that they have effectually put a stop to any further food importations by that country. In the negotiations between the United States and Great Britain regarding neutral shipping, considerable discussion had taken place over the sending of foodstuffs to Germany. The United States had claimed the right to send grain to German ports, providing that such was sent to private merchants for general consumption and not to or for the army. Sir Edward Grey had conceded the contention, provided that satisfactory proof could be given of destination. Now, however, the German Government have seized all grain and flour supplies and prohibited dealing by private citizens. Under conditions like these, not the most sanguine American exporter could expect to get grain into Germany, as is frankly admitted at Washington and by the leading American papers.

Meanwhile it is much to be doubted whether the German Government's explanation that the steps taken will ensure a good supply till the next harvest is conformable with the facts. The New York Post, in analysing the situation, comes to the conclusion that a most serious situation in regard to food supplies already exists in Germany, it shows that in 1913, when the crops in Germany were large, that country was still obliged to import $288,000,000 worth of wheat, barley and corn. How huge an amount of food this represents may be gathered from the fact that last year's total crop of wheat in Canada was valued at $196,000,000.

Germany did not pile up an extensive "war reserve." On the contrary, a review of the food supply in June drew the conclusion that there was then barely enough grain in the country to meet the home consumption for the next two months, and a war reserve was being urged, though Germany was so sure of a swift victory that this was not done. But now comes another factor. The 1914 crop proved to be a very poor one in Germany—not less than 140,000,000 million bushels less than in the previous year. Added to this was a disastrous poor harvest in Hungary, which changed Austria-Hungary from a grain-exporting to a grain-importing status. All this would seem to indicate that the German Government's latest move is more significant than they care to own. It may mean that if the war is prolonged Germany will be facing absolute starvation long before the next harvest. — Montreal Herald-Telegraph.

ON TO BERLIN.

When Britain called for her fighting men,
They came from afar and near
To fight for their King and freedom
And for their loved ones dear.

Chorus—
On our Berlin is our slogan cry,
On to Berlin, or to die
For our rights and our King.
Let every man sing
On to Berlin, on to Berlin!

May God give us strength and might
To proclaim our democratic right
Over the Kaiser's autocratic power
And his infernal militarism.

NO DEMANDS MADE.

Japan Has Not Asked China For Territorial Concessions.

PEKIN, Feb. 1. — The Japanese Minister to China, M. Hioki, was questioned yesterday concerning the political demands made by Japan upon China following the occupation by Japanese troops of the Kiachau territory, and which are now under discussion between the two countries.

He denied that Japan had demanded the cession of any territory of China. He explained that his Government was pledged by its alliance with Great Britain to maintain the territorial integrity of China, and he said further, that the demands made by Japan did not interfere in any way with the rights enjoyed by other nations.

NOTICE

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, that an application will be made by the Roman Catholic Episcopal Corporation for the Diocese of Peterborough in Ontario, Canada, to the Legislature of Ontario, at the next Session thereof, for an Act amending the Act of Incorporation of the said Corporation, passed in the Forty-Sixth Reign of Her Late Majesty Queen Victoria, Chapter 65, so as to enlarge the powers of the said Corporation, to borrow moneys on the security of Promissory Notes and Bills of Exchange and for such purposes to make, draw, endorse, become a party to and deliver Promissory Notes and Bills of Exchange, without the necessity of affixing the Corporate Seal thereto.

The reason for the enlargement of the powers of the said Corporation as aforesaid, is that it requires to borrow moneys from time to time for its purposes in various sums and on such terms of repayment as to render it highly inconvenient to execute and deliver mortgage securities on the real estate of the said Corporation.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

DOPE FAVOURS PETES IN TO-NIGHT'S GAME

Blue and White Team Have Scored Thirty Goals More Than Picton in the Group Race While They Have Beaten Most of the Teams by Bigger Margins---Clubs Have Lost But One Game Each.

Probably no game in years has aroused Peterborough fans so much as to-night's clash with Picton at Brock Street Rink. The race throughout the district between the two clubs has been so fraught with excitement, so much has depended on every game, that the hockey lovers are all worked up over the home and home series which will settle the question of which club is to go into the discard for the season.

The dope favours Peterborough, although the standing of the two clubs is the same. Each has wone nine and lost one, or to be exact, won eight and had a game defaulted to them. The Petes, however, have proved themselves much the better scoring machine. In the nine games they played they have massed a total of 76 goals, and average per game of 8 1-3 goals. Picton has scored exactly thirty less, their total being 46,..or an average of 5 1-9 per game. On the other hand Picton has had fewer goals scored on them. Their opponents have only scored 24 times, while the Petes have been scored on 35 times. The averages per game are interesting:

	G.F.	Ave.	Agst.	Ave
Peterborough...	76	8 1-3	35	3 8-9
Picton	46	5 1-9	24	2 2-3

Taking up the games with the other clubs the Petes again show to advantage. Picton beat Belleville only 3 to 2 in Belleville, and 5 to 3 in Picton. On the other hand the Petes walloped Whitehead's gang 8 to 2 in Belleville and 15 to 2 here. Peterborough beat Oshawa 10 to 3 in Oshawa, while Whitby's score was only 6-2. The Petes beat Whitby 4 to 1 in Whitby, while Picton won there 2 to 0. Against Bowmanville both rivals won by the same margin at home, but Picton beat the Rubber Necks 11 to 4 in Bowmanville, while Petes' score was 12 to 3. However, the Petes had Bowmanville 11 to 2 at the second period, and had no need to exert themselves in the last session.

The two teams have met twice this season. In Picton with the Petes shy several regulars, Walter Knox's crew won 3 to 0. In the return game with both teams at full strength, the Petes were victorious 6 to 2. In both cases the ice was soft. To-night the sheet will be fast. The Pests claim to be a hard-ice team, but so do the Petes. The conditions to-night should, therefore, be to the liking of both. It will be a big night, a big game, and a big crowd.

BERNHARDT WILL REFEREE THE BIG HOCKEY GAME TO-NIGHT

Reserved Seats Sold Out and Biggest Crowd of the Season Will See the First Game in the Play-off for Group Honours.

ICE IN GREAT SHAPE

Everything is ready for to-night's big game with Picton. That the biggest crowd of the season will be in attendance is evident. This morning all the reserved seats, except a few in the balcony, had been sold, which means a great rush for the general admission to-night. Fans are asked to note that the game is called earlier than usual and is billed to start at 8 o'clock, sharp. O. Bernhardt of Bradford, the former Preston player, will referee. It will be the first appearance of this official, whose work has been favourably commented upon in many centres. Picton's line-up will be the same as in their group games, while the Petes will be chosen from the following: Janes, Dwyer, Hunter, Pethick, Halpin, Park, Kelly, Knapman, Spratt, R. Rose.

Swansea Town Show Fine Form Against Newcastle in the Cup Ties—Results of Saturday's Soccer Games

Swansea Town, a little club from the principality and unattached to either of the big leagues, is handing out the surprise packets in this year's English Cup series. Blackburn Rovers' players doubtless smiled when the luck of the ballot gave them the Welshmen as opponents in the first round, and they were so cock sure of making the Goat Street lads look like juveniles that they made the journey into Wales with light hearts. There they were compelled to eat the "leek." On Saturday their victors invaded the realms of the "Geordies" and put up so smashing a fight that Newcastle United had a stiff task to share the goals, and it was with a sigh of relief that patrons of St. James' Park saw the backs of the Welshmen until next week. On foreign ground at Swansea, and after a long journey the chances that Newcastle will pull through are not rosy. Sam Williams has a fair-sized list of good players on the books this season, so Swansea may get further into the swim than most folks imagine; that is, if their boys give swollen heads a wide berth. Before to-day a little unexpected success has killed many a team's opportunities of rising to greater heights. Though at the bottom of the league table, Tottenham Hotspurs calculated on getting through against Norwich City, but at the City of Spires they lost the game by the odd goal in five. Gigg Lane enthusiasts witnessed the fall of their pets to Bradford, who have shown only mediocre form this season, but Bury's action against Plymouth in the first round was not sufficient to warrant too great a hope of ultimate success. Southend United, who put Bristol Rovers out of the running after two attempts, found Burnley, Huddersfield conquerors, without mercy, as they claimed six out of the seven goals scored at Turf Moor. The fight of the afternoon was that at Hyde Road, between Manchester City and Aston Villa. Never was there a better argument for a larger habitation for the club than that afforded by the huge crowds. City came out on top by scoring the only goal of the game, and should the sole representative of Mancunian Clubs in the competition attain their objective for the accomplishment of which much coin of the realm is essential, an improved Hyde Road will come to pass. The new order which compels the playing of extra time was in force, but three games will have to be replayed next Saturday:

Newcastle United v. Swansea Town.
Brigton and Hove v. Birmingham.
Bolton Wanderers v. Millwall Athletic.

Millwall are going well in the Southern League, and it would seem that Bolton Wanderers lost their opportunity when at home on Saturday.

There was little doing in the English leagues, but on the Scottish side of the border Celtic and Hearts, who top the league, had a battle royal at Parkhead. On the result depended very probably the resting place of the championship honour for the season. It was a great game for both teams gave of their best, and a drawn battle resulted. This still leaves Hearts with a lead of three points. Greenock Morton took a couple of points off Third Lanark, but they are still a long way from the place of honour. Raith Rovers put the heel of defeat more firmly on the neck of Queen's Park, but they themselves will have to play all they know if they would keep in the same class next season.

PEGOUD WRECKS DEPOT.

Aviator Drops Nine Bombs on German Ammunition.

PARIS, Feb. 1.—Pegoud, the well-known French aviator, just distinguished himself by a remarkable feat. Information was brought in that there was an important depot for ammunition nearby, and Pegoud set off with bombs. He dropped to 1,800 feet, and, despite the quick fire from the enemy's guns and cannon, dropped nine bombs, all of which reached their mark. Successive explosions caused so great an atmospheric disturbance that Pegoud had the greatest difficulty in recovering his balance, but at last he got back safely.

A few days ago Pegoud brought down a German captive balloon, and damaged two heavy guns besides.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Peterborough, Jan. 31st, 1915.

Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I read in your paper that the report of the Finance committee as to reduction of salaries, etc., is to considered by the Council of the Whole on Monday night, Feb. 1st. Now, sir, what the ratepayers want done, in my humble opinion, is what is just and fair considering the conditions that all are placed under.

There is scarcely any wage earners who are receiving as good remuneration for their services to-day as they did one year ago. In fact, many have been reduced 25 p.c., while also reduced by short time.

Is there any good reason why our officials of the city should not also be reduced. Now it is only fair to all that they should bear their share of the burden. They surely can afford to do so as well as the poor pick and shovel men whose wage by the hour is 20c., and half time at that. It costs the labourer just as much for the necessaries of life as it does any city official. There is no comparison whatever between the conditions of the two classes.

City aldermen, for once do not be held up by any clique, but conscientiously act up and above board, as the situation demands. The ratepayers, I think, are in favour of a reduction; not from one or two, but in a business manner of a percentage from the highest down, leaving out the ordinary man who only earns $600 per year.

Allow me to suggest to Tax Collector Green that he can cut his expense bill down considerably. Instead of paying $250 or $300 a year for delivering tax notices, why not give the notices to the mail carriers; or cheaper still, to Mr. Stenton, who does that house to house delivery for our merchants' advertising?

I thank you, Mr. Editor.

Yours, etc.,
RATEPAYER.

Two Councils Contrasted

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—We notice with a great deal of pleasure that the County Council has decided to grant 40 per cent. of the cost of a new bridge across the Otonabee at the foot of Lock street, better known as the Street Railway Wharf. This will prove a great boon to this growing suburb and goes to prove that the County Council recognises the importance of this thriving locality. This is the spot where our City Council contemplates erecting its odoriferous sewerage brewery. How different the action of the two bodies—the County distinctly progressive and the City retrogressive. For brains and foresight commend me to the men of the back Townships.

Yours truly,
"Ratepayer".

A QUESTION OF QUALIFICATION

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—As a large taxpayer and as one who is deeply interested in the welfare of this City, I trust you will grant me a small space in your valuable paper to give my views on a question which I consider is of vital importance to this City at the present time.

I find, in looking over the list of City officials, that Mr. R. H. Parsons is paid a salary of $2,500—the largest salary given to any official on the list. I also find, in looking over the proceedings of our Municipal Council, that Alderman A. A. McIntyre wishes to know if Mr. Parsons is a qualified Civil Engineer and holds the Diploma; and he is answered by Mayor Buller, who says: "I don't know whether he is or not, it doesn't make any difference to me."

Now, to my mind, and I think to the minds of the great majority of the taxpayers, this is a most extraordinary stand for our Chief Magistrate to take. The City is at the present time just starting on what I think may safely be called one of the most expensive undertakings in its history, namely, the construction of an outfall sewer and the erection of a sewerage disposal plant, which are sure to cost this City in the neighbourhood of $200,000, before completed. And, in the face of this, our Chief Magistrate will say that he doesn't care whether the man who has complete charge and oversight of this work, is a qualified Civil Engineer or not.

I think the stand taken by Alderman McIntyre is the only proper and logical one that any man who has the interests of the ratepayers of this City at heart, could take.

This is not the first time this question has arisen, and be it said to the credit of ex-Alderman Langford, that he seriously doubted the wisdom of involving the City in such a vast expenditure of money until he was satisfied the work would be properly and scientifically carried out.

Suppose Mayor Buller or some of those who are near and dear to him were taken ill would he call in a quack doctor to attend them? Not a bit of it—nothing but a full-fledged Medical Doctor would enter his home. Mind, I am not applying the term "quack" to Mr. Parsons, for I don't know whether he is a Civil Engineer or not. But, you will say, this is not a case in point; there is no similarity. Well, let us see if there is or not.

There is an outfall sewer and sewage disposal plant being built. Suppose they are improperly built, and through faulty construction and improper grades an epidemic of typhoid or diphtheria (find the authorities all tell us there is no more fruitful sources of these dread epidemics) results and wipes out five or six hundred people, then will there be any similarity in the two cases?

This is a serious question and our Aldermen must face it like men. If Mr. Parsons holds the Diploma of Civil Engineer let him produce it. Alderman McIntyre and the citizens of Peterborough are fully entitled to this information.

Either Mr. Parsons is a Civil Engineer or he is not. Let the ratepayers know by whom their hard-earned money is being spent.

Yours truly,
"Citizen."

AN OTONABEE VIEW OF THE SEWAGE PLANT

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—By the reports in the papers from time to time it seems to me that the citizens of Peterborough cannot get anything definite from their Council about the Sewage Disposal Plant.

Only at last Wednesday night's meeting of the Council the Chairman of the Board of Works was asked if he had anything definite to report with regard to the Disposal Plant and his reply was "No," and in the face of his remarks Mr. Engineer Parsons a little later on at the same meeting, states that they have. Now who is running the Council and who are the citizens to look to for authority?

Perhaps a few facts from Otonabee might be appreciated by the citizens of Peterborough about this question. The plans for the disposal plant have been approved by the Provincial Board of Health, but they have not as yet approved of the site, and in the face of this the Peterborough Council is spending thousands of dollars of the people's money without having anything definite to work upon. No wonder the taxes are at high-water mark. The Engineer claims that the proposed site was chosen to accomodate East City as well as the West. This is but a dream. When questioned by the Township Solicitor, Mr. Peck, at the hearing of the case by the Provincial Board of Health in Toronto as to how this would be done, he states that he had not gone into the matter, so how does he know it will accomodate East City? And, besides, he added, the plant could not be situated farther down the river, as the sewage would have to run below the water level. Then, how he is going to run East City sewage under the canal and below the level of Little Lake for more than a mile beats me. The Township is acting square with the City of Peterborough and before one dollar was spent on construction work the City Fathers were given to understand that if they tried to force the plant on the proposed site it would be fought to a finish, but Mayor Buller said that it was going to go there. It seems as if Mr. Bulles has got more authority than the Provincial Medical Health Officer when he states a fact like this. The Township was agreeable to let the matter drop if the plant was taken farther down the river where the property is not nearly so valuable and populated like the Village of McMartinville. The importance of this locality was recognized last week by the County Council voting 40 per cent. of the cost of a new bridge across the Otonabee at the Street Railway Wharf, and endorses the Township of Otonabee's contention that this locality is too populous and thriving a spot for the location of a nuisance such as the sewage disposal plant will undoubtedly prove.

Yours truly,
"Otonabee."

BAYONETS IN HANDS.

Some British at Givenchy Used Only Their Fists.

LONDON, Feb. 1.—"Our men in many cases fought with bayonets in their hands, and even knocked out many Germans with their fists. A story is told of one man who broke into a house held by eight Germans, bayoneted four of them and captured the rest, while he continued to suck at his clay pipe," says the official eye-witness with the British expeditionary force, in a description of the battle of Jan. 26, when the Germans attacked the British north and south of La Bassee Canal, and succeeded in capturing some of their trenches, which the French official report yesterday says have all been retaken.

"A great part of the area where this fighting took place consists of brick fields, where the adversaries fought hand-to-hand. During the day we captured 52 prisoners, including two officers.

"The total casualties of the Germans are reported to have amounted to considerably over 1,000 in their effort against our lines. Against the French also, to the south of us, their attacks were repulsed with slaughter. They also made an attack in some strength on the French to the east of Ypres in the neighborhood of Zonnebeke. Here they were repulsed with ease in an abortive attempt at a surprise, leaving 300 dead bodies hanging on their wire entanglements.

"In Givenchy Village the fighting was of the most desperate nature, being in many cases at close quarters.

"On the whole, it may be said that Jan. 25 was a bad day for the enemy in this portion of their line. They paid very dearly for the one small gain in ground they achieved."

The pigeon is still the champion aviator, although it has too much sense to loop the loop.

CHURCH PARADE OF THE PETERBORO' HOME GUARD

Was Largely Attended--Inspiring Addresses at Both All Saints' Church and St. Peter's Cathedral

The first Church parade of the Peterboro' Home Guard was held yesterday morning, when nearly five hundred men, representing Canada's "second line of defence" attended Divine service at All Saints' Church and St. Peter's Cathedral. Shortly after 10 o'clock the Guards emerged from the Armouries, the Battalion being headed, respectively, by the Bands of the 57th Regiment and the Salvation Army. The 57th Bugle Band was also in attendance. No. 12 Company, in charge of Captain J. J. Duffus, and comprising the Roman Catholic members, dropped out at St. Peter's Cathedral and the remaining eleven companies proceeded to All Saints' Church. The manner in which the men were handled by the Company commanders was a tribute to the efficiency of the organization as a whole. As each Company approached the Church the officers stepped out of the lines and took up a position on either side of the steps, remaining there until the last man had passed in, the whole being accomplished with true military precision.

Order of Service at All Saints.

The order of service at All Saints' Church was as follows:

Opening Hymn—"All People that on Earth do Dwell."
The National Anthem.
The General Confession.
The Absolution.
The Lord's Prayer.
The Venite.
Psalm LXVII.
The first lesson, Joshua 1:1. This was read by Lieut.-Col. Miller.
The Te Deum.
The Second Lesson.
The Jubilate.
The Apostles' Creed.
The Collects.
Hymn, "Onward Christian Soldiers".
Prayer.
Hymn, "Jesus Lover of My Soul."
Sermon.
Offertory.
Closing hymn, "Fight the Good Fight with all thy Might."
Benediction.

Men of the Hour.

Ven. Archdeacon Perry, M.A., of St. Catharines, who preached the sermon described the occasion as an unprecedented one. Never in the history of Peterborough had it been necessary to form an organization for such a purpose and under conditions similar to those which exist to-day. He reviewed the situation from the time that war was declared until the present, and the manner in which the enemy's plans to reach Paris in four weeks and London in seven had been broken up. The speaker then launched into a descriptive account of his impressions that were gained during his recent trip to the Old Land, more particularly in respect to the elaborate preparations that had been undertaken to resist the invaders both on land and sea. Such men as Lord Kitchener, Earl Grey, and the officers commanding both the army and navy came in for considerable eulogy. He characterized it as nothing short of providential that Great Britain should be able to turn to such men in her hour of need. Archdeacon Perry also commented upon the unity and unanimity that was universal throughout the Empire of which Canada forms a part. Political differences were submerged and all parties and factions were united for one purpose. He paid a glowing tribute to the loyalty of the Indian troops, concluding with a stirring appeal to the members of the Home Guard to not only stand up for British freedom, but to associate Christianity with patriotism.

AT ST. PETER'S CATHEDRAL.

The customary High Mass was celebrated at St. Peter's Cathedral. After the reading of the Gospel, His Lordship Bishop O'Brien preached a special sermon for the occasion. When the events which have recently come to pass commenced, Bishop O'Brien began, the late Pope Pius X prayed for peace, and with his successor, Benedict XV, issued special instructions to all his children to pray that peace might be restored among the nations. Supplications have been offered during the past five months, yet our men have been called away in a succession of contingents. The men who could ally themselves with the soldiers for overseas service combined themselves under the name of Home Guard. They presented a beautiful spectacle in attending church to pray. Bishop O'Brien extended a hearty welcome to the volunteers for Home Guard duty and while hoping that such a state of affairs would not come to pass that they would be required to enter upon active service, he wished them every success in any undertaking they might have to face, and expressed the hope that the clergy would be at their side.

Bishop O'Brien spoke at length upon loyalty, which he defined as devoted allegiance to lawfully constituted authority. Man is essentially a social being and was destined for society, and where there is society there must be a head. Our King, as our head, is appointed by God, hence we should show our devotion to Him. No tyrant can be a lawfully constituted authority. Neither can time give authority unless lawfully constituted.

Continuing, His Lordship stated that all authority comes from God, hence in our love for God we must respect authority. The society of the state and the society of the church should never overlap if each keeps within its own sphere. A man can serve both, for each possesses lawfully constituted authority. The Belgians offered a striking example of loyalty. They adhered to right and were it not for little Belgium, Bishop O'Brien observed, the Germans would probably be occupying the coast towns of France and possibly menacing our own Mother Country. He hoped that the men would join the Home Guard, which, in conclusion, His Lordship exhorted in the words of St. Peter, "Love God, Honour the King."

THE SIGNS OF THE TIMES

What Rev. Robert Pogue Sees in the Present Conditions of the World

St. Paul's church was well filled last evening by a congregation interested to hear what the pastor, Rev. Robert Pogue, had to say regarding the signs of the times.

It was quite apparent that the reverend gentleman had made a painstaking study of the present disturbed conditions of the world and their relation to the Scriptural readings which are said to be concomitant to the second coming of Christ. In the preparation of his subject, Mr. Pogue had found such ample basis for his forceful and lucid address, that his hearers listened with close attention during its elaboration. He was in good voice, his delivery was clear and vigorous, and he had the assistance of a sympathizing choir, who rendered the appropriate hymns selected for the occasion with spirit and musical harmony.

Mr. Pogue chose as a text for his theme, the familiar scripture text found in the 24th chapter of Matthew, and the 28th verse to end of the chapter.

After a logical survey of the present disturbed conditions of the world, the speaker dilated on the many "signs of the times," bearing upon the second coming of Christ at the end of the age. He declared that "the end of the age would not be the end of the world," and explained the mistaken views that had prevailed regarding this view.

"One of the principle signs of the beginning of the end of the age," said Mr. Pogue, "was that the Jews were now fast returning to Jerusalem." Attention was drawn to the efforts that they were making for the restoration of Palestine, "but Israel was returning in the spirit of unbelief, and without faith in Christ."

Mr. Pogue then took up the other signs of the times as revealed by the present disturbance among the nations of the world. The prophecies were dealt with and many evidences adduced, pointing to the claim of the near coming of Christ.

A listener could not help looking back over the revolutions of history, and the causes which shook the world, when under the serene heaven the Satanic forces were engaged in the work of destruction in a manner similar to what is going on throughout the world in our own day. When a study of the past is made, is it not a fact that over all the story of the world's great life is written the martyrdom of humanity. A hundred years ago, in Napoleon's day, what do we find? Besides, the bloody war campaign of Napoleon there was the war between Great Britain and America, and almost every corner on the face of the world was embroiled in war. The difficulty seems too great for the human conception to know how or on what events to set the true mark of the signs of the times, so far as "wars and rumours of wars" is concerned, regarding the second coming of Christ.

To the same earnest listener there also comes this other thought: "What does it mean? It means many things. First of all, it means that there is something the matter with our Christianity, or else that we are not presenting it truly. For it seems to have no power whatever over men or nations when any real provocation of men's passions comes. Most of these millions of men who are now drunk with lust of killing, and hoarsely shouting for their brother's blood, have been calling themselves Christians and have most of them been taught in Christian schools and churches. And in a day it is all forgotten."

Is not this, by Ven. Archdeacon Basil Wilberforce, the saving, saner, practical view to take of Christ's second coming:

"To me the 'advent' of the Lord is not a movement in space, but a mode of manifestation. The only 'coming" of the Christ that is true to me is the "coming" of the Christ-spirit, the hidden spiritual nature, into recognition in the individual man. The mystic advent is a new understanding of the Christ, a coming into human consciousness of the truth that the historic Christ is the manifestation of the universally diffused mystic Christ, which is God's consciousness germinal in every one born into the world. The historic Christ is the mystic Christ specialized in one individual life-centre, in absolute perfection, for purposes of recognition. The "advent" to each separate soul is when each one recognizes that he is an individualization of the Christ."

RIOTING IN ROME.

Pro-Neutrality Meeting Is Disturbed by Republicans.

ROME, Feb. 1.—Troops with fixed bayonets had to be called out yesterday to re-establish order at a meeting which had been organized by Senators, members of the Chamber of Deputies, and other prominent persons with the purpose of forwarding a movement in favor of Italy maintaining neutrality in the war.

A large number of persons, mostly Republicans, who are against the maintenance of neutrality, gathered at the entrance to the hall, and in spite of the efforts of the police attacked the neutralists. Deputy Bruno Belmonte, leader of the neutralists, had his ears boxed, and someone spat in his face. He defended himself with his cane. During the disorder cries of "Shame; Prince von Buelow has bought you. You supporters of Austria!" rose from the anti-neutralists.

Finding that the police could not properly handle the situation, troops were called out and restored order.

Rev. Dr. Moore, of Toronto, At George Street Church Last Night

Problems in Moral Reform Confronting the Church of To-day

In introducing the Rev. Dr. Moore, of Toronto to his congregation, Rev. Mr. Peever paid a glowing tribute to his work as Superintendent of the Department of Social Service and Evangelism for the Methodist Church in Canada. A large audience had gathered despite the inclement weather and listened with rapt attention to a powerful discourse on the moral problems confronting the church to-day.

Taking as his text Acts 17:6, "These that have turned the world upside down are come hither hither also," he sought to impress upon his hearers the fact that this world of ours, in so far as moral conditions are concerned, is wrong side up, that it must be righted, and the opportunity for doing it lies right at our door.

Paul and those accompanying him on his missionary journey had reached Thessalonica. Knowledge of their work had preceded them. In that city were some religious folk who were thoroughly satisfied with themselves and their method of life, and did not wish to be disturbed. They had learned that wherever Paul went there was a great commotion, changes brought about, and the old order of things disturbed. They were determined to stop it before it started. Organizing a mob they proceeded to the house of Jason with whom the missionaries were boarding, but they were too late in the day to catch them. Not to be disappointed, however, they brought Jason unto the rulers of the city, crying, "These that have turned the world upside down are come hither also; whom Jason hath received."

Paul was a converted man, a servant of God in whom God lived, therefore, he could not hide the light that burned within.

"Ye are the light of the world. . . . Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven."

We are the servants of God to illumine the dark places of the earth.

Illustrating the effect of light upon the dark places, the learned Divine recalled an experience in a large cave in the United States. Twenty tourists had entered in the darkness, when suddenly an electric light was flashed on. Such screaming and commotion on the part of his friends, and squirming of insects.

In like manner, whenever the light of God, through Jesus Christ, comes in touch with the wrong and sin of human life there is always a commotion, a turning upside down.

The purpose of our life should be to make the world better, purer, richer. Endowed with centuries of Christianity behind us we should strive for the uplifting of society, the betterment of citizenship, and the bringing of Jesus Christ into the hearts and lives of men.

Is the world right side up? In many respects it is not. It must be righted, and we are the ones to do it. We are to right the wrong conditions that exist in Peterborough, in Ontario and in Canada.

Many are willing to settle things on a compromise, "but," said Dr. Moore, "things are never settled on a compromise, the other side squirms and invariably comes around again." We should seek always to set things right at the time.

The world knows what the Gospel teaches, what the message of Jesus Christ is, and in every community the Church is challenged to apply that Gospel.

We know that conditions exist which are not in accord with the will of God. Therefore, we must look at the questions, and go out to battle, so determined, so devout in faithfulness to God, so trusting to Him that we will not be satisfied until conditions are righted.

Continuing the thought of warfare he referred to our brave volunteers. How proud he was of them as they passed in review before the Governor-General at Valcartier! Thirty-two thousand men fired with a noble purpose, goinng forth to serve their country and their king. Again, in Toronto last week he saw two thousand men of the second contingent. On every face the message: "We'll dare for Britain's sake and win our victory for our Empire."

You and I have a battle to fight against the powers of darkness. Are we made of the same stuff as our noble volunteers? Would we be like that member of the Princess Patricia's, who, while being prought to the hospital sang "The Maple Leaf For Ever?"

One think we must do, we must get right with God if we would go out successfully against the forces of evil as they exist to-day.

Is everything right in Peterborough? What about play, the amusements of our youth? It is a fact that the leisure hours of our boys and girls, of our young men and young women, contribute more than any other towards the formation of character. Dr. Moore was pleased that the Church was giving attention to these things, as well as to the play of the child as represented in supervised play grounds, in the cities, and community centres in the rural districts.

In the past commercialism was allowed to creep in, where men sought only to make money, and were careless of the influence on character. It is our duty to see that while amusements are attractive they shall, at the same time, be uplifting in their influence on body and mind.

Speaking of the Moving Picture Shows Dr. Moore related a recent experience in Montreal. In pursuing his duties he visited, or sought to visit, some theatres, and was turned away from five places because "there was not even standing room." What a condition of affairs especially in these times of financial stress! He was thankful to say that a rigorous censorship on films was being maintained throughout every Province in the Dominion, and for which the Church could take a little credit.

With reference to the theatre the preacher said that after having visited all the so-called first-class ones from coast to coast, he was sorry to say that there is not a first-class theatre in Canada that he would care to have his sixteen-year-old daughter attend.

The Church must give more attention to the character of amusements. There is a time coming when amusements will be managed by the people, for the people, for the uplifting of character, so that when your child goes to these places of amusement, they will not see what you do not wish them to see.

Referring to literature Dr. Moore thanked God for the newspapers of Canada. Their editors were men of high purpose whose efforts were directed towards the development of the country and the morals of the people. They realize that character is the first great asset of a community. In nearly two thousand newspapers throughout Canada there is printed, every week, matter pertaining to the uplift of society, and the development of moral character.

To show the effects of literature Dr. Moore cited two cases. One a family of four boys brought up in an inland town, where they had never seen a boat, yet all four boys became sailors. He could never understand this peculiar fact until one day he happened to line with the family. Then it flashed upon him all at once, for, arranged around the walls of the dining-room were four magnificent pictures of sailing vessels, which the boys had seen at least three times a day every day of their life. No wonder they became sailors!

Another, was a home in which the father and mother were very prominent workers in the church, yet the boys took sides against their parents in a recent local option campaign. The parents were almost broken-hearte. Mr. Moore was invited to their home. He had not been there long when he discovered a certain paper, of doubtful principles, among a heap of magazines. "How long have you been taking this paper?" he queried.

"For years," replied the mother. "Father prizes that paper very much; of course he does not believe all it prints, but he thinks the editor is so smart and cutting in his sarcasms."

Right there, declared the preacher, lay the secret of the trouble. Those boys had been so impressed with the teachings of that editor that they thought he knew more than their father and mother.

Oh, for a clean press, for clean books!

There are over a score of papers which cannot enter Canada because they are unclean, and in every Custom House in Canada there is a list of 58 books which are prohibited from importation.

Continuing, the doctor asked, "Are our homes what they ought to be?"

Because some are not it has been necessary to organize institutions to gather in the wrecks that come from them and lead them to a better life.

In the East there is the Maritime Home for Girls, where already twenty-eight have been lifted out of bad surroundings and whose lives are being fashioned into a more beautiful womanhood. One day the lady superintendent saw a waggon drive up in which were a number of people Presently a little girl of thirteen and two men got out. The superintendent was horrified to see the girl handcuffed to the men. Rushing out she enquired the reason for this terrible thing. One of the men, her brother, in language none too choice, cautioned her to be careful for if the girl were free she would do her harm. Throwing her arms around the child she said, "You wouldn't hurt me, would you?" She then ordered the handcuffs removed and the girl rushed into the arms of the superintendent, while the brothers began to tell what an awful creature she was. The girl had been in the home only two weeks when she begged never to be sent away. Writing home she began her letters thus: "Merry Times Home for Girls," Truro, N.S.

In Toronto a pathetic thing came under his notice recently. A young woman from across the seas found work in a store nearly two years ago. At that time she was pure, innocent. Beside her worked a man who seemed to befriend her in her lonliness, for she was without friends. He gradually worked into her confidence in a most brutal manner betrayed her. A year ago a babe was born; a babe without a name. She went to the home of his mother where she was taken in, but one cold night in February he became angry with her, drove her out into the zero weather without hat or wrap of any kind, either for herself or babe. To protect the child she had to use her skirt, and in a benumbed condition she was found by a Christian woman and taken to her home. However, pneumonia set in and she was taken to the hospital. Three days later she lay dying, and she called for her babe. They put the child in her arms and knelt at her bedside praying that her soul might be taken to Him who died for her.

In the years of his superintendency of this Department, the Church has gone out into the paths of darkness, yes, into the very teeth of hell, to gather in the unfortunates and lead them to Jesus Christ.

Dr. Moore made a very touching reference to the White Slave Traffic and its terrible work. A young lady had been spirited away in an automobile while on her way home from work, in Toronto, a short time before Christmas. Three weeks of desperate search located her in Pittsburg, and she is now with her mother in her own home.

In conclusion the speaker desired the prayers of Christian people that God would make him strong, wise and courageous to undertake the great work of Social Service and Evangelism to which the Church had called him.—Paul Penman.

"I am much bothered," he said, "I can marry a wealthy widow whom I don't love or a poor girl that I do love intensely. What shall I do?"

"Listen to your heart," advised his companion, "and marry the one you love."

"You are right, my friend. I shall marry the girl."

"Then can you give me the widow's address?"

Only Moslem Troops From India For Egypt's Defence

LONDON, Jan. 2 (by mail to New York).—One of the cleverest moves made by the British war office during the present war was the landing of only Moslem soldiers from India for the defence of Egypt. Among the 100,000 odd Indians drafted to different parts of the war area, there are, perhaps, a hundred different religions, and a little less tact on the part of the authorities might have meant much trougle for the British.

The Brahmins, Hindus, Parsees, worshippers of Vishnu, Kali, Siva and other creeds, however, were sent to France, East Africa, China, and in fact anywhere but Egypt. Only Mahommedan regiments put foot on Egyptian soil, and the effect on the population was immediate.

The Australians, New Zealanders, and English territorials which replaced the regular garrisons, were, according to the Egyptian mind, all "Ginours," and as such not to be distinguished from the regular army but when the brown men arrived from India there was considerable speculation as to what kind of pagans the new arrivals were.

When a body of Bengal lancers made for the principal mosque of Alexandria there was some alarm and indignation but the dusky troopers had no difficulty in proving to the priests that they, too, were of the "faithful," and there was much wonderment when it was learned that all the soldiers from India were "true believers." This made the Egyptians "furiously to think," for the Indians were quite satisfied that in fighting for the British Kaiser-i-Hind against the Padishah and "Hadji Mohammed William" of Berlin, they were in no way acting to the detriment of their religion. The Egyptians have never loved Turkish rule, and when good Moslems were ready to fight with the British, the importance of the Shiekh-ul-Islam's haly war proclamation began to diminish.

The Indians made a tremendous impression on the native soldiery, particularly the Maharaja of Bikanir's camel corps, which was reckoned as good as the camelry maintained by the British, only better mounted. The Bedouins from the desert were particularly struck by the beautiful animals brought by this corps, and their respect for "El Lord'a" (Kitchener's) country was considerably increased that the millionaire Maharaja himself had taken the field in person. The horses of the cavalry also impressed the Bedouins, who fancy themselves as judges of horseflesh.

MEETING OF THE W. C. T. UNION

Special Prayer Service Will be Held on Feb. 12th.

At the Women's Christian Temperance Union's regular monthly meeting held at the Y.W.C.A. last Friday there was a good attendance. Mrs. Whalley, the President, occupied the chair.

As the second week of February is the week of prayer, Mrs. Knapman kindly offered her home for a special meeting to be held on Friday, the 12th of February, the object to be special prayer service in honour of Miss Frances Williard.

Mrs. Kennet was appointed superintendent of a new department of work, "The Little White Ribbboners," which it has been decided to take up.

A number of soap wrappers was handed in to Miss Wells. The manufacturers of surprise soap pay the W.C.T.U. 50c. per 100, and with this money, which amounted to over $1700 last year, two travellers' aid were kept at the Union Station. Miss Roberts spent 177 hours at the station, assisted 175 persons, and sent 12 girls to Williard Hall in December, and to date has spent 140 hours on duty, assisted 105 people and sent 15 to Williard Hall. Miss Currie, Travellers' Aid, was at the station 206 hours and assisted 154 persons. The W.C.T.U. will be pleased if anyone using Surprise Soap will send in their wrappers to the Society.

It was decided to send an invitation to the Lakefield Union to join with the local Union at the next meeting at Mrs. Knapman's.

After the business was concluded, Mrs. Campbell spoke on systematic giving.

On the subject of giving, as on every other subject which touches our religious life, the Bible is our standard, and because it is God's Word. By systematic giving we mean giving according to some rule or law. It means thinking of God's claims and providing for them. Proportionate giving is setting apart a certain share of what God has given us, and here God's Word meets us with a specific claim. The tenth is the Lord's. Many people think that giving the tenth was a Jewish law, but such is not the case. Abraham gave tithes to Melchisedec, hundreds of years before the Jewish nations were organized. If we would each set aside one-tenth of our income for the Lord, such a great effort would not be required to raise funds in the churches of to-day, and there would be no difficulty in sending missionaries to the end of the earth.

BRITISH RETAKE TRENCHES LOST MOMENTARILY AT LA BASSEE

Artillery of the Allies is Ascendancy Over That of the Enemy—German Reinforcements are Fully Met.

PARIS, Feb. 1.—All the trenches momentarily lost by the British army at La Bassee were retaken in a strong assault by the first division Saturday night. Fighting at this important position was no child's play, for the French official statement says that the report has been confirmed that the [illegible] fore the British trenches.

Owing to the setting in of frosty weather, with an invigorating element in the atmosphere, the soldiers are full of fighting, and constant attacks along the front may be expected, but owing to the condition of the roads, which are not yet suitable for the movement of ponderous artillery, a general advance can hardly be looked for till after the break up of spring.

The Germans made a movement to overcome the French at Fontaine Madame Sunday morning. Three attacks were driven off here with great slaughter.

Heavy artillery firing was the feature of the operations Saturday night and Sunday morning and in the work the allies more than held their own, and they had successes to their credit. As time goes on the allied artillery gains more and more of an ascendancy over the Krupp artillery. Effective work was performed by the French guns Saturday night and Sunday morning in the sections of Arras, Roye, Soissons, Rheims and Perthes. Two of the German guns were destroyed, several field works were made untenable and collections of lance bombs were exploded. The long range field pieces got the range of several concentration of troops made for attacks, and caused their hasty dispersal. Bivouacs and convoys were also severely handled by the same fire.

The answer of the allies to the German revival of the offensive last week has been to move additional batteries to the front, so as to cope with the increased armament of the Germans. It may be surmised that when the allies begin to advance in earnest the Germans will be given a few matters for wonder in the gunnery branch of warfare.

The French still hold the Village of Angomont, near Badonviller, which the German official statement claimed the Germans had occupied.

No change is reported in the situation from the Argonne to the Vosges.

The Germans heavily bombarded Arras, Ruric and Roolincourt. They exploded a mine on the plateau of Nuvron without attaining any results, as they expected. The French troops in the Argonne were forced to withdraw on Saturday about 250 yards, owing to the long occupation of the trenches making them untenable. Serious losses on both sides occurred in the performing of these operations.

CITY HALL PARAGRAPHS

The regular monthly meeting of the City Council will be held this evening. A busy session is anticipated as many matters of more than ordinary interest are slated for discussion.

An Oratorical Contest.

The oratorically inclined members of the City Council will have a chance to blossom out to-night when one or two matters pertaining to civic economy will be tabled. It is a big subject and should provide ample scope to the speech-making propensities of some of the Aldermen.

The School Board.

The Board of Education will meet to-morrow evening. This will give them an opportunity of discussing the action that the Council will take to-night in respect to the Board's request for a debenture issue of $18,000 to be applied on the completion of the two new schools.

Legal Committee.

The Legal Committee of the City Council will meet this afternoon at 5.30 o'clock. The Chairman of this committee is Ald. F. H. Dobbin.

WITH OTHER COUNCILS.

A special committee of the London City Council have recommended the building of a civic stock yard.

Alderman Enlists.

Percy Gillingwater, a Brantford alderman, who enlisted with the first contingent, has been appointed sergeant in charge of Gen. Alderson's orderlies.

City Will Refuse Mackay Bill...

John Mackay and Co. are to be notified by the City of Toronto that the firm's bill of $42,546 for reports on the railway purchase deal is not admitted as a liability, and will not be paid. The next move is for Mr. Mackay to make. It will probably be a suit against the city.

Dump Snow in Sewers.

Within the next few days the Toronto Works Department will begin the experiment of dumping snow into a sewer manhole at the corner of Victoria and Gould streets, as a means of clearing it from the streets. A specially designed manhole has been constructed at the point mentioned, a hose connection being attached at the top and bottom to flush the snow into the sewer at the moment that it is dumped.

Might Work in Peterborough.

At Brockville an attempt will now be made to clear the streets of all boys and girls under the age of sixteen years after nine o'clock every night. Chief of Police Burke has instructed the officers to keep a sharp lookout for all children under that age on the streets, in pool rooms, hotels, or any other public place, to bring their names to him, and he will see that they are brought into court and punished.

City Claims No Exception To Garbage Collection By-law

The argument in the appeal against the city's garbage collection by-law in its application to church property was heard this morning by Judge Huycke. Mr. Dumble and Mr. Wearing appeared for the George Street Methodist church, and Mr. Gordon represented the City, with Clerk Armstrong present.

Under the city's by-law the George Street church was taxed for garbage collection and the treasurer paid a tax of $64 on an assessment of $84,000. Mr. Dumble said that the assessment in 1913 was made before the by-law was adopted. The assessment of 1913 was adopted by the Council of 1914. There was no session of the Court of Revision in 1914. The church was therefore exempt from taxation except for two specific purposes; but these exceptions did not cover this particular case of garbage collection.

In replying to this statement, Mr. Gordon quoted from the Assessment Act. Clause 50 provides for the making of the roll between Feb. 15 and April 30. Clause 56 permits a variation in that period. It allows the taking of the assessment from July 1 and Sept. 30, the rolls to be returned on Oct. 1st, etc.; and the assessment so made and concluded may be adopted by the Council of the following year as the assessment for that year. Clause (3) of this section (56) says: In case the Council deem it advisable to adopt the provisions of this section in any year for which there has been an assessment made under the previous sections of this Act, etc., the Council may adopt the assessment roll previously made and revised.

Mr. Gordon presented this clause as the Council's grounds for adopting the assessment made in 1913. Mr. Dumble had said that when the assessment was fixed in 1913 and used for 1914, there should have been a sitting of the Court of Revision. The appeal concerned not only the amount of assessment but as to whether the property was legally assessable.

Mr. Dumble continued that the assessor had admitted that the particular assessment had not received proper consideration. In the following year it was reduced $30,000. Places of worship are exempted under the assessment of the Act.

Mr. Dumble claimed that a penalty clause of up to 6 months in jail vitiated the whole Act. No law allows a man to be put in jail for default of payment.

In reply Mr. Gordon stated that in the by-law for levying for garbage collection there was no penalty mentioned.

Mr. Dumble claimed that the spirit of the law and of this by-law was opposed to assessing or collecting garbage from the churches. He claimed that the by-law was illegal.

An offer to return the tax on the difference in the two assessments was refused as anettlement by Mr. Dumble.

Judge Huycke admitted the injustice of the initial high assessment.

Mr. Gordon pointed out that the claim of payment under mistake could not be made. The law, too, provides for a tax on all property.

Mr. Dumble contended that the word premises did not include a church, which could be got at under the Health Act.

HARRY SYMONS K.C. SENTENCED TO 5 YEARS IN "PEN"

TORONTO, Feb. 1. — After two weeks of the most arduous and nerve-racking legal battling the Union Life case came to a close Saturday afternoon, when the jury brought in a verdict of guilty against Harry Symons, K.C., on the first count, Dr. Hughes not guilty on the first count, and both guilty on the second.

Mr. Justice Clute sentenced Harry Symons, K.C., to five years' imprisonment in Kingston Penitentiary. Dr. Hughes was held on $15,000 bail and will receive sentence May 25.

This now famous case was prosecuted by the crown on the charge that the defendants, Harry Symons, K.C., Dr. Hughes, H. Pollman-Evans and Dr. Millichamp had defrauded the public in Canada on the first count, and in England on the second count. Dr. Millichamp is dead, and H. Pollman-Evans is a fugitive from justice.

In the judge's remarks to Symons he explained that defendant had intended to defraud from 1903 till the wind-up of the company. That from evidence submitted he had not tried to stop the public from investing their money, taking from poor and rich alike, just as long as the money was put in. It was a gamble pure and simple with the people's money. This was said in respect to the first count. As to the second count they were trying to float an English company when they knew that both companies were insolvent. Even when they knew the losses amounted to $150,000 a year, I say that every single step was known to you, and I must regret that I agree with the jury in their verdict and do not feel inclined to show much leniency, and I hereby pass sentence on you to serve a term of five years."

"The British farmer," the document reads, "would suffer no real hardship or loss if the Government commandeered the home-grown and unmarketed wheat at 42 shillings ($10.50) a quarter, and immediate action on these lines would tend to moderate prices."

QUEEN MARY PARENT CIRCLE

Officers Elected and Reports Presented at Friday's Meeting

The regular business meeting of the Parent Circle of Queen Mary School was held on Friday, and was very largely attended. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President—Mrs. W. Waugh.
Vice-President—Mrs. W. J. Cox.
Secretary—Mrs. W. J. McDuffee.
Treasurer—Mrs. C. E. Canfield.

The first report of the Society was as follows:

On Feb. 27th, 1914, Mrs. Conway and Mrs. Christie, representatives from the "Y," organized the Parent Circle of Queen Mary School, the object being to promote the welfare of the child, closer relations between parent and teacher, and in every way to help one another. Eight regular meetings have been held with an average attendance of twenty-eight at these meetings. Addresses have been given by Mrs. Rollins, Mrs. McElhiney, our teachers, and different members of the Circle.

In June we ended our meetings for the summer months by holding a lawn social at Mrs. Moyer's, which was largely attended and a great success in every way. In October a Sewing Club was started, to meet each Monday afternoon, to mend and make over clothing for the children who needed help in order to send them to school neat and comfortable, and ready for the cold weather.

We wish to thank all those who have sent us clothing, or helped in any way in this work, and and we feel they would be doubly repaid if they could only see the comfortable garments we make for the children out of the clothing sent in to us.

Forty-six children have been comfortably clothed for school. Nine mothers have been helped. Seven warm quilts have been made and given out to needy families. We have been paid for the tying of thirteen puffs and use the money to carry on the work.

On December 8, through the kindness of Mrs. Scott, we held a Santa Claus tea at her home, taking in nearly $25 in this way. We sent out sixteen baskets to needy members. These baskets contained, besides groceries, warm clothing and stockings.

We would like the cooperation of all mothers interested, and we feel sure they would enjoy the meetings and work of the Circle.

Pauline J. McDuffee,
Secretary.

German Submarines Sink Five British Merchantmen

Von Tirpitz Threatens British Commerce — Torpedoed Unarmed Vessels Giving Crew No Chance —All Crews Got Ashore Safely —Even Supplies for Belgians Gone.

A "BRAVE" DEMONSTRATION

LONDON, Feb. 1. — Five British merchant steamers were sunk by German submarines during Saturday and Sunday at various points in the Irish Sea and the English Channel. These exploits have caused intense excitement, especially in British shipping circles. The first announcement of the success of the submarines was in the following official statement issued by the French Minister of Marine:

"The British steamer Tokomaru has been sunk by a torpedo from a German submarine. The British vessel Icaria also was torpedoed in the same locality. In the Irish Sea the British steamers Linda Blanche and Ben Cruachen were torpedoed.

"Hitherto the Germans, before attacking a merchant vessel, always allowed the crews sufficient time to embark in the ship's boats. That custom has now been abandoned, as is shown by the bombardment of the Admiral Gautheume, which was filled with Belgian women and children refugees. The German marine has decided to violate systematically and deliberately international law."

The new raid brings the information from French naval experts that Germany has a fleet of eighteen powerful submarines capable of attacking Britain's overseas commerce. Each craft has a radius of 2,500 miles, while a radius of only 2,000 miles is necessary to enforce Admiral von Tirpitz's threat to chase British commercial ships from their home seas.

The torpedo made a hole below the water line, but the Tokomaru remained afloat for half an hour. This gave the crew of fifty-seven men a chance to get off in the small boats. The crew was picked up by the trawler Hooper and brought to Havre yesterday afternoon. No details are available concerning the torpedoing of the Icaria.

Advices from Fleetwood say:

The German submarine U-21 on Saturday torpedoed the North Shields steamer Ben Cruachen off this port. The entire crew, number twenty, was landed here.

The captain of the steamer says he was overtaken by the submarine on Saturday morning and ordered to leave his ship within ten minutes. Hardly had the crew got into the boats when a torpedo was fired, and the steamer went down.

The Ben Cruachen, which was of 1,978 tons and belonged to the Morrison Shipping Co., was on a voyage from the Orkney Islands to Liverpool with a general cargo.

Fleetwood is one of the principal fishing and shipping ports on the west coast.

The steamer Graphic, with passengers, Belfast to Liverpool, the paper says, passed wreckage and soon afterwards saw the Ben Cruachen sunk. The Graphic was chased, but eluded pursuit and reached the Mersey safely.

Two other vessels besides the Ben Cruachen were sunk by the German submarine U-21. This fact became known when a trawler brought in the eleven members of the crew of the steamer Linda Blanche, which was sent to the bottom by the German raider.

The Linda Blanche was on its way from Manchester to Belfast when the submarine suddenly appeared alongside. Officers came aboard and in perfect English ordered the crew to leave the steamer. As soon as the men of the Linda Blanche were in their boats the Germans attached a mine to the bridge and another to the forecastle. When these were exploded the vessel was destroyed.

The skipper of the trawler stated that at two o'clock Saturday afternoon he sighted another ship, on which an explosion evidently had occurred. He was steering in the direction of this vessel when he picked up the Linda Blanches' boats. When he reached the point where he had seen the other ship he found no trace of wreckage, and believed it went down after he first sighted it.

The crew of the British steamer Kilcoan has been landed on the Isle of Man, in the Irish Sea, by the coasting steamer Gladys. The crew reports that the Kilcoan was sunk by a submarine. The Kilcoan was a small steamer of 456 tons.

Leinster Chased; But Escaped.

DUBLIN, Feb. 1. — The steamer Leinster, from Holyhead to Kingstown, reports that she was chased by a German submarine for fifteen minutes off the Kish Light vessel, but succeeded in escaping.

The Kish Light vessel is opposite the mouth to Dublin Bay.

Beware of Trouble

It is the wisest thing you can do to have your watch examined at this time of the year.

The cold weather is apt to harden the oil that strains the mainspring and affects the motion.

People usually wait until something breaks. The other way is the cheapest in the end and a little attention at the right time saves the watch.

ADDRESSED THE LIFE PROBLEM CLUB

A Trip to the Pacific— Y.M.C.A. Notes.

H. H. Stevens, M.P., of Vancouver, B.C., has accepted an invitation to address a men's mass meeting under the auspices of the local Y.M.C.A., on Sunday afternoon, Feb. 21st, on the subject of "Canada's Duties to Her Immigrants." Mr. Stevens is a strong, forceful speaker, and a prominent figure on the floor of the House of Commons. He is considered a master on the subject of immigration, and was very prominent in the fight against the landing on the Pacific Coast of a boat load of immigrants from India about three months ago. We trust that every man will plan to hear Mr. Stevens.

The Life Problem Club, yesterday afternoon, was addressed by F. H. Dobbins. Subject, "The Land of the Nineteen Hour Day." Alderman Dobbins gave a very interesting account of his trip to the Pacific Coast last summer, and a very vivid description of the conditions that surround Prince Rupert, which is the western terminal of the Grand Trunk Pacific.

Alderman Dobbins told of the heavy winds and rain that are experienced on the western coast as the result of the Japanese currents. He spoke of a wind that lifted a building the size of the C.P.R. freight station, carried it into the river and floated it to an anchorage on the opposite side. He stated that he saw a church building which had been moved nine inches by the wind.

Travelling through the mountains is rather a hard proposition, as he stated. He once took a drive in the vicinity of Prince Rupert, where they met a logging waggon descending the mountain. They unhitched their horses and led them into a small recess in the side of the mountain, took the wheels from the carriage, laid them up on a cliff and hung the body of the carriage on the limbs of a tree that the loaded waggon, which had the right of way, might pass.

The buildings are of such light construction that in case of fire they don't try to save the building but all hands turn to, to move the nearby structures to a place of safety. One man told Mr. Dobbins that he and his wife were in their house when it was moved, and while being moved their greatest concern was to keep their pots and kettles on the stove.

Prince Rupert is located entirely on the rocks, the levelling of which for building purposes being very expensive. The men that he found at Prince Rupert are largely college bred, who are in the west as miners, surveyors and lawyers. While it is a rough country, still it has a great future, and with the advent of the railroads will build up quite rapidly. Mr. Dobbins showed the young men a large number of photographs taken along the Pacific Coast, and when the meeting adjourned received a hearty vote of thanks for his very interesting address.

Mr. G. A. Carson, physical director, left on Saturday for Guelph, where he is to attend a conference of physical directors of Eastern Ontario. Mr. Carson will return on Wednesday.

LOTS OF SNOW IN THE WEST

Mr. Wm. Bell of Calgary, in renewing his subscription to the Examiner, states that in that city they have had good sleighing since the first week in November and will have for weeks unless they get spring right away. He also says that the great fall of snow in the west this year will be a great boon to the farmer. The war has unsettled business conditions very greatly and times are not as good as they were.

YESTERDAY IN WOODMAN HALL

Another important and interesting theme was considered last night by Elder F. W. Johnston in the Woodmen Hall, over Nugent's Drug Store. Taking for his text the language of Daniel ix., 24 to 27, he traced out with undisputed certainty that great chronological prophecy beginning as it does with the famous decree of Artaxerxes to the Jews to restore and build Jerusalem, and closing with the final termination of the Jewish nation. This period, Mr. Johnston declared, was allotted the nation as a probationary period in which they were to fill up their cup of iniquity, after which the Jews would be rejected as a nation. Thus before the close of that chronological prophecy the gospel message would be confined exclusively to the Jews as the Lord thus declared in Matthew x., 5, 6, to "Go not into the way of the Gentiles, but rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel." But when the seventy-week prophecy expired in A. D. 34, we hear the Apostle declaring in Acts xiii., 46: "It was necessary that the word of God should first have been spoken to you, but seeing ye have rejected the word of the Lord and judged yourselves unworthy of everlasting life, lo we turn to the Gentiles."

After figuring out the dates and proving that the Messiah had arrived in the exact time as outlined in this prophecy, then showed how rapidly the Gospel has been spoken to the Gentiles ever since. He referred particularly to the progress of the Adventist faith throughout the world. People have the idea, so Mr. Johnston said, that the Adventist work amounts to very little, but I want to show you that we are doing more missionary work than any other denomination in the world. We have entered on to be ended over five times as many foreign countries as any other sect, and only six less places than all Protestant sects put together, and to give you some idea of how rapidly the people are accepting this faith, he spoke of the progress of the past three years. He said that in 1912 there were 4,000 people converted in seventh day Adventism; in 1913 there were 7,000 converts, and in 1914 there were 12,000, making in all no less than 23,000 in only three years. I want to know, so Mr. Johnston said, if this looks as if the Advent faith is dwindling? Not much. This Gospel of the kingdom is being preached, and the fact that it is nearly completed is proof of Christ's soon coming.

DENVER, Col., Feb. 1.—J. Luther Wyatt, general manager of the American-Canadian Securities Co., with offices here, was released on bond Saturday, after having been arrested on a charge of using the mails to defraud. The charge against Wyatt is in connection with the operations of the Commonwealth Securities Co. of Dallas, which is now involved in voluntary bankruptcy proceedings.

Patient Burns Hospital.

BRACEBRIDGE, Ont., Feb. 1.—Fire destroyed a small building on the outskirts of the town, which was used as an isolation hospital, Saturday. The fire is supposed to have been started by a patient, Arthur Cooper, a man who was quarantined in the building as a smallpox patient. He has been placed under arrest on suspicion of incendiarism.

American Cotton Reaches Germany.

LONDON, Feb. 1.—The leading German textile trade journal states that 115,000 bales of American cotton from the new Egyptian Cotton for Germany, have arrived in Europe. According to this authority 40,000 bales have been landed at Alex Gothenburg, 25,000 at Bremen and 40,000 at Rotterdam.

ADVANCES EVERYWHERE.

Russian War Office Reports Progress All Along the Line.

LONDON, Feb. 1. — Despatches from Petrograd yesterday claim success on every front on which the Russian army is engaged. In East Prussia, in central Poland, on the Carpathian front, where the Russians say the fighting is assuming "the character of a general battle," in the Caucasus, and in Persia the armies of the Czar are advancing against the Turks or holding their own. In the Caucasus, indeed, their successes are claimed to be more pronounced. There is no confirmation of the unofficial report that the Russians have recaptured Tabriz, in Persia, but the report may be true, as the official despatches tell of a severe defeat of the Turks in that neighborhood and the flight of the fugitives toward Tabriz.

Vienna reports of the capture of 10,000 Russians and the recapture of the Carpathian passes are regarded with skepticism.

The Russian General Staff yesterday gave out the following statement:

"In the region of the forests north of Pilkallen and Gumbinnen (East Prussia) the battles continue. Here in the region of the village of Lebegalen we repulsed the Germans by a counter-attack with bayonets.

"On the left bank of the Vistula, and the approaches to Borlimow, the Germans, during the night of Jan. 29 and the next day, repeated their attacks upon our positions, but were everywhere thrown back with great losses, except at one trench, which remained in the hands of the enemy.

"In the Carpathian front, in the passes of Dukla and Wyszkow, the fighting is gradually assuming the character of a general battle."

TO TEST THE LAW.

Steamer Dacia Has Sailed From Galveston With Cotton.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—The British embassy was officially informed last night that the cargo steamer Dacia, formerly of the Hamburg-American Line, but now under the American flag, had sailed with her cargo of 11,000 bales of Texas cotton for Rotterdam. This is in the face of the general and specific warnings uttered to the State Department through the British embassy within the past fortnight, that the vessel would be seized, and expressing the intention of contesting the transfer in a prize court.

It is believed here that the sailing of the Dacia yesterday was with the full consent and upon the advice of the State Department, which is desirous of testing the strength of the British position.

The Dacia will be stopped by British cruisers and her detention and conveyance to a prize court is expected to follow at once upon the report from her commander that he has made the seizure. It is probable that if the Dacia is taken in western waters she will be conveyed to Halifax for the trial.

No Protest Threatened.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—That the United States Government was notified by Sir Edward Grey on Jan. 19 that the British Government would protest the purchase by this Government of German interned ships is absolutely denied by the State Department.

The Department denies not only that such notification was received, but that any communication of any date bearing on the subject of the purchase of German ships by the United States was received.

Cattle May Be Imported.

OTTAWA, Feb. 1.—The Federal authorities are now allowing the importation of cattle from the Channel Islands. Permit must first be obtained from the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa in the usual way. Such importations are not allowed from Great Britain and Ireland.

To Use Motor Cars.

DETROIT, Feb. 1.—The Pere Marquette Railroad will on Monday begin its substitution of motor cars for passenger trains on the branches that have proven their inability to meet expenses of passenger traffic under the present plan of operation.

GENUINE AGENTS.

List of Allies' Representatives Given to Prevent Frauds.

OTTAWA, Feb. 1.—In consequence of the misrepresentations that have been made to business firms in the United States and Canada by persons who have fraudulently styled themselves purchasing agents for the British and French Governments, it has been considered advisable by the Government to publish the following list of purchasing agents for military purposes of the allied Governments:

British—Col. A. G. Barton and F. W. Stobart, Ritz Carlton Hotel, Montreal.

French—Hudson Bay Co., Montreal; Capt. Le Feuilloux, Hotel Brevoort, New York; Direction De'L'Intendance, Bordeaux, France; M. De La Chaume, 25 Broadway, London.

Russian—S. Ruperts and Alexieff, care of the Russian Embassy, Washington.

LESSENING THE DRUDGERY IN THE FARM KITCHEN

W. H. Westney, Ontario Co., Ont.

During the long winter evenings when the farmer is enjoying himself by the kitchen fire, if he will pause for a moment from the perusal of his paper, he will probably notice that the housewife is still busy; doing little jobs that are not much in themselves, but hundreds of them performed in a day make the work wearisome. He may also notice that these same tasks are causing the weary shoulders to droop and adding threads of grey to the hair, that are a proof of time and toil.

These evenings afford a grand opportunity for the farmer to consider ideas, that if put into execution would lighten the work and save the steps of the goodwife, who in many cases does more than her share of the work on our Ontario farms. We farmers are progressive enough to adopt modern methods of crop rotation and cultivation, assisted by up-to-date machinery, but we seem slower to adopt the improvements in the house, which are just as great labor-savers as the self-binder in the harvest field.

Did you ever notice how many trips were made bringing water, and how many more trips taking it out as wash water, etc., to be dumped on the ground, making an eyesore as well as a breeding-place for disease germs? Any farmer who is handy with tools could easily figure out the necessary piping, and order it cut and threaded, also couplings, elbows, etc., and by doing his own fitting and carpenter work install a sink that would work satisfactorily and entail very little expense. By a little more planning a few dollars extra, would enable him to have the soft water right by the sink, perhaps the hard water, too; but, of course, existing conditions vary. Any information as to distance and height that pumps will draw and lift water, can readily be obtained from Prof. Day of the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, or the agricultural papers will usually supply the information. We know of hand pumps drawing water for a distance of 200 feet, but a lift of over 25 feet is not practical.

While doing the plumbing work, it would be well worth considering some plan of carrying the water direct from the washing machine, as otherwise a large amount of water will have to be carried from this source each wash day. There are various methods of disposing of the water by cesspools. We, however, have had perfect satisfaction from a one and one-quarter inch pipe for about 80 feet and then a three-inch tile for about 200 feet, with a fair fall, and emptying into a tile drain that has quite a flood of water at different times of the year. This empties eventually into a creek. This system has been in actual operation for about four years, and has not given us any trouble.

A small power is a boon to any housewife. A small gasoline engine is quite satisfactory, and the outlay very little. You then have an independent plant, and if a few general principles are observed with regard to the handling of gasoline, you run no danger of accidents. A very little planning will connect the churn and washing machine, other attachments being added as one learns to appreciate them. We have used a 1½ h.p. gasoline engine for over four years for the house alone, and have never known the running expenses of this engine to amount to more than 30 cents per month (outside of batteries, which will be about $1.25 per year).

With the engine installed a few more steps will lead to hot and cold water through the house, with bathroom and fittings. These, of course, will tax both the ingenuity and the pocketbook somewhat heavier, and a septic tank would then be necessary.

A few dollars spent in the way I have mentioned will work wonders and will pay one many times the interest on the outlay and cover running expenses as well. "Life is too sweet and time too short" to follow too far behind our progressive neighbors; rather let us lead.

Two Towers.

Students of architecture may have often wondered why the two towers of Notre Dame at Paris were not of the same size. It appears that when the cathedral was built it was the cathedral of a suffragan bishop, who was not entitled to two towers of equal height, and for centuries the bishop of Paris was suffragan to the bishop of Sens.

GERMANS LOST 60,000 KILLED AND WOUNDED

Shelling Of German Cities Demanded

Germans Hurled Bombs With Deadly Effect

In the Region South-east of Verdun--Non-combatants Killed and Others Frightfully Injured--People Demand Retaliation

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

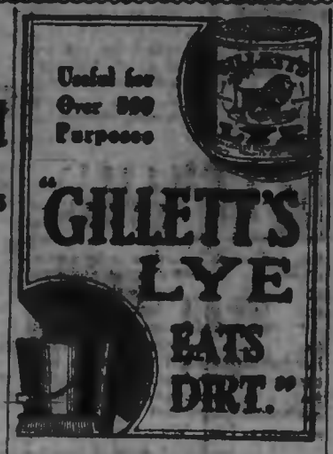
PARIS, Feb. 2.—German aviators hurled bombs with deadly effect in the region south-east of Verdun, according to word received here to-day. One non-combatant was killed near Pont-a-Mousson; a little boy frightfully maimed at Nancy, where an explosive missile dropped in the school yard and a maternity hospital at Remcremont, sixteen miles south-east of Epinal, was slightly damaged.

News of the latest German air raid reached Paris on the heels of an announcement that German Taubes had again successfully bombarded Dunkirk, raining sixty shells upon the seacoast town. It aroused most bitter indignation here.

Paris newspapers voiced the popular demand that the allies' aviators take the aggressive at once and shell German cities in retaliation.

BOMBARDED MANY TOWNS.

The latest German sky raids were executed from Metz. At least six German aviators with observers, crossed the French lines near Pont-A-Mousson and rained bombs upon Nancy, Luneville, Remcrement and other towns within a radius of 75 miles. Low hung clouds protected the biedmen as they crossed the French lines in the woods near Pont-a-Mousson. They first came to view over Pont-a-Mousson as they swooped earthward and began spitting explosives into the streets. No serious damage was done to the town itself, but in one of the suburbs a sixty-six year old man, who failed to hear the cry, "To the cellars," was torn to pieces when a bomb dropped at his feet. At Pont-a-Mousson, one missile exploded in the narrow courtyard of the school a few minutes before the recess period had ended, and two hundred children, playing in the court yard, had filed indoors. A nine year old boy, lingering behind for a few moments, was a German taube's victim, a fragment of a bomb tearing a gaping wound in his leg. The windows of the school were smashed, but no children injured. A crippled engine forced one of the raiders to descend in an open square at Luneville, where he was taken prisoner by French soldiers. Despatches from Remcrement said that only one German aviator visited that town. One bomb crashed to earth at the door of a maternity hospital, but no damage was done. The squadron of six German aviators who paid the latest visit to Dunkirk, dropped both explosive bombs and flaming torches. According to advices from the sea coast town, more than sixty bombs were dropped, with but little damage. The allies' aviators chased the Germans to the Belgian frontier.



German Imperial Family Buy Large Blocks Of New York Bonds

To Preserve Part of Hohenzollern Fortune in the Event of German Disaster—Have Made Heavy Purchases

LONDON, Feb. 2.—The purchase by the German Imperial family of large blocks of New York State bonds, to preserve part of the Hohenzollern fortune in the event of a German disaster, is announced by the Daily Express to-day.

In a telegram from its New York correspondent, the Express says: "Information reaches me from a semi-official source that the Hohenzollern family has made heavy purchases of New York State bonds issued last year for use if the Kaiser or his relatives are compelled to leave Germany. These bonds are for $51,000,000, and cover canal and highway improvements. They bear 4 1-2 per cent. interest." Since then my informant understands large blocks of these bonds of unknown amounts have been transferred to the Hohenzollerns."

Pet Whiskers Pulled, He Asks $5,000 Damages

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—Isaac Kohansky, of Bayonne, has spent twenty years or more in cultivating one of the finest beards in that section. Therefore when a deckhand on a Pennsylvania Railroad ferryboat pulled his beard five times for failure to drive his horse speedily, he believes he is entitled to $5,000 damages, $1,000 for each separate pull.

In his action, filed in the Hudson County Court yesterday, Kohansky states that his beard was damaged beyond repair, that the work and patience of a quarter of a century had been ruined by an angry employee of the railroad.

Each time the deckhand pulled his beard he lost numerous valuable whiskers, he alleges, and these cannot be replaced. He asks a jury to investigate his beard and decide the matter.

IMPORTANT VICTORIES

Petrograd War Office Officially Claims Victories in Poland and in the Carpathians

4,163 PRISONERS

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

PETROGRAD, Feb. 2.—Important victories both in Poland and in the Carpathians were claimed in an official statement from the War Office to-day. The Germans have lost 60,000 in killed, and many more wounded and taken prisoners in attacks west of Warsaw, it was stated. In three days' fighting in the Carpathians, the Russians have taken 4,163 prisoners.

PETROGRAD, Feb. 2.—The battling along the Bzura, west of Warsaw, has cost the Germans heavy losses, it was stated. Heavy artillery tore gaps in the Germans lines, while the infantry was engaged by a force of German sappers, who tunnelled their way nearly 100 yards to the first line of the Russian trenches. By chance the Russian officer discovered at the mouth of the tunnel there was a little group of German who came pouring out. They were made prisoners. Two machine guns were rushed to the mouth of the tunnel and a company of Germans was slaughtered underground. The Russian left, now thirty miles from the Prussian fortress of Thorn, beat back the German drive along the line from Lipno to Dobrzyn, in the Carpathians. Austro-German forces have been unsuccessful in attempting to force their way northward to relieve Przemysl.

A GRANT FOR THE CONVENTION of Medical Health Officers Will Be Considered by the Finance Committee

That between five hundred and a thousand delegates will attend the combined conventions of the health officers of the Province and the Ontario Medical Association, which is to be held in Peterborough on May 25th, 26th, 27th and 28th of this year, was the pronouncement that was made by Dr. G. S. Cameron at last night's meeting of the City Council. Dr. Cameron was one of a deputation that was composed of Doctors McPherson, Amys, Carmichael and R. W. Bell, Provincial Inspector of the Board of Health. The latter formerly resided in Peterborough and is well known to the community generally. He expressed his pleasure at the opportunity of returning to the city and hoped that the City Council would see their way clear to make a substantial grant for the purpose of helping to defray the expenses incurred in holding such a large convention in this city.

Want $400.

Dr. Cameron outlined the nature of the combined conventions and the benefits that might accrue to the city as a result of holding them in this city. It was the first time that they had been held in a city the size of Peterborough, east of Toronto. He named the sum of four hundred dollars as the amount they would like the city to grant. In addition to the delegates that would attend the combined conventions, there would be manufacturers' displays of drugs, surgical instruments, etc., representing the products of American manufacturers. As the production of this class of goods is limited in Canada it might mean that a manufacturer could be induced to locate a branch here.

The matter was referred to the Finance committee.

German Would Not Return Too Well Treated by French

Wounded Prisoner Told How He Had Been Tied to a Tree Nearly All Day for Complaining About Food.

MERVILLE, Feb. 1.—This letter of Captain Edouard Z——— gives a deep impression of the calmness, confidence, firmness, and quietness, which shows the change in the French military soul of our boys. It retains, just the same, the French touch of the former ages. The letter reads:

Taking advantage of a few minutes' rest, I write you before my departure for the trenches, whose comfort becomes less and less pleasant since the cold has apeared in these eastern regions. I know quite well we will have to warm the fire from the enemy, and especially the fire which I expect to send him (not miserly you may trust me). Nevertheless, for us, inhabitants of the lovely country of "mimosas" and roses, it is quite a change. It does not matter much. A little bit of good humour, and the hope we all carry in us to play good tricks on the Germans will prevent us from thinking of our blisters.

In fact, lovely adventures happen when we are face with these genteel Germans. The other day, about five o'clock in the morning, one of these heavy Teutons was bringing coffee to his comrades, but as he was heavy in mind as well as physically, he made a mistake in the selection of the trench — ours is so near theirs — and he came to ours. We were thinking of some bold aggression, so sent him a bullet, which pierced his arm. Very much frightened, the "Boche" threw away his gun and everything, flattened down, and crawling, trembling, came to surrender.

German Officers Ill-treat Men.

Afterwards I asked him questions and told him he had nothing to fear and gave him something to eat. The poor devil for eight days had not had such good cheer, they are so ill-treated. Could you believe that they inflicted on him the following treatment because he dared complain about food: For two hours they tied him to a tree, then gave him one hour rest; then two more hours against the tree, and so on for twelve hours. The same punishment is inflicted on all who dare complain.

It is criminal to use these barbarian proceedings. It was amusing to watch the eyes of our prisoner when he found out with a happy astonishment what care was taken of him. My amused men were exaggerating the care for him to the point of filling his pipe. It was touching!

"Ah," said the "Boche," "if my comrades knew that, every day you would get 50 to 50 prisoners."

I intended to send him back to his friends, but I was obliged to give it up, for he would not consent to it for anything in the world.

Confident of Victory.

It seems now that we cannot meet anything but sad villages with burnt houses, churches with ruined steeples, still keeping up through miracle, and at the mercy of a stormy wind. What does it matter—this will come to an end. We will conquer. For every day we deserve a little more final victory, with our will, with our entire contempt of death, with the smile with which we greet every new misery. What a joy it will be then and how happy we will feel to have suffered.

It is no doubt that the sufferings of the unfortunate soldiers now in the trenches must be terrible, but they do not complain. One of my friends wrote me from a place very near Merville, where he is now in the trenches. "We are a clod of mud. We sleep in the mud, we fight in the mud, and I don't know how I will ever be able to get cleaned up. How soft would seem a bunch of straw to sleep on. But the only comfort we have is to think that the enemy are in the same conditions, and from what I can see, we are well fed and they are not. Then we will keep longer."

Heard From Pierre Schoeler.

In a letter from my friend Pierre Schoeler, quite known among the Toronto wholesale houses, I read the following thing: "Now I have overcome the first horrid feeling caused by the brutal fight and I have come to the point of wishing for the fight. I am sure I will wait long for the realization of my wish."

Pierre Schoeler is now somewhere near La Bassee, but we never know where our friends are, and if at the present moment they are alive or dead. What a horrid time!

BRIDGE BLOWN UP

Eastern Pier of C. P. R. Bridge Over St. Croix River Was Dynamited Early This Morning

A COSTLY STRUCTURE

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

VANCEBORO, Me., Feb. 2—A Canadian Pacific bridge over the St. Croix, N.B., was dynamited early today. The eastern pier of the structure was blown away, the explosion breaking windows in the houses within a radius of a mile. The structure was one of the most costly bridges on the Canadian Pacific. Rumours here state that German sympathizers were responsible.

Montreal, Feb. 2—A report received here to-day from St. Croix, N.B., says a man believed to be a German Officer, was arrested there on suspicion, being connected with the dynamiting of the Canadian Pacific bridge there. This man, it is claimed, is known to have purchased some explosives recently.

To Quickly Remove Ugly Hairs From Face

(Beauty Notes)

Beauty-destroying hairs are soon banished from the skin with the aid of a delatone paste, made by mixing some water with a little plain powdered delatone. This is spread upon the hairy surface for 2 or 3 minutes, then rubbed off and the skin washed to remove the remaining delatone. This simple treatment banishes every trace of hair and leaves the skin without a blemish. Caution should be used to be certain that it is delatone you buy.

The blood must be filtered before you are poisoned. If the kidneys fail the liver is overworked, and becomes torpid. By using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you get both these filtering organs working right, and also ensure healthful action of the bowels. For this reason these pills are an ideal family medicine. They cure biliousness, constipation, auto-intoxication and kidney disease.

"THE BATTLE CRY"

Charles Neville Buck

"If you're lookin' for Luke Thixton, Milt," enlightened the Judge, calmly, "the High Sheriff took him to Louisville yesterday for safe-keepin'."

The answer was a bellow of rage. Old Milt McBriar threw forward his rifle.

Then Anse looked up and spoke slowly, "I reckon it wouldn't profit ye much to harm us, Milt. We ain't armed an' it would bring on a heap of trouble."

Outside rose an angry chorus of voices. The news that the jail was empty was going through the crowd.

For a time the McBriar stood there debating his next step. The town seemed at his mercy. Seemed! That word gave him pause. The way home lay through Havey territory, which might mean twenty ragged miles of solid ambush. Anse Havey sat too quietly for Milt's ease of mind. Was he baiting some fresh trap? It was not like Anse Havey to place himself in an enemy's hands with no recourse planned for the next step.

The old intriguer felt baffled and at sea. He had grown accustomed to weighing and calculating with guileful deliberation. He balked at swift and instinctive action. Moreover, if he debated long, he might not be able to control his men. He inquiringly looked up—to Little Milt, who was fighting the crowd back at the door an locking them outside. Beyond the panels could be heard loud swearing and the impatient shuffling of many feet.

"What shall we do, son?" inquired the older man of the younger. His voice held a note of appeal and breaking power.

When young Milt had ridden out of Peril no feudist in the hills had borne a heart fuller of hatred and hunger for vengeance, but that was because of his father. Now his father was free. For Luke Thixton he had a profound contempt. He saw in the situation only a game of wits in which Anse Havey was winner.

"Well," he said with a grin which he could not repress, "hit looks right smart ter me like thar hain't nothin' to do but ride on back home an' try again next time."

"Ride home an' leave things standin'?" demurred the father, blankly. Already he was reaching the period of his stormy life where he was weary of having to settle every question for himself. He wanted to be able to lean a little on the judgement of someone else.

Young Milt seemed quite philosophical: "I don't hardly reckon we kin take him outen ther Loosyville jail-house, kin we? I reckon they've got ter fotch him back hyar sometime. Let's just bide our time." And in the end of the counsel of the younger generation prevailed.

Outside there had been a short, sharp struggle with a mutinous spirit. These men had come for action, and they did not want to ride back foiled, but the word of Old Milt had stood unchallenged too long to collapse suddenly. Yet he led back a grumbling following and bore a discounted power. They could not forget that a Havey had worsted him.

So the spirit of the men who had come to fight vented itself in yells and random volleys to which there was no reply, and again a train of horsemen were on their way into the hills. When it was all over and Juanita sat there in her empty school she was realising that after all the desperate moment had only been deferred and must come again with absolute certainty. Christmas was only two days off and her gun-rack was empty. When she had come home there had not been a single weapon there.

There would be no Christmas tree now! The be-ribboned packages lay in a useless pile. Had school been ostensibly in session, she knew that the desks would have been as empty as the gun-rack. The whole turtle-like life had drawn in its head and the country-side lay as though besieged.

On Anse Havey's bookshelves were a few new volumes, for Juanita was feeding his scant supply of literature and a softer type of poetry was being added to his frugal and stern repertoire. A number of men left the mountains and went into exile elsewhere. These were the witnesses who must testify against Luke Thixton and whose lives would not have been worth counterfeit money had they remained at home.

Then came Christmas Day itself, black and soggy with the thaw that had set in and a moody dreariness in the sky. The sun seemed to have despaired and made his course spiritlessly from dawn to twilight, crawling dimly across his daily arc.

Brother Anse Talbott came over to the school and found both women sitting apathetically by an untrimmed fir tree, amid a litter of forgotten packages. The children of Tribulation were having the sort of Christmas they had always had—a day of terror and empty cheerlessness.

"It seems like a right-smart pity fer them little shavers ter be plumb teetotally disapp'inted," mused the old preacher, reflectively. "'Spose now ye put names on them gew-gaws an' let me jest sorter ride round an' scatter 'em."

"You dear old Saint!" cried Juanita, suddenly roused out of her apathy. "But you'll freeze to death or get drowned in some ford."

"Thet's all right," he answered briefly. "I reckon I kin go ther route."

It took Good Anse Talbott three days of battle with quicksand and mire to finish that mission. But for three days he grimly rode torrent-flushed trails, the one man who could go unchallenged alike to the houses of McBriars and Haveys. Impartially the ragged and drab-coloured Christmas Saint crossed and recrossed the line which was now a dead-line, pausing to leave cheering trinkets under many dark roofs, and smiling in his bushy beard as he carried away the remembrance of childish smiles. And because at each house he told them that Juanita Holland had sent him, the girl was canonized afresh in hearts, old and young, back in roadless coves and on bleak hillsides.

Once on Christmas Day, Juanita spoke of young Milt an she saw Dawn's face change, from tear-stained distress to hard bitterness.

"I wonder when he's going back to Lexington?" suggested the older girl and the younger, unconsciously lapsing into dialect, flashed quickly at her. "Don't never name him ter me. I hates him! He's a McBriar!"

Later in the day as they stood in the sodden air by the fence young Milt himself rode by and started to draw rein. He slipped one hand into a pocket which was bulging with some sort of package, but Dawn, though her eyes met his in direct gaze, raised her chin and looked through him as tohugh he had no existence.

For an instant the boy's lips moved as if to speak, then they tightened, and without a word he rode on, his shoulders stiff and his own head as high as the girl's had been.

That night, though, when the lad sat moodily in his own room, his hand slipped once more into his pocket. Slowly it came out, bearing a small box. Inside was a gold locket that he had bought in Lexington, and a slender gold chain to support it. He turned the thing over in his hand and looked at it, then he rose and went out of the house and down to the slowly freezing creek and tossed the thing into the inky water.

Every evening found Anse Havey seated before Juanita's earth, studying the flicker of firelight on her face. Every detail of her expression, became to him as something he had always known and worshipped—the little troubled furrow between her brows, the changefulness of her eyes through a varied scale of blue—each of them to his thinking more beautiful than the others — the exquisite chiseling of her lips and the crisp tendril-like curl of the hair on her forehead and neck; these were all things that he saw again when he was alone.

Some day Malcolm would come back and marry her and then — at that point Bad Anse Havey refused to follow his trend of thought further. He only ground his teeth. "Ye damn fool," he told himself, "that ain't no reason why ye shouldn't make the most of to-day. She's right here now, an' she's sun an' moon an' starshine an' music an' sweetness."

She did not know, and he gave her no hint, that in these times, with plots and counter-plots hatching on both sides of the ridge he never made that journey in the night without inviting death. He was walking miles through black woodland trails each evening to relieve for an hour or two her loneliness, and to worship with sealed lips and a rebellious heart.

She accepted his tribute as a thing taken for granted, never looking deep enough into his eyes to read the depth of pain which they mirrored. It was a comfort to have him there, even if for an hour at a time she would seem to forget his presence and gaze at the embers with eyes that told of thoughts wandering far away; and since that was all he could have he accounted it well worth its cost in risk and weariness and made no complaint.

One night as he turned from the hill trail into the road a rifle shot rang out and he heard the zip of a bullet in the naked brush at his back. With ingrained caution he sank out of sight and crouched listening, but his lips broke into a contemptuous smile as the wild shout from the darkness told him that it was only a drunken rider in the night. That, too, he did not mention.

On the night before he was to go to Peril to attend the trial of Luke Thixton, he came with a very full and heavy heart. He knew that it might be a farewell. To-morrow he must put to the touch all his hold on his people and all his audacity of resolution. He stood at the verge of an Austerlitz or a Waterloo, and he had undertaken the thing for no reason except that it had pleased her to command it.

And Her Heart Does Not Bother Her.

Thanks to MILBURN'S Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mrs. J. McLaren, Commanda, Ont., writes us under date of February 9th, 1914. "Sixteen years ago I took bad with my heart and nerves, and was not able to do anything. I tried a good many doctors, but they did me no good; in fact one doctor gave me up to die. I heard about Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and I thought I would give them a trial, and after using a couple of boxes I saw that I was improving. I kept on using them for quite a long time. I am eighty-three years old and my heart does not bother me at all.

"I am raising a little girl who was never very strong, and the doctor said that she had palpitation of the heart, so I started to give them to her. She is now twelve years old, and they are doing her more good than I can possibly tell you. I would advise anyone who has a weak heart to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, as they have done wonders for us."

WOMAN WOULD NOT GIVE UP

Though Sick and Suffering; At Last Found Help in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Richmond, Pa. — "When I started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was in a dreadfully rundown state of health, had internal troubles, and was so extremely nervous and prostrated that if I had given in to my feelings I would have been in bed. As it was I had hardly strength at times to be on my feet and what I did do was by a great effort. I could not sleep at night and of course felt very bad in the morning, and had a steady headache.

"After taking the second bottle I noticed that the headache was not so bad, I rested better, and my nerves were stronger. I continued its use until it made a new woman of me, and now I can hardly realize that I am able to do so much as I do. Whenever I know any woman in need of a good medicine I highly praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound." — Mrs. FRANK CLARK, 2146 N. Tulip St., Richmond, Pa.

Immediate?—Yes? Certain?—that's the joy of it. Your hair becomes light, wavy, fluffy, abundant and appears as soft, lustrous and beautiful as a young girl's after a Danderine hair clease. Just try this —moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt or excessive oil, and in just a few moments you have doubled the beauty of your hair. A delightful surprise awaits those whose hair has been neglected or is scraggy, faded, dry, brittle or thin. Besides beautifying the hair, Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling hair, but what will please you most will be after a few week's use when you see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair growing all over the scalp. If you care for pretty, soft hair, and lots of it, surely get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and just try it.

Prisoners Are Troublesome.

KINGSTON, Ja., Feb. 1.—German prisoners are giving some trouble by attempting to escape. Some have broken camp, but have been recaptured. The authorities are vigilant, but while maintaining discipline, have no desire to be extremely severe. Men who refused to work for the pay offered, have been tried and punished, and one prisoner, while attempting to escape Monday night, was wounded by a sentry. The prisoners who number nearly seven hundred, are being well treated, but made to understand that insubordination will be punished.

In Norwegian Waters.

LONDON, Feb. 1. — The Morning Post has the following from Paris: "The Copenhagen correspondent of Le Temps hears from a trustworthy source that German submarines are cruising in Norwegian waters, contrary to international law. It is believed they have depots in deserted islands farthest away from the coast, and reconnoitered during the manoeuvres held for several years past off the Norwegian coast."

Villa Is Wounded.

EL PASO, Texas, Feb. 1.—Details of the shooting affray in which Gen. Francisco Villa, chief of the army of the north, was wounded, reveal the fact that the bullet inflicting the single wound he received was a stray missile fired during a duel between two of Villa's staff officers. The bullet struck Gen. Villa, near the heart, inflicting a slight flesh wound. The injury is not serious.

Villa has continued his duties, despite he wound.

Cocking-Main Raided.

LONDON, Ont., Feb. 1. — A big cocking main, the second pulled off here within the last few weeks, was rudely interrupted early yesterday morning, when the county police raided a shack at the corner of Adelaide street and the 4th Concession of London Township. Fifteen birds were captured and six others were dead when the police arrived. The names of twenty-two men were taken, and all will appear in the police court to-day.

Paper Has Striking Solution.

LONDON, Feb. 1.—The News, commenting on the submarine raid in the Irish Sea, and the best method of protecting British commerce, says, "In last resort there is the possibility of transferring British merchant vessels to neutral flags. Those who are clamoring for drastic action against the Dacia or for pushing to the extreme the notion of British rights against commerce, would do well to remember their views in the light of the submarine."

Alberta Legislature To Meet?

EDMONTON, Feb. 1.—A rumor is in circulation in the city that a session of the Alberta Legislature will open on Thursday, Feb. 18. It is also rumored that the Legislature will be asked to authorize an increase from four and a half to five per cent. in interest rates on $3,000,000 which the Government has been given power to raise, but which it has been unable to secure up to the present time except at an excessive discount.

Operation Decided On As Only Means of Relief

But the Writer of This Letter Resolved to Try Dr. Chase's Ointment First and Was Cured.

This is not an isolated case, for we frequently hear from people who have been cured of piles by using Dr. Chase's Ointment after physicians had told them nothing short of an operation could bring relief and cure.

MR. BEAUVAIS.

If you could read these letters, coming as they do, day after day and year after year, you would realize what a wonderful curative agent Dr. Chase's Ointment really is. Few ailments are more annoying or more persistently torturing than piles, and when this suffering is promptly relieved by the application of Dr. Chase's Ointment there can be no doubt as to where credit is due. Friends and neighbors are told of the results and so the good word spreads, and Dr. Chase's Ointment is becoming known far and wide as the only actual cure for piles or hemorrhoids.

Mr. Charles Beauvais, a respected citizen of St. John's, Que., writes:—"For 14 years I suffered from chronic piles or hemorrhoids, and considered my case very serious. I was treated by a well-known physician who could not help me, and my doctor decided on an operation as the only means of relief. However, I resolved to try Dr. Chase's Ointment first. The first box brought me great relief, and by the time I had used three boxes I was completely cured. This is why it gives me such great pleasure to recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment to everybody suffering from hemorrhoids as a preparation of the greatest value."

BRONCHITIS

If Neglected Will Surely Turn Into PNEUMONIA.

Bronchitis comes from a neglected cold. It starts with a short, painful, dry cough, accompanied with rapid wheezing, and a feeling of oppression or tightness through the chest. At first the expectoration is of a light color, but soon becomes copious and of purulent character.

You have, no doubt, wakened up in the morning and have had to cough half a dozen times before you could raise the phlegm from your bronchial tubes, and when you do succeed in doing so you find that it is of yellowish or greenish color, and you get some relief right away. When this happens to you, you may rest assured that you have a touch of bronchitis, and if not cured immediately it will sooner or later develop into pneumonia or some other more serious trouble.

Cure the cold, and thereby prevent bronchitis and pneumonia taking a hold on your system.

This can be quickly done by the use of

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP.

Mrs. Rebecca Have, Mahone Bay, N.S., writes: "My little boy, aged six, was always troubled with bronchitis, and when he had whooping cough he was worse. Doctors advised me to use Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. It gave him instant relief, and positively cured him."

MILITARY STRATEGY.

Why More Is Gained by Wounding Than by Killing an Enemy.

In a letter to the Army and Navy Journal a retired army officer says that no intelligent soldier will fire a dumdum or an explosive bullet at the enemy, for they both kill.

The object of the rifleman is not to kill an enemy, but to wound him. "A dead man is simply one soldier lost from his army. He is not a burden to any one. A wounded soldier must be taken care of. Four wounded soldiers must have an ambulance with two horses and an able-bodied soldier driver.

"Thirty wounded soldiers must have a surgeon, a hospital steward and ten or a dozen able bodied soldiers to aid the doctor and wait upon and nurse the wounded men. The ambulances block the roads and delay the troops, especially the artillery and the supply wagons.

"When a man is hurt every one is anxious to get him at once to a doctor. If the troops on the firing line are not well disciplined and a soldier is wounded there will be three or four soldiers who are willing and anxious to carry him to the rear.

"For every soldier wounded the firing line loses four soldiers, and a hundred men wounded means that 400 men are lost to the firing line, for they never rejoin their regiments until the battle is over."

His Bad Handwriting.

Dean Farrar in his "Reminiscences" says that the first proofs of Dean Stanley's "Sinai and Palestine" informed the reader that from the monastery of Sinai was visible "the form of the burning beast!" This was a fearfully dyspeptic nightmare of the printer's devil for "the thirteen of the burning bush." The original proof sheets also stated that on turning the shoulder of Mount Olivet in the walk from Bethany "there suddenly burst upon the spectator a magnificent view of—Jonas!" In this startling sentence "Jonas" was the transmogrification of "Jerus," the dean's abbreviated way of writing "Jerusalem." When the dean answered an invitation to dinner his hostess has been known to write back and inquire whether his note was an acceptance or a refusal.

The Postal Card Rage at Washington.

About the first thing that a visitor in Washington decides to do is to get a full supply of postal cards to send home. Many have inquired who first set the fashion. At the postoffice the other day it was revealed that the first postcards ever issued in the world were sent out from Austria in 1869, following a suggestion made in 1865. Professor Herman of Vienna is the saint on whom the postoffice clerks visit their benisons when they find difficulty in handling the sheaves of postcards coming in all the year around.—National Magazine.

High Life.

Up to a short time ago it was believed that the highest human habitation was a Buddhist convent in Tibet, where twenty-one monks devote their lives to the adoration of Buddha at an altitude of some 16,000 feet above sea level. It has been established lately, however, that a colony of mine laborers engaged in working tin and bismuth mines on Mount Choroique, province of Chiches, Bolivia, are living in a settlement more than 17,000 feet above sea level.

A Dying Island.

An island in Puget sound near Vancouver, B. C., about twenty miles in circumference, is apparently dying from old age. Last summer it was observed that every fir and cedar tree on the island was dead. Near the water's edge vegetation seemed withered, and thin vapor hung over the island all day. There is not a living thing on the island. Not even a crow rests upon the topmost branches of the now dead firs.

Well, She Owned Him.

A woman mounted the step of a car carrying an umbrella like a reversed saber.

The conductor touched her lightly, saying, "Excuse me, madam, but you are likely to put out the eye of the man behind you."

"He's my husband," she snapped, with the tone of full proprietorship.

Quickest, Surest Cough Remedy is Home-Made

Quickly Prepared in a Few Minutes. Cheap but Unequaled

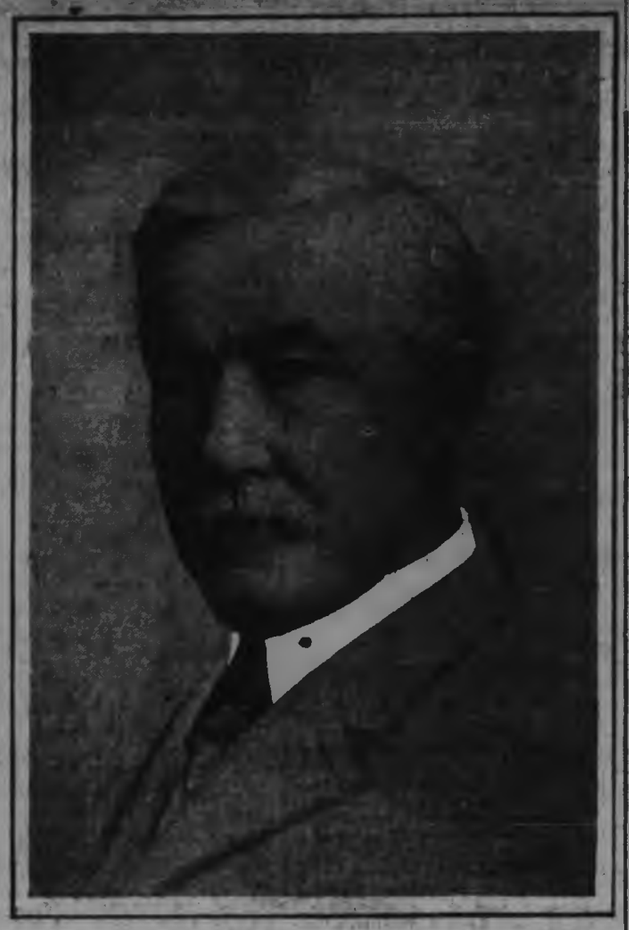
Some people are constantly annoyed from one year's end to the other with a persistent bronchial cough, which is wholly unnecessary. Here is a home-made remedy that gets right at the cause and will make you wonder what became of it.

Get 2½ ounces Pinex (50 cents worth) from any druggist, pour into a 16-ounce bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Start taking it at once. Gradually but surely you will notice the phlegm thin out and then disappear altogether, thus ending a cough that you never thought would end. It also loosens the dry, hoarse or tight cough and heals the inflammation in a painful cough with remarkable rapidity. Ordinary coughs are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, whitter coughs and bronchial asthma.

This Pinex and Sugar Syrup mixture makes 16 ounces—enough to last a family a long time—at a cost of only 54 cents. Keeps perfectly and tastes pleasant. Easily prepared. Full directions with Pinex.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, rich in guaiacol, and is famous the world over for its ease, certainty and promptness in overcoming bad coughs, chest and throat colds.

Get the genuine. Ask your druggist for "2½ ounces Pinex," and do not accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.



Mr. James W. Leonard

MR. LEONARD, who on February 1st takes up his duties as head of the Toronto Terminal Company at Toronto, relinquishes his position as assistant to the Vice-President of the Canadian Pacific, which he occupied for four years. He was born at Epsom, in Ontario, named after the famous English racecourse village. All his life Mr. Leonard has been connected with railroads, which service he entered in 1872. Mr. Leonard became a telegraph operator and was agent of the Midland Railway of Canada. In August, 1877, he was transferred to the Victoria Railway as agent. In 1878 he became the Assistant Manager of that railway and held that position until March, 1880, when he was appointed Assistant to General Superintendent of the Credit Valley Railway, which was subsequently incorporated with the Canadian Pacific, and his services have been entirely with this company since that date. During that time Mr. Leonard witnessed rapid development in Canadian railroad history, and saw the first transcontinental train cross the Dominion.

In June, 1880, he was appointed General Passenger Agent of the Credit Valley Railway, and in November, 1883, became Manager of Transportation of the Ontario & Quebec Railway, which now forms an important link in the Canadian Pacific Railway System.

In May, 1884, he was appointed Superintendent for the C. P. R., and held that position until March, 1893, when he was appointed General Superintendent of the Ontario & Quebec Divisions. In May, 1901, he was transferred to the West as General Superintendent of the Western Division. In March, 1903, he went to the Central Division, being the line between Port Arthur, Pasqua and Estevan. After holding this position until April 15th, 1903, he was appointed Assistant General Manager of all the Company's lines west of Lake Superior.

In June, 1903, he returned to the East and was appointed Manager of Construction. During his tenure of this position, what is now known as the Short Line to Ottawa was constructed. In October, 1905, he became Assistant General Manager of the Eastern Lines, being promoted in March 1st, 1907, to General Manager of Eastern Lines, and on January 9th, 1911, he was appointed Assistant to the Vice-President at Montreal, and now retires from operation work with a long and faithful record to his credit.

A Short Lived Race.

The average duration of life is shorter in New Guinea than in any other country, possibly owing to the peculiar diet affected by the natives, who devour with gusto the larvae of beetles, dug out of decayed tree trunks, and habitually drink sea water when near the coast. "The people die off at about forty," we are told in Mr. A. E. Pratt's "Two Years Among the New Guinea Cannibals." "We saw one very old man, who may have been about sixty years of age—the only example of longevity that we came across. He was bent almost double and had a long, white beard. His fellow tribesmen regarded him as a great curiosity, and brought him to see us. Despite the decrepitude of his body, however, there was no trace of senility. His senses were unimpaired, and the poor old creature showed great gratitude for a gift of tobacco."

The Chimera.

The chimera was a fabulous monster with a lion's and a goat's head, a serpent's tail and a goat's middle, which inhabited the dreadful mountain of Lycia, in Greece, and defended itself against attack by vomiting flames of fire. It was at last conquered by Bellerophon, the god of war, who mounted it on the famous horse Pegasus. The strange combination of the form of the chimera was evolved from the fact that the terrible Lycia was partly a burning mountain, with here and there a desolate wilderness, the resort of lions, and occasionally a few fertile spots where goats did congregate, while at the foot of the great hill was a swamp infested with snakes. From this curious creation of superstition sprung the origin of the word "chimera," in designation of an idle fancy or a foolish creation of the brain.

Naval Stores.

Answering the question, "What is the derivation of the term 'naval stores' (applied to rosin, turpentine, etc.) and why are they so called?" the New York Sun says:

"It seems odd that the change from the stately frigates of our navy to mere machinery pavops so long established that the meaning of naval stores is perishing. When fleets maneuvered under canvas the prime stores of the navy were tar, pitch and turpentine, famous products of North Carolina, therefore in all propriety naval stores. The modern fighting ship has no rigging to be tarred down and hands to tar. Her decks are caulked with a pneumatic riveter and need no pitch, hot or cold, no matter what may be to pay. But the name outlasts the use."

Baggage Insurance.

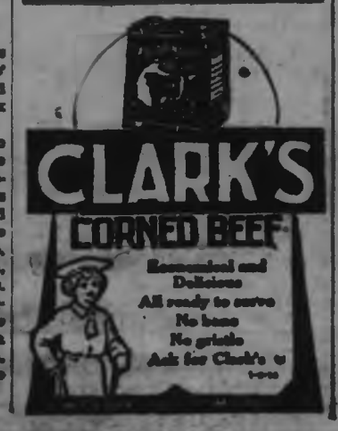
This is a modern business age wherein a pianist may insure his fingers, a dancer may insure her ankles or a man with important business on hand may be indemnified against late arrival of a passenger train which failed to convey him to a certain point in time to close an important deal involving millions. But there is still a new kind of indemnity, and not Lloyd's either. It is the mere insurance of your personal belongings while traveling, and this very latest idea is through a system of tourists' baggage tickets. A traveler bound anywhere can insure his baggage for a short period as readily as he can get personal accident insurance to cover the perils of the journey.—New York Tribune.

LOCOMOTOR ATAXIA.

"My nerves were very bad, and I could not sleep at night, nor could I control my arms or legs," writes Mrs. Robt. Bustard, Maxwell, N.B. "Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cured me of what I believe was the early stage of locomotor ataxia or paralysis. I cannot describe what I suffered, but now I am entirely cured."

Cheese Toast.

Allow as many thin slices of stale bread as will be used at the meal. For six slices allow half a cupful of grated dry cheese (not too dry). In a saucepan melt and mix together one large tablespoonful of butter, two tablespoonfuls of flour, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt and a dash of pepper. Stir in gradually one pint of hot milk, making a smooth paste. Keep hot at the side of the fire. Toast the bread nicely. Stir the cheese into the sauce and as soon as melted pour over the buttered toast. Cover a moment that it may soak; then serve.—Boston Post.



ISLAND OF CYPRUS.

Once Famed For Its Forests, It Has Had a Stirring History.

Cyprus is an island in the Mediterranean which has figured largely in the history of Europe. Famed in antiquity for its forests, today, except for the pine woods on the summits of its historic mountain, it is largely bare and treeless. From Egypt came monarchs to find timber for their fleets, and from Athens and Rome men to work its rich copper mines. The Apostle Paul visited Cyprus in his first great missionary journey, and Mark went there later with Barnabas.

At the division of the Roman empire Cyprus went to the Byzantine emperors. In the twelfth century England took the island and sold it to the Knights Templars, who in turn sold it to the king of Jerusalem. In 1570 the Turks sent 60,000 men against Cyprus. Nicosia, its capital, was taken after a forty-five day siege, and 20,000 people were put to the sword. In 1878 England and Turkey entered into an agreement whereby Turkey retained sovereignty over the island, while England took charge of its administration.

Cyprus is 148 miles long, from forty to fifty miles wide and is about 3,600 square miles in area, with a fertile plain separating northern and southern mountain ranges. The island produces copper, gold, silver, asbestos, gypsum, red jasper, cotton, wheat, barley, tobacco, silk and fruits. Wine is its best known product. The water supply is meager, but the climate is healthy.—National Geographic Society's Bulletin.

Women In English Banks.

In at least three great London banks women have found employment for the last twenty years, and in one of these, where there is a large business done in foreign loans, about 30 or 40 women are occupied in sorting, listing, checking and canceling the coupons. This work is subsidiary to that of men, who handle the coupons in the first and last instance. In the Bank of England there are about 60 women employed in connection with the sorting up and listing and agreeing of old paid bank notes and during the last year in the inspection of new bank notes from the printing machines. The Bank of England also employs women at typing and shorthand writing.

A very high standard of courtesy is expected from a bank clerk. This attitude of mind is said on competent authority to be difficult for women; while they continually exact respect from their male official inferiors, they do not always show it to their male official superiors. Women find a difficulty in rising to speak to a male head of a department; they are too mindful of their sex even when at work. And this charge is made with the cognizance that their work itself is as good and their capacity as great as that of men who might be engaged on similar duties. But they have not the official temperament.

How Many?

Dr. Henry Coward, the well-known lecturer on music, tells a story of his early days concerning a quartette which he organised among warehouse workers in an English city. He approached a showman who was visiting the district, and suggested to him that a party of singers would be an attraction to his show.

"Kin they sing?" asked the showman.

"Yes, very well."

"Have they dress suits? Them's necessary."

"Yes."

"How much will it cost for such an engagement?"

"Five shillings each per night, I think, will do it."

"I know," said the entertainer; "but how much will it cost? How many are there in this 'ere quartette?"

Even the Judge Doomed.

Less than a century ago the morals of Sydney, New South Wales, were dubious. The following illustrative anecdote is told by Tighe Hopkins in his book "The Romance of Fraud:"

A negro had come to the colony in some gentleman's service. For years he had been the best of blacks, but in Sydney he robbed his master. At his trial he was asked by the judge if he could produce a witness as to character. No, he said sadly, he could not. "No, massa. Poor Jacsho no character now. When Jaccho came a Tidney Jaccho berry good nass. Jaccho a rogue now. All rogue in Tidney. Bimeby, massa judge a rogue too!"

The Nobel Prizes For This Year.

A statement just published by the managers and trustees of the Nobel foundation shows that the five winners of the Nobel prizes for the year 1910 will each receive, in addition to the decoration, a money prize of about $38,000. The fund consists of 33,729,608 kronen, about $9,107,018. According to a provision in the deed of gift, 10 per cent of the income must be returned to the fund and about 25 per cent of the remainder is set aside for taxes, expenses incurred by members of the various juries in the discharge of their duties, etc. "But for these drafts on the fund," says the report, "the five prizes for 1910 would each be greater by about 60,000 kronen."

Measuring Memory.

Attempts have been made from time to time in France to "measure memory." One of the experiments consists in reading a series of figures to the subject at a regular speed of about two per second and observing how many he can repeat without error in the order in which they were given. The faculty of voluntary attention is, of course, called into play by this experiment. Children from six to eight years old retain on the average five figures, children ten years old six figures and adults seven figures. It has been ascertained that Jacques Inaudi, the lightning calculator, can retain more than forty figures.—Harper's Weekly.

"I HAD ECZEMA BUT-"

Mrs. Elgin Cossett, Joggin Bridge, N.S., says:—"When my little daughter was five months old a rash broke out on her face and body. I called in a doctor, who stated that it was eczema, and treated her for it. His treatment, however, did not bring any relief, and the child got worse. I then tried a great many salves and so-called eczema cures, but nothing proved of any benefit. The sores continued to spread, and became one large mass. One day a friend advised me to try Zam-Buk.

"At that time the disease had defied all remedies for over a year. By the time I had used one box of Zam-Buk there was a marked improvement. I continued the Zam-Buk treatment and day by day the sores showed signs of improvement. Finally Zam-Buk banished every trace of the disease."

For the tender delicate skin of babies, nothing equals Zam-Buk. Unlike other ointments, it is purely herbal.

Use Zam-Buk for cuts, burns, bruises, eczema, piles, cold sores, chapped hands, and all skin diseases and injuries. At all druggists and stores, 50c box.

BIG EATERS GET KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts at First Sign of Bladder Irritation or Backache

The American men and women must guard constantly against Kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out, they weaken from overwork, become sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage, and belongs in every hom, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

POLAND'S AREA TOO SMALL FOR RUSSIA'S VAST FORCE

Withdrawal to the Bug and Brest—Lomza Suggested as Better Field For a Great Enveloping Movement by the Grand Duke Nicholas

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

WARSAW, Feb. 2.—Far better than either at Petrograd or Moscow one gets here an impression of Russia's enormous military strength. Every day her soldiers stream through this city, types of a dozen nations. Through the city they pour, crowding the Vienna station and the Praga; through the streets they march, Russians, Little Russians, Poles, Balts, Lithuanians, Letts, Ests, Georgians, Caucasus, Tartars, Circassians, Turkomans, Finno-Tartar races from the Volga and Cossacks, who count as a nation as well as a cavalry branch.

They give the impression of millions, for to the untrained eye a single army corps looks like a million. Sometimes there is a lull, and then one imagines that the millions have come to an end. Then more come, Buriats and Tshuvaches. And one reads that the Khan of Khiva himself wants to serve with his bodyguard. With Russia it is as with Britain and her Indian princes.

How many Russia has in the field one is not permitted to say, but one thing is certain, Russia under no circumstances lacks trained men. The trouble is to get a battlefield big enough for the hosts which can be brought west. Poland, which is only 250 miles from north to south, and inclosed by hostile territory, is not such a battlefield. If the Grand Duke Nicholas abandoned Warsaw and retired on the Bug and Brest-Litovsk, his chances to use present and potential resources is a vast enveloping movement might be better than they appear now.

More Men on the Way.

More men will come. There is an enormous number of trained men of military service age who have not yet been put in the field. There is, further, an enormous number of trained men slightly over the age of compulsion, who have passed finally from the "Opoltcheniye" into private life, but are, nevertheless, for special reasons fit and willing to serve. Here Russia beats Germany. "Landsturm" men nearing forty-five are spoiled by factory or clerical life, and German volunteers of more than that age are mostly not worth feeding. Russia has two million trained men who have passed compulsory service age and who are still fit. Peasant life makes for fitness, hardiness and long life.

Here is one instance, narrated to me by General Petrieff. A group of four communes near Yenesseisk, in Siberia, was due to supply 450 reservists. At the office of the "Natchalnik (chief local army administrator) 540 turned up. The extra ninety men were over who wanted to volunteer. They feared that some of the 450 would fail to turn up in time owing to bad roads. The communes appealed to the ninety overaged but healthy men to volunteer. These volunteers showed their fitness by challenging the younger men to a wood-chopping competition.

The number of men whom Russia could put in the field is no secret. It is given in reliable textbooks as 12,500,000. That is the number of men who have served three years or more and who have not yet passed out of the "Opoltcheniye" reserve. The same textbooks give Russia's first strength on complete mobilisation as 5,000,000. It follows that 7,500,000 trained men remain to make up for waste. It would take time to equip and uniform these men and the older classes would need some weeks' training. But that is no obstacle, as the men are not wanted in a hurry. There are as many men already in the theatre of war west of this city as can profitably be used and fed. All that is wanted is to equip the seven and a half millions at sufficient pace to make up for waste.

Large Percentage Recover.

This can easily be done, as the waste is much less than is believed. Surgeon Danilo, who is compiling statistics from the Third and Sixth Army Corps, says that two-thirds of the wounded can return to the front within three months and two-thirds within five months. As the dead count only a fifth of the total losses, it follows that the irrecoverable wastage is small in proportion to the vast numbers engaged. Of 800,000 wounded men — a rough guess—400,000—the strength of ten corps—will return.

In addition to trained men, Russia has 15,000,000 untrained men of good physique under forty-five years old. In a war lasting years these could be trained. Probably, however, the Grand Duke Nicholas will prefer to take the "Colonials." These are a semi-military element to be found only here and in the British world-Empire. They are men who are born and bred to arms, good shots, marvellous horsemen, of combative character. They want only drilling in units—the easiest part of military training— to turn them into soldiers. There are the Caucasian races, the Khirghises, Turcomans, Mocharists. The Emir of Bochara has just offered the Grand Duke 30,000 horsemen who are first rate with carbine, sword and lance. This offer has been declined, because the trouble is not lack of men. It is not desired to congest the narrow Polish battlefield with more men than the limited railway and road system will feed.

Military Academies Busy.

With regard to the maintenance of the supply of officers and "non-coms," General Petroff said that at present, despite still losses, there was no lack of commissioned officers. But provision is being made for the future. Nearly twenty-five hundred young men from the universities and high schools are to be transferred to the military academies, and General Petroff assures me that ten thousand officers a year can be turned out during the next three years.

A gratifying feature is that here, as in England, young men of birth, means and leisure are first to hurry to the colours. This in Russia is a more pleasing surprise than in England, where the sporting, adventurous type has always prevailed. Until this war the young aristocrats of Russia were artistic and sedentary. Now many thousands of young nobles who never did military service are hurrying to the front. Within a week of the declaration of war six princes of the famous house of Galitzine volunteered. From past pupils of the Ecole de Droit, the chief Petrograd School of Jurisprudence, four hundred men have volunteered. The "Eton of Russia, 'the Alexander Lyceum, has sent three hundred. In the Semionovsky Guards regiment, which so distinguished itself in Galicia, are four volunteers who are sons of Ministers or one-time Ministers. Nearly all the Ambassadors have sons or nephews at the front. Middle class men are bringing as volunteer offerings the technical skill which is so necessary for a modern army.

Thus Russia is witnessing a mobilisation of all her intellectual and technical resources. Whatever the outcome of battle, lack of trained men can never compel her to make peace. Given money and time, 20,000,000 men might be put in the field—not all at once, but in a sufficiently steady sequence to wear down the enemy.

Exonerated.

A Pennsylvania lawyer known throughout the state for his sharpness once died his mouth in a very unexpected quarter.

An old woman was being cross-examined by him as to how the terrible head injured which he made a remark to his opponent about minors.

"I don't remember. He's been dead three years," the unnerved lady.

"Do you mean to tell the court your memory is so bad that you cannot go back three years?" demanded the attorney.

The witness was silent.

"Will he look anything like me?" the lawyer finally ventured.

"Indeed no sir, he did have the same sort of vacant look," responded the old lady.

LITTLE THINGS THAT MAKE ONE HAPPY

Alice A. Ferguson, York Co., Ont.

It is the little things that go to make up the sum total of life. Whether our life will be glad or sad depends on how we view the little things. If our eyes are open for defects, faults and blemishes, then life will be dark and dreary, a sort of chill, rainy day. If we fret because the door stands open one minute too long, letting in draught or flies, or because someone has carelessly brought in mud, or failed to notice the empty water pail or coal scuttle, for, perhaps,—worst of all—dinner is waiting, and all are not ready, and angry tones of the long list of little things, then care sits upon the brow, fruitfulness lurks in the voice, and discomfort is heavy in the atmosphere.

But these things are made weights to weigh us down. Happy is the soul who rises above these petty annoyances, finds so many things to be thankful for, and brings a sunshiny atmosphere with her.

"Like begets like"—one fretful person in the household spoils the atmosphere for all. One bright, merry soul may make the whole family happy, and lift the weight of care from heavy, burdened hearts.

Children are the truest precious of the little things which make life happy. "Happy is the man who has his quiver full of them." They bring joy with them, to lighten the responsibility of their up-bringing. They should be a comfort and a renewer of youth.

Then, in the home, there are the twin bears—bear and forbear. It requires a lot of grace to live with anyone of us for a long time. As all human nature has frailties, we must make allowance for them,—look below the surface, for the best of motives; trust when we cannot see, and attribute the best of reasons for things we cannot understand.

Then, again, make much of the nice things that are done or said; make a point of thanking each person who does some thoughtful act. If the wood is cut just right, let the man or boy know it, and that you are pleased. It will be cut up quit you after that. If the water pails are filled without your asking, notice it brightly and thankfully. If the man carves the meat to your liking, compliment him. Try not to notice blunders, but applaud the kindnesses.

In the same way, the man of the house shows his appreciation of his wife's cooking. He knows she wants to keep things neat and clean, and so he tries to be careful. He, too, is tactful, overlooking slices, and making much of victuals. The bright morning greeting helps to begin the day right. The bright good-night fittingly closes it. The smile of welcome, the bright recognition when we meet during the day, all help to make the day brighter—the life happier.

Again—mutual interest in each other's undertakings, helps much to make life happy. It is hard to work when you feel there is opposition to your plan. But when there is hearty cooperation, then work is a joy, to carry out our cherished plans is a pleasure.

Above all—let Love have her gentle rule. "If you have a friend worth loving, love him, yes, and let him know you love him; that will be a strong factor in making life happy—not only in the loving, but in the letting him know you love him. "Love lightens labor."

If we look for and make the most of the best that is in those we live with, if we exercise tact, do little thoughtfulnesses, show appreciation—forbear things in love—these little things will make life one short, happy round.

"Our Father"

"Our Father which art in heaven." —Matt. 6, 9.

How well Christ understood when He began His people's prayer, with these blessed words! This prayer ever since then has been repeated by countless thousands of all ages, from the time when it is first lisped after the mother, till the last, when it is repeated with faltering lips.

It was not "My Father," which he could have said, but "Our Father," meaning the great and the lowly, the rich and the poor, the old and the young, all nationalities and all creeds the wide world over. It is sad and strange that some seem to think that they alone are included, while others are outcasts and alleas.

The word Father suggests all that an ideal, earthly father would be, wise, strong, tender, patient, forgiving, loving. Often, so often, through the days of childhood and youth, the foolish and the harmful are longed for and asked for, when the wise father has to say "No." Just so the Father above has often to refuse His earthly children from youth to old age.

In the street car just to-day, a tall, well-built man came in with a little one in his arms. He held it close and firm, and the child had never a fear. Secure and strong are the Heavenly Father's arms around us, now, all the time; the heavier the trials, the deeper the sorrows, the closer and more tenderly they encircle us.

Constantly through life, the earthly Father has to exercise patience and forgiveness with the wayward child.

In spite of all our sinning and failing our Father in Heaven is always forgiving and loving us.

Thus the words are, "Our Father in Heaven." The word Heaven implies more than our finite minds can possibly grasp or understand.

The Father is there—knows what is best for us, understands what we have to bear, loves us, whatever we are, just as much more than a father on earth can, as the heavenly, the eternal, the infinite is above our knowledge and comprehension. —I.H.N. —Farm and Dairy.

Don't put in another day of distress. Let Cascarets cleanse your stomach; remove the sour, fermenting food; take the excess bile from your liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels. Then you will feel great.

A Cascaret to-night straightens you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from any drug store means a clear head, sweet stomach and clean, healthy liver and bowel action for months. Children love Cascarets because they never gripe or sicken.

Care of the Wounded in Battle.

When the chief surgeon of the field is making arrangements for the collection of wounded during an impending battle he always bears in mind the fact that there will be wounded in the different numbers at different stages of it. Of course, he sees that the most efficient ambulance service is given where the losses are heaviest. To this end in making arrangements, he knows exactly what the losses in these various "areas" as they are called, will work out at.

At a range of 1,800 yards he knows that about 20 per cent of the men engaged will be wounded, while between 1,800 and 400 yards as high a proportion as 40 are liable to be wounded. Only a comparatively small number of the soldiers who take part in the last "great, glorious rush" are wounded, however, 20 per cent being the proportion, while somewhere about the same percentage of men are wounded during the pursuit of a retreating army, when men flee.

Life of the Farmer.

I think that the life of a husbandman of all others is the most delightful. It is healthful, it is ennobling, and with judicious management it is profitable.

In indulging these feelings I am led to reflect how much more delightful to the undebauched mind is the task of making improvements on the earth than all the validity that can be acquired from ravaging it by the most uninterrupted career of conquest.

I know of no pursuit in which more real and important pleasure can be rendered to any country than by improving its agriculture, its breed of useful animals and other triumphs of a husbandman's care.—Country Gentleman.

Princess Pats Fight Brilliantly

Capture German Trench In Counter Attack

CANADIAN REGIMENT BEAR BRUNT OF FRENCH ATTACK

Late Despatches From the Front Say That the Pats Hurled the Enemy Back With Severe Losses West of La Bassee and Then Carried Through a Successful Counter Attack—Belgian Positions Are Bombarded.

A LULL IN THE FIGHTING IN THE LAST 24 HOURS

SPECIAL CABLE:

PARIS, February 2.—The Princess Patricias, Canada's crack regiment, bore the brunt of another furious German charge west of Labassee, according to French despatches from the front of the battle line today. The Canadians fought brilliantly, hurling the enemy back with severe losses; then they counter-attacked and captured a position along the canal to Bethune, which was occupied by the Germans in last week's fighting.

The renewal of the bloody infantry engagement between Labassee and Bethune, and the violent cannonading of the Belgian positions near Ypres, were the principal features in to-day's despatches from the front. The advices said that the Germans who were beaten off in an infantry attack near Ypres at daylight yesterday, are now shelling the Belgian trenches. Another series of infantry charges is expected. The French shells set fire to the German supply station near Noyon. Along the Aisne, French gunners have silenced several German batteries and effectually broke up sporadic infantry charges. Slight progress has been made in the Perthes region. Elsewhere there has been a lull in the fighting during the last 24 hours.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—The United States Government will act in the case of the German officer named Horner, under arrest to-day, at Vanceboro, Maine, charged with attempting to blow up the Canadian Pacific Railway bridge crossing to Canadian territory.

It develops that the C.P.R. bridge was not destroyed, although dynamite was exploded under the pier on the Canadian side of the river. Train service has been resumed. The German officer under arrest is said to have confessed to his guilt.

Van Horne was taken into custody at the Page Hotel by Deputy Sheriff George W. Ross. He admitted that he was guilty of dynamiting the structure. According to an officer Horne is alleged to have declared that he tried to wreck the bridge, "because it was within his rights to do so." He said that he was an officer in the German army. A German flag and a chart of this section were found in his pockets. He stated that he came here from New York last Friday.

BLOW TRUMPETS TO WARN PARIS

PARIS, Feb. 1.—The government this afternoon issued notice to the inhabitants of Paris that hereafter the approach of Zeppelins or hostile airships would be signalled by the blowing of the trumpets of the Fire Department. When the sound of trumpets are heard the residents are warned to get under cover. If the raid is at night all the lights must be extinguished at once. It is plain that an aerial raid is anticipated.

Another notice strikes a cheerier note, as the government orders all men capable of acting as interpreters of German to report for examination before the 15th February.

Moreover the latest bulletins announce that the British have retaken all trenches and ground lost at Labassee after a series of counter-attacks in which the bayonet played a brilliant part, inflicting heavy losses on the Germans.

TORONTO, Feb. 2.—The Star's war expert, commenting on the news from Petrograd to-day, says:

"Good news that may become glorious news is to hand to-day from the eastern arena. The Russians have broken across the Vistula river, torn up the railway on which the Germans opposite Warsaw are largely dependent for their supplies and outflanked the main force in Poland. They have but to hold their advantage to compel the retirement of a great force that is furiously dashing itself against the outer defences of the the Polish capital. By pressing their advantage they may gain a great victory."

HANDSOME FLAG PRESENTED TO THE COUNCIL

By Mrs. Peter Downham in Memory of Her Late Husband and in Honour of the Peterborough Boys Who Have Volunteered for Active Service

A WORTHY GIFT

The mural decorations of the City Council Chamber have been enhanced by a handsome silk flag and a brass shield that was presented by Mrs. Peter Downham at last night's meeting of the City Council. The presentation was made by Rev. Canon Davidson in memoriam of Mrs. Downham's late husband, and in honour of the young men of Peterborough who have volunteered for active service in defence of the Empire. Mrs. Downham visited Quebec and vicinity last fall, while the men were encamped at Valcartier and was deeply impressed with the expressions of regard that were given, relative to the Peterborough contingent. This, together with the fact that the history of Mrs. Downham's family is closely associated with affairs military, prompted the presentation of the flag to the city. Both of Mrs. Downham's grandfathers served for twenty-one years, and their descendants are still in the army. A number of Mrs. Downham's relatives and those of her late husband are also fighting for the allies; therefore her gift to the city is inspired by practical patriotism.

In presenting the flag to the city on behalf of Mrs. Downham, Rev. Canon Davidson said that it would be a reminder to other wealthy citizens to make public gifts for the public welfare. He paid a glowing tribute to the late Mrs. Nichols and in conclusion asked the City Council to accept the gift out of respect to the late Peter Downham and in honour of those who had offered their services on behalf of the British Empire. In reply His Worship Mayor Buller thanked Mrs. Downham for the magnificent gift, characterizing it as being especially appropriate during the stormy period through which the Empire is passing.

The Council then rose in a body and sang the National Anthem.

The Shield.

The brass shield which accompanies the flag, bears the following inscription:

Presented to the City of Peterborough
by
Margaret A. Downham,
In memory of her husband,
Peter Downham.

A native of Yorkshire, England,
Who died at Peterborough, Ontario,
the 25th day of June, A.D., 1910,
December, 1914,
A good citizen of the Dominion and a loyal subject of the King.

On motion of Aldermen Johnston and McIntyre it was moved that the thanks of the Council be tendered to Mrs. Downham for her contribution of the Union Jack to the City of Peterborough, and also for the shield, in memory of her late husband, Peter Downham.

The appreciation of the Council was also tendered to Rev. J. C. Davidson, who so ably, on behalf on Mrs. Downham, presented the same to the city.

Leader of the British Opposition Takes the View That He May Do So If National Interest Demands It

LATE NEWS ITEMS

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, Feb. 2.—Bonar Law, leader of the Opposition, served notice when parliament reassembled to-day, that the Opposition took the view that it was perfectly free to criticize the government's war policy at any time if national interest demanded it. He added, however, that the Opposition had no present desire to indulge in such criticism.

Premier Asquith answered that the government already had communicated some diplomatic and other matters to the Opposition. The Prime Minister, however, said that the responsibility for the war was solely the government's, and that the government would not deny the right of the Opposition to make criticisms.

HOME GUARD DEPUTATION

Waits Upon the Council for an Additional Grant

Major R. E. Layfield of the Peterborough Home Guard, backed up by a strong deputation, waited upon the City Council last evening with the request that the Council supplement their original grant of three hundred dollars with seven hundred dollars more, making the total amount one thousand dollars. The Home Guard have a cash balance of nearly fifty dollars from the last grant, and they are desirous of continuing their policy of training men for both overseas and home defence. In order to accomplish this with any degree of success, additional funds are required. Thirty-five members of the Home Guard have volunteered for active service, leaving the Home Guard about eight hundred strong. The average number of rounds of ammunition used by each member is thirty-four, and ten practices are required before the men can make thirty or over out of a possible thirty-five.

The matter was referred to the Finance committee.

A FURIOUS SNOWSTORM

Is Raging Throughout Ontario—Traffic Demoralized—The Effect in Peterborough

CAR SERVICE SUFFERS

One of the worst storms of the season swept down on Peterborough last evening, and up until late this afternoon had shown little signs of abatement. A high wind, accompanied by a blinding snowstorm, were the features of the storm king's visitation. Railroad service over the greater part of the Province was demoralised as a result, and in some cases it will be several days before it will be straightened out. So far as the railroads are concerned they are experiencing their worst difficulties in the open country where the "cuts" are deep and numerous. Throughout the whole disturbance the temperature has fluctuated around the zero mark. This afternoon it was two degrees below, which is the lowest since the storm commenced. Last nights the streets were practically deserted with the exception of an ocasional pedestrian and the policemen on duty.

Streets Blocked.

The snow-leaning gang made a futile attempt to clean the snow from the streets but once removed it would commence to fill in again. Men with snowploughs were out a greater part of the night and by persistent efforts, were able to keep the main avenues of pedestrian traffic open for those who were compelled to come down town in order to reach their place of business. The Radial Railway Company struggled with the storm, but even with two electric sweepers and a large gang of men, were unable to provide a complete service.

Train Service Demoralized.

The train service throughout the country is completely demoralized. Any trains which succeeded in getting through were from three to six hours late and several of the Peterborough morning trains have not arrived yet.

The Canadian Pacific Railway line through the City seems to be in the worst shape at present. Up to the hour of 3 p.m. only one passenger train had passed through on the C. P. R. line and the 12.15 p.m. train from Toronto was reported as time of arrival—indefinite. The morning train from Havelock went through this forenoon en route to Toronto, but is having a hard time.

Extra men were ordered out with shovels to clear the line. The driving storm makes it almost impossible for a man to work and unless trains are passing over the line continuously, after it is opened, it will soon be as bad as ever if the storm does not let up.

There is a report from Bethany that two C.P.R. trains are stalled there on the Port McNicholl line. The snow ploughs are so busy on the main line, they have not the time to send much help there. The Bethany cut, when filled, will keep several men busy for a good many hours to clear it. Owing to the nature of cut, any great surplus of snow will have to be hauled away.

Stuck at Best's Cut.

On the Grand Trunk line there are three snow ploughs busy operating from Belleville, Port Hope, Lindsay and Lakefield. The service is demor-

THE CITY IS NOT LIABLE

For the Loss a Horse Owned by Mr. Petrie of Otonabee

No action will be taken in the matter of the claim made by Mr. Petrie of Otonabee, on account of his horse having been killed, as he claims, through being frightened by children coasting. City Solicitor Gordon has advised the city that upon the information obtained, he is of the opinion that the city is not liable.

The matter was referred to the City Council with the above result.

SALARY QUESTION WILL BE REVIVED IN COMMITTEE

Ald. Edgar is Dissatisfied With the Report of the Finance Committee—Another Salary Cutting Festival in Prospect.

AN AMENDMENT

The piece de resistance of last night's meeting of the City Council was the salary question as it concerns the officials in the employ of the city. After a debate lasting well over an hour, the matter was switched over to the committee of the Whole Council with instructions that it be revived at an early date. Some weeks ago Ald. Edgar introduced a resolution asking that an investigation be held with a view of determining whether the civic payroll could not be reduced and some of the officials dispensed with on the grounds that present conditions demanded a more drastic form of municipal economy. This resolution was referred to the Finance committee with the result that it was decided to recommend that no changes be made. This finding was submitted in the form of a report to last night's meeting of the City Council, as follows.

The Report.

1. Your committee considered the resolution passed at the last meeting of the Council in regard to the employees of the Council and recommend as follows:

(a) That it be left to the City Engineer and the Board of Works to decide whether a Street Inspector is required the year round.

(b) That the matter of the salaries in connection with the City Engineer's Department be left with the Board of Works.

(c) That the salaries of the following officials be left as they are at present: City Treasurer, Street Commissioner, Tax Collector, Assessor, Engineer of the Sewage Pumping Station, Relief Officer, Medical Officer of Health and City Physician, Plumbing Inspector, Sanitary Inspector, Caretaker of City Buildings, City Solicitor, the County Judge as Police Commissioner, Caretaker of the Town Clock and the Firemen.

(d) That the Board of Commissioners of Police be requested to keep the expenses of the Police Department as low as possible this year.

Moved an Amendment.

In moving an amendment Ald. Edgar expressed his dissatisfaction of the report and asked the Mayor to appoint a committee to deal with the matter. He asserted that the majority of the people were suffering from the effects of the war, therefore a reduction in the civic payroll was in order. Tax Collector Green who was receiving a salary of thirteen hundred dollars a year and using the office accommodation provided by the city to do other work. City Engineer Parsons received a salary of twenty-five hundred dollars a year, whereas a good deal of his time was occupied in pounding a typewriter. If the present office staff were not capable of performing their work they should be superseded by those who could. Ald. Edgar did not think that two street commissioners were needed. Besides, he was informed that one of the commissioners who received a raise last year, did not spend all his time on the streets. He did not propose to have the salaries slaughtered, but cut down to a fair living wage.

To all of this Ald. McIntyre agreed.

Not Overpaid.

Ald. Stratton, as chairman of the committee that was appointed to deal with the matter, could see no reason why Ald. Edgar should want to select another committee to reopen the question, which had received careful consideration at the hands of the Finance committee. He did not think that Tax Collector Green, who during the course of a year handled over three hundred thousand dollars' worth of taxes, was overpaid when he received a remuneration of thirteen hundred dollars a year. One of the two commissioners employed by the Board of Works Department was paid the sum of seven hundred dollars a year, which worked out at the rate of a little more than two dollars a day. Ald. Stratton

The City Will Be Represented

In Connection With the Toronto Eastern Railway Company—Application for Extension of Time

The City will be represented when the time comes for the Toronto Eastern Railway Company to appear before the Ontario Legislature in connection with their application for an Act extending the time wherein the Company may construct the lines of railway authorized by the Statutes of Canada for 1909—1910, Chapter 167, Section 8, shortly described as follows:

(a) From the City of Toronto easterly to Cobourg with branches therefrom as follows:

1. Cobourg or Port Hope, northerly to Peterborough.

2. Township of Scarborough, northerly to or near Markham, Stouffville or Uxbridge.

3. Oshawa northerly via Lake Scugog to Lindsay.

4. Oshawa southerly to Lake Ontario.

At last night's meeting of the City Council Mayor Buller was given authority to appoint a representative who will be instructed to urge upon the necessity of proceeding with the construction of the line to Peterborough as soon as conditions warrant.

THE GEORGE ST. EPWORTH LEAGUE

The loyalty of the members of the George Street Epworth League was tested on Monday evening. Although the weather was very inclement, the attendance was very encouraging. After the opening exercises, an instrumental duet was played by Miss Sanderson and Miss Succee.

The remainder of the meeting was impromptu, the members, that were called upon to take part, being each given two minutes to prepare the subject given them. This was enjoyed by all, and was also instructive.

Arrangements were made for the banquet to be held next Monday evening.

BLOOD THICKER THAN WATER.

Our good neighbours of the United States, that is, the best elements, are of the blood of the British breed—of Anglo-Saxon and Celtic origin and ideals. We are therefore, not surprised at evidences of the truth of the statement that blood is thicker than water. In another column is reproduced the appeal of the British-American Relief Fund, designed to provide comforts for the soldiers and sailors at the front and in the fighting line. It goes for warm clothing comforts and necessities. With the thermometer below zero, giving sting to a raging blizzard without, this appeal has a very direct force. Any one reading the "appeal" will be struck with the fact that the best people of one of the greatest and most powerful nations, are on our side, not alone for reasons of kinship, but because, ours is the right side; the side of civilization, of the highest development of government in the interests of the noblest liberties of humanity. Great Britain and the Allies are not in this war for conquest, but as champions of international decency. They are in the war for the decisive and crushing defeat of the cult of militarism and all the evils it enfolds and evolves. We appreciate the sympathy and active charity of our good neighbours across the line, and should profit by it. When virtual outsiders are doing so much to help our fighting forces, in the peaceful way of provision for their bodily comforts, we, of the imperial household, have our own duty in these regards greatly emphasized.

IS CANADA FIGHTING AGAINST THE EMPIRE?

The action of a German submarine in sinking peaceful merchant vessels off the British littoral, is what might be expected from German ideals of civilization. It is a complement of the Zeppelin raids, and the warship raids, and the bombardment of defenceless towns and cities. These latter have been stopped, and now some means will be found to deal with the submarine menace. The latest sea raid, though disquieting to the layman, doesn't worry Britain very much. A Liverpool war risks assurance association has not thought it necessary to prohibit sailing of merchant vessels. All regular lines are leaving port as usual.

The chief point of the practical piracy is the new evidence of German disregard of playing the game fair, and the new opening it gives the United States to protest in the name of international decency, against Germany's indecent disregard of the rules of civilized warfare. Uncle Sam is very prompt to interfere and tie down Great Britain to meticulous observance of the rules of war. Germany can, as far as the United States is concerned, smash every law in the code of civilization and humanity, without word of protest; but the eagle screams if a petty little cargo of cotton is delayed, for search for contraband of war like copper. By seeking effectively, if indirectly, to help copper reaching Germany, to be used in making munitions of war, the United States is virtually departing from its attitude of strict neutrality, and giving "aid and comfort" to the enemy of the Allies. Perhaps some of the very copper permitted to reach Germany by crooked and contraband routes, was used to help equip the Zeppelins, warships and submarines that have committed the recent outrages on peaceful British towns and cities, and peaceful British shipping.

In this view of the matter, the necessity arises of preventing Canada becoming an actual party to strengthening Germany's offensive strength against ourselves. There is reason to believe that nickel from Canadian mines, is reaching, as it has heretofore reached, Germany, to furnish that country with an indispensable element in building warships. We permit our nickel matte to go to the United States, where it is refined and distributed throughout the world where there is a market and demand for it. The Germans demand it, and it cannot be doubted that a considerable quantity of it reaches Germany, where Canadian nickel becomes an agency in the murder of our fellow subjects. We may preach till we are black in the face, the doctrine of Canada for the Canadians, and Canada for the Empire, but our preaching will be as sounding brass and a tinkling cymbal, so long as we—even passively—permit our nickel to be forged into weapons to smite ourselves.

It is to be hoped that at the coming session of Parliament, convened to promote Canada's share in fighting the common enemy, Germany, the Canadian nickel situation will receive attention. Of course, effective consideration of the subject will be complicated by the injection of the claims of corporation interests, which will be affected by a strong policy of prevention of the export of Canadian nickel under conditions that provide for the possibility of its reaching the enemy and being turned into a weapon to be directed against ourselves.

We have declared a political truce in order that the people and public men of Canada may more unitedly work in the interests of waging a successful war. We should also have a truce to political or partizan considerations in favour of any corporation or set of individuals. No "matter whose ox is gored" we must—if we are to do the right thing—prevent the nickel from Canadian mines reaching the enemy. If no other means is possible, drastic prohibition of export in any form would be justified. Such a course would, of course, produce temporary disturbance of industrial and economic conditions. But such disturbance is being produced every day by the war, and this disturbance will be, and continue to be, exercised if we permit our nickel to add to the resources of the enemy in promoting such disturbances.

The Government, with the help of the united wisdom and patriotism of a united Parliament, united to do the best for the Empire and Canada in this crisis, can certainly devise some means of doing the right thing. This can be done for strategic reasons, so to speak, but it should be done for the sake of giving effect to the great principle that Canada should reap the full reward of the highest exploitation at home of all her national and natural resources. If Canada continues to take a course that will permit the export of her nickel under conditions that justify the belief htat some of it reaches the enemy to strengthen its offensive offensive, a logical deduction is that by failing to control the movements of our nickel, we are virtually and effectively fighting against the Empire. We cannot very consistently reproach the United States for unduly exalting the commercial idea in its pin-pricking protests against Britain's way of dealing with contraband shipping, if we, ourselves, make patriotic duty subordinate to industrial and economic and, possibly, corporation and individual, consideration.

TEXT OF APPEAL OF BRITISH AMERICAN WAR RELIEF FUND

The men of Great Britain with their Allies, are fighting not only for their own existence and to restore Belgium, but against the domination of militarism throughout the world.

From the English, Scotch and Irish many millions of our countrymen are descended. We speak the same language; our traditions, standards and ideals are the same.

In behalf of the soldiers and sailors at the front and in the hospitals, the British American War Relief Fund issues this appeal to those who in this struggle sympathize with Great Britain.

It asks for warm clothing, comforts and necessities.

The articles required are mufflers, wristlets, socks, (size 10 or 11), woollen gloves (size 9 and 10), abdominal belts, woollen helmets, coloured handkerchiefs, woollen underdrawers, undershirts, cardigan jackets, sweaters, and tobacco, and for the hospitals, old linen, bandages, antiseptic gauze and anesthetics.

The society has been in existence only since October 20, but contributions have been received from nearly each state of the United States, from Canada and the West Indies.

The articles already forwarded have been acknowledged by Lord Kitchener in the following cablegram:

"First consignment of gifts from women of America for British on active service, received with much appreciation and gratitude. Letter follows.

KITCHENER,
'Secretary of State for War.' "

Any cash donations will be used in the purchase of these articles.

In order that your contribution may benefit those in America as well as those abroad, all articles will be purchased here.

No money will be sent out of this country.

Through the cooperation of British Steamship Lines all consignments are delivered in England free of charge, and the British War Office guarantees prompt delivery to the men at the front and in the hospitals.

All contributions in kind and all communications to be addressed to Mrs. Ralph Sanger, Bristol American War Relief Fund, 200 Fifth Avenue, and all money contributions will be gladly received at the same address by Mr. Henry J. Whitehouse.

The Fund is under the patronage of the Presidents of St. Andrew's Society, the St. George's Society, the St. David's Society and the Canadian Society.

Committee.

Lady Herbert, President; Mrs. Ralph Sanger, Secretary; Mr. Henry Whitehouse, Treasurer; Judge Barlow, Mrs. A. S. Burden, Mrs. Alfred Coats, Mr. Richard Harding Davis, Mrs. J. W. Dixon, Mr. W. R. said that he advocated a policy of economical administration; but did not think it would pay the city to get a lot of cheap officials.

Another Chance.

A member of the Finance committee in the person of Ald. Johnston, was in favour of giving a committee another chance to deal with the matter.

Ald. Green, representing the Board of Works, said that he was opposed to dealing with the salaries of the engineering department, owing to the critical illness of T. A. S. Hay, assistant engineer. He emphasized the good work done by Street Commissioner Fitzgerald and said that while he might experience a slack period, lasting perhaps a week or two, at this season of the year, it would not pay the city to dispense with his services.

Ald. Duffus favoured sending the matter on to the Board of Works.

Ald. Edgar agreed with the other Aldermen that City Treasurer Adams' remuneration of five hundred and ten dollars a year was inadequate. He was also of the opinion that Tax Collector Green was getting sufficient remuneration, especially as he had two other sources of income, one as issuer of marriage licenses and the other as secretary of the Independent Order of Oddfellows.

The Council finally decided to refer the matter to a committee of the Whole Council.

WHY GERMANY SUPPRESSED THE CARDINAL'S PASTORAL

The attempted suppression of the pastoral letter of Cardinal Mercier of Belgium, to his people, has resulted in giving it wider publicity. It has been published in the Tablet and sent broadcast all over the world. A perusal of the document shows why the Germans wanted to suppress it, and when they interned the Bishop in his residence when he refused to retract. Here follows a few quotations from the letter:

Here follow a few quotations from saviours.

"A first time, at Liege, they saved France; a second time, in Flanders, they arrested the advance of the enemy upon Calais. France and England know it; and Belgium stands before them both and before the entire world, as a nation of heroes."

* * * *

"Pray daily, my brethren, for these two hundred and fifty thousand, and for their leaders to victory; pray for the fallen; pray for those who are still engaged; pray for the recruits who are making ready for the fight to come."

* * * *

"Thousands of Belgian citizens have in like manner been deported to the prisons of Germany, to Munsterlagen, to Celle, to Madgeburg. At Munsterhagen alone three thousand one hundred civil prisoners were numbered. History will tell of the physical and moral torments of their long martyrdom. Hundreds of innocent men were shot. I possess no complete necrology; but I know that there were ninety-one shot at Aerschot, that there, under pain of death, their fellow citizens were compelled to dig their graves. In the Louvain group of communes sixteen persons, men and women, old men and sucklings, rich and poor, in health and sickness, were shot or burnt.

In my diocese alone I know that thirteen priests or religious teachers were put to death. One of these, the parish priest of Gelrode, suffered, I believe, a veritable martyrdom.

We can neither count our dead nor compute the measure of our ruins And what would it be if we turned our sad steps towards Liege, Namur, Audenne, Dinant, Tamise, Charleroi and elsewhere?"

* * * *

"Belgium was thus bound in honour to defend her own independence. She kept her word. The other powers were bound to respect and to protect her neutrality. Germany violated her oath; England kept hers.

"These are facts.."

"Well, I affirm upon my honour, and I am prepared to assert upon faith of my oath, that until now I have not met a single ecclesiastic, secular or regular, who had once incited civilians to bear arms against the enemy. All have loyally followed the instructions of their Bishops, given in the early days of August, to the effect that they were to use their moral influence over the civilian population, so that order might be preserved and military regulation observed".

Noble, elevating statements such as those quoted are anything but palatable to the Kaiser and his horde of human murderers.

The Italian Government has established pneumatic tube postal systems in Rome, Naples and Milan.

PETES HAVE A FOUR GOAL LEAD BEAT PICTON PESTS BY 7 TO 3

Visitors Held Homesters to a Tie in the First Two Periods But Blue and White Team Drew Away From Them in the Last Twenty Minutes

BIG CROWD SAW GAME

The Petes will carry a lead of four goals to Picton with them to-morrow when they play the second game in the home and home series for the district championship.

Last night at Brock Street rink the blue and white team handed Walter Knox's seven a 7 to 3 beating after an exciting and hard fought, but ragged exhibition. Four goals constitute a good margin, and there were few in the rink who would concede that much lead to the Petes at the end of the second period. In fact, with the game more than half over the easterners were deading 3 to 1, and with the press reports of Picton's superb condition and strong finishes fresh in everybody's mind, the Petes' chances did not loom up very high. However, when the pinch came it was the eastern team that faded. The Petes battled them to a tie, 3—3, before the end of the second period, and in the last twenty minutes went away from the yellow and black, scoring four goals, while Picton failed to find the nets. In the second period the Petes had a wide margin on the play and in spite of Picton's much-vaunted condition, the homesters were decidedly the fresher team and had more left on end than the Knox clan.

It was not good hockey in the first two periods. The players on both sides seemed to be suffering from over anxiety and bunched on the puck, while the checking was so close and hard that clean-cut rushes were few and far between. It was more or less of a scramble, made exciting by the closeness of the score and the importance of the issues.

After the Petes had taken the lead in the last period the play suddenly opened up, and it was lightning fast for the balance of the game, far the best hockey being seen in this session.

The homesters have played better hockey this year than they showed in the greater part of last night's battle. In the early stages they could not seem to get going, passed weakly when they passed at all, and in the first period especially, shot poorly. They improved as the game went on, however, and in the last period were back in form. Then they showed their class and were decidedly the better team.

Skid Janes turned in another good performance in the nets. He was beaten by a couple of long ones, but more than made up for that by spectacular saves when his defence was beaten. Three or four times he was left all alone to meet the attack and he showed great judgment in the way he handled the situation. Of the rest, Jack Pethick was easily the most prominent. The light-haired defence man was the best man on the ice in last night's affray. In the early stages when the rest of the Petes seemed to be at sea it was Pethick's rushing that kept them in the hunt, turning a Picton attack into a dangerous counter attack. Until the last period, although every one was trying hard, none of the forwards was up to his usual standard, but everyone came to life and played fine hockey to wind up with. Knapman, of the junior team, made his intermediate debut last night. It was a trying experience for the youngster to be pitchforked into the most important game of the season and asked to look after the Picton captain and star forward, and while he was plainly nervous at the start, the little fellow improved as the game went on, and the last fast period was going strong.

For Picton, Scott in the nets performed in stellar style. He had a lot of work to do and handled it splendidly. Heffernan and Hubbs were a good defence and the former's rush for a goal in the second period was one of the prettiest of the night. All four forwards are pluggers. They are always working and check back persistently. There was no particular star among the quartette.

In spite of the blizzard a grand crowd saw the battle, the attendance being in the neighbourhood of 1000. The crowd had a long wait, owing to the train on which Referee O. Bernhardt, of Bradford, arrived, being very late.

It was Bernhardt's first appearance here, and the former Preston player made a very favourable impression. He missed very little and was thoroughly impartial in his rulings.

The line-ups:

Picton		Peterborough
	Goal
Scott		Janes
	Defence
Hubbs		Hunter
Heffernan		Pethick
	Rover
R. Burns		Halpin
	Centre
Taft		Park
	Right Wing
Hudgins		Knapman
	Left wing
B. Burns		Kelly

The checking was close and hard from the goin, but the pace was not as fast as usually chaarcterizes the opening stages of a big game. Both teams seemed cautious and it was spasmodic rushing with many scrimmages and a lot of long distance shooting. Finally after four minutes of this kind of going, R. Burns caught the Petes napping with a long shot from centre which caught the net a few inches from the top.

B. Burns drew three minutes for tripping Knapman, and while he was off the Petes tied the count. Knapman passed from the corner to Halpin, who dodged the Picton defence and scooped the puck past Scott.

Although both goals had a narrow escape there was nothing more doing in the first period. Halpin and Park broke right inside once on a passing rush, but Scott blocked Park's shot.

Picton took the lead again early in the second period. Heffernan checked a Peterborough rush and broke away from the forwards. When he reached the local defence he slid the puck past Hunter and Pethick a la Gordon Meeking, and slipping through, beat Janes. This left the score 2 to 1. For ten minutes the teams battled without a score, although both lost golden opportunities. Then Janes lost a long, easy shot from the side by B. Burns, and Picton were two in front.

The Petes were robbed of a goal a moment later when Kelly bulged the nets with a pretty shot from close in. The Picton goal umpire refused to raise his hand, however, and the goal was lost. The Petes had the official removed.

Shortly after came a break that helped the Petes materially. In a scrimmage around the Picton nets, Knapman charged [illegible] Scott did not seem to relish this attention and tripped the little right wing. Bernhardt caught him in the act and chased the visiting net guardian, Hudgins backed into the nets, and seeing their opportunity the Petes started a vigorous bombardment. Park slipped one goal through on a side shot, but although they had many other chances the homesters failed to find the nets. Hudgins kicked out haul a dozen drives and was knocked out for a moment by a hard one from Kelly, but one goal was all the Petes could collect while Scott was off. B. Burns and Park drew penalties, but there was nothing doing while they were off. Just as the bell sounded for the end of the period, the Petes evened the count, Knapman scoring from a scrimmage.

The last period was pretty well all Peterborough. Three minutes after the start, Park put the homesters ahead for the first time on a shot from the side. Heffernan was penalized for tripping Halpin, after the latter had made a nice rush. Then Knapman was chased for knocking Goaler Scott's stick out of his hands. Pethick and Hunter got away together and the former drove a beauty past Scott. That left it 5 to 3, with the Petes going better all the time. Kelly made it 6 to 3 on a pass from behind, and a minute later Knapman shoved the rubber from behind the nets to Halpin in the midst of a scrimmage, and the rover scored Goal No. 7. Park was on the fence during the scoring of the last two goals. Shortly afterwards Halpin was benched for dumping the goalkeeper.

Neill-Sheppard Trophy Remains In Peterboro'

Local Curlers Have Been Winning it Regularly in Last Few Years and Put Up a Fine Exhibition to Hold it —Every Rink Up

In this morning's wee small hours the Peterborough Curling Club secured its first trophy of the present year, when they defeated four Orillia rinks by 16 points, showing a total of 22 points up for the Neill-Sheppard trophy.

The visitors were storm-bound in several places along the G.T.R., and did not arrive in Peterborough until 10.30. Then there was a delay in getting the stones from the station, and some of the Orillians had been without food since dinner.

As a result of little delays it was shortly after 12 o'clock when the first stones curled over the splendid sheet of ice Angus McIntosh had provided with the co-operation of the Weather Man. Just about that hour members of the Council were satisfied that their voices had lost none of their pleasant ring, and were satisfied to discontinue the concert until new disks are offered at committee meetings. At the same time, Gen. Public was bussing through the first lap of a comfortable sleep lulled by the windblown show sweeping against his windows. The games went twelve ends, concluding shortly after two o'clock when the seven rinks of curlers (including Bobcaygeon) took the lift to the lunch room, where Tom Hooper presented a supply of material comforts possessing a particular potency after twelve ends of curling and sweeping—especially sweeping.

Orillia	Peterborough

Leo Weisman	Jas. Motherall
A. Jamieson	R. Hicks

Skip 10	Skip 13

MacNabb—x1xxx24xx12x—10.
Fitzgerald—1x221xx32xx2—13.

Peterborough finished strong on almost every rink, and while 16 points were piled up on the play the games were decidedly close after the men grew accustomed to the hard ice and the response of the turns.

Archie Moore's four-end helped a whole lot in holding Skip Toogood. McDermid was one down on his 11th end, four on his 12th giving a nice lead. Dickson Davidson's rink started away early in the lead and finally helped themselves to five points on the last two ends by way of good measure. Fitzgerald and MacNabb had a merry contest all the way, and in fact there was not much to choose from between last night's representatives of the two clubs.

Bobcaygeon Secured Lead of 11 Points in the Fitzgerald Bottum Trophy Last Night

The first of the Fitzgerald-Bottum games between the Peterborough and Bobcaygeon Curling Clubs resulted in the 'Caygeon club securing a lead of eleven points. Three of the rinks played this morning, when the Orillia rinks were in action and the other game was played this morning. The results were as follows:

War's Effect On Football

Enormous Decrease in Attendance at Leading Games Gives Clubs Financial Anxiety

LONDON, Feb. 2.—The English soccer clubs have been hit so hard this season by the big falling off in receipts that serious difficulties will have to be met by the majority at the end of the season unless a speedy termination of the war is brought about. From the official figures just published of the total attendance at the games of the three principal leagues to December 31, a decrease of nearly 40 per cent. compared with the corresponding months of 1913, is recorded, as shown in the following tables:

	1913	1915	Decrease
First League	5,144,000	3,010,000	2,134,000
Second League	1,860,000	1,376,000	484,000
Southern League	1,660,000	1,048,000	612,000

London Club's Worst.

Two of the big London clubs particularly have suffered severely. Chelsea, up to Dec. 31, 1913, returned an average attendance of 43,000 people for each home game, the biggest gate being 60,000, while this season to the same date their average number of spectators has been only 18,000—a falling of 25,000, which represents a loss of between $6,000 and $7,000 for every other Saturday. Tottenham Hotspur's average crowd has fallen from 30,000 to 15,000, which will be seriously felt at the end of April.

Following are the League tables compiled up to date:

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

CITY HALL PARAGRAPHS

The City Council has decided to continue the grant of fifty dollars a month to the Salvation Army Home, for a period of three months. The Council agreed that this was a deserving institution and was accomplishing a noble work.

A Double Header.

Laughton and Green will go to Toronto on Thursday for the purpose of conferring with the Provincial Board of Health, the Hydro-Electric Commission of Ontario, and Mr. Willis Chipman, consulting engineer. The latter is in connection with the settlement of an account arising out of the construction of the Romaine street sewer.

Sewer on Ware Street.

The City Council has authorized the construction of a sewer on Ware street. City Engineer Parsons has intimated that there might be some engineering difficulties in connection with this matter. However, an attempt will be made to proceed with the work.

Was Reappointed.

Mr. E. A. Peck has been reappointed to the position of member of the City Trust Commission. The appointment was confirmed at last night's meeting of the City Council.

Electric Light Account.

The Peterborough Light and Power Company has asked for settlement of their account with the city. This is the regular account and must not be confused with the account for current light that was lost through one of the city's transformers. The matter was referred to the Fire, Water and Light Committee.

Increase in Rates.

The Bell Telephone Company has notified the city that in accordance with the terms of the Railway Act the rates on telephones supplied to the city will be raised from twenty to forty dollars a year. The latter is the regular rate.

Street Watering.

Mr. R. C. Braund wants the streets watered in the vicinity of Park and Albert streets, also the small park at the corner of Rubidge, Rink and Park streets, attended to. Mr. Braund would also like to have a crossing constructed at the corner of Park and Albert. The whole matter was referred to the Board of Works.

Payable Here.

In future the debentures and the coupons for the interest thereon, will be payable at the office of the commissioner of the Peterborough City Trust. Heretofore it was customary to pay them at the branches of the Bank of Toronto, in Toronto, Montreal and Peterborough.

Trunk Road.

The City Council is in receipt of a communication from the Peterborough Automobile Association asking the aid of the Council in respect to a petition to the Ontario Legislature in an effort to have the Lakefield-Port Hope, via Peterborough road, made a part of the proposed trunk system of roads.

Sale of Land.

The city has decided to sell to the proprietors of the Canadian Chicle Company, 50 feet of land on George street, next to their factory and running back to the Grand Trunk Railway, and the land between the company's property and the railway for $800.00, the land to be used for factory purposes and the factory to be enlarged within two years.

Applied for Grant.

Mr. Peter Campbell appeared before the City Council last evening and asked for the usual grant of one thousand dollars on behalf of the Horticultural Society. The matter was referred to the Finance Committee.

GOT UNDER WATER TO ESCAPE SHRAPNEL

TORONTO, Feb. 2—A vivid description of the hardships suffered by the "Princess Pats" at the front is told in a letter which Mrs. Joseph McManus of 52 Walton street has received from her husband, who is now confined in the Eastern General Hospital, Cambridge, England, where he was invalided home from France, suffering from exposure in the trenches.

"We got into the trenches and relieved the French troops at night, and, although we could not understand them, they seemed very grateful, judging by the expression on their faces, that we relived them. They looked very tired and weary. This was on the first line of communications. Next to us were Indian soldiers, and on their right were Belgians. There we stood up to our waists in water, fighting shoulder to shoulder with our allies.

"The place where the Pats are fighting is where the Germans have made desperate attempts to break through our lines. No less than three charges were made the first night we took over the trenches. But we met them with bayonet, rifle and artillery fire that sent them back in a hurry. We were up to our knees in mud. The Germans started out with their squad of sharpshooters and snipers early the next morning. Then things began to liven up. Our artillery was brought up, and belched forth fire, taking the German trenches. I don't know how anyone could live under such a fire. In the afternoon we got our first baptism of the German artillery. They shelled us for about four hours, 'Jack Johnsons,' Black Marias, and shrapnel of all classes. We were very fortunate. We had only a few killed and wounded. We were subjected to this hell fire for five days, and to make conditions worse, there was a reservoir in front of ours trenches. The Germans shell fire burst through it, wrecking it, and the water swept into our trenches in torrents.

"The flood rose to five feet in our trenches, and every time the German fire came we had to bend down and duck our heads into the water. Fighting under such conditions was a terrible strain on the men, but the spirit the boys displayed was marvellous. All along our trenches there are dead soldiers. I counted over fifty Belgians, and they must have been there for weeks Conditions are the same all along the line. German, French, Indian and Belgian trops lay dead, and the Red Cross have no time to bury them."

Ether In Second Amnesia Case

New Treatment Will be Tried for Young Woman

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.— An expensively dressed young woman, apparently ill with amnesia, was found the other day wandering in front of the Savoy Hotel. Unless she recovers her memory to-day so that she can tell who she is ether will be administered to her, as in the case of Mrs. Molly Parker, an English actress, who on Thursday was restored to consciousness.

The second young woman apparently had been shopping and had purchased a baby's dress, which was in her muff. She wore a long gold neck chain with a gold cross, had a gold-mounted cameo pin at her waist and wore a gold bracelet and wrist watch.

When Policeman Herbert saw her crying he asked her what was the matter. She said she had lost her purse, and when questioned further she could not tell her name or where she lived. She was sent to the East Fifty-first Street station and from there to Flower Hospital, where the physicians tried in vain to awaken her memory by the use of lettered blocks. It was at Flower Hospital that Mrs. Parker was aroused from her state of lost memory by the use of ether.

The young woman, who is dark, with blue eyes and very pretty, wore a green silk waist, blue serge skirt, bronze colour shoes, silk stocks and a caracul fur coat trimmed with a yellow fur.

Troops Called Out To End An Uprising

ROME, Feb. 1.—Troops with fixed bayonets had to be called out to-day to re-establish order at a meeting which had been organized by Senators, members of the Chamber of Deputies and other prominent persons, with the purpose of forwarding a movement in favour of Italy maintaining neutrality in the war.

A large number of persons, mostly republicans, who are against the maintenance of neutrality, gathered at the entrance to the hall and in spite of the efforts of the police attacked neutralists. A Deputy, Signor Bruno Delmonte, leader of the neutralists, had his ears boxed and some one spat in his face. He defended himself with his cane. During the disorder cries of "Shame! Prince von Buelow has bought you, you supporters of Austria," rose from the anti-neutralists.

Finding that the police could not properly handle the situation troops were called out and restored order.

After this incident the anti-neutralists, attempted to approach the Austrian Embassy, crying, "Down with Austria!" "Down with Germany!" "Long live France!" and "Long live the war!"

The troops again had to be called on to disperse the crowds.

MAJOR SAM HUGHES HAS RETURNED

OTTAWA, Feb. 2.—Major Sam Hughes returned this morning bringing with him a number of samples of alleged bad boots collected at various points on the way. He did not care to discuss the question of boots this morning, but intimated that the report of the committee would be carefully considered and whatever action it warranted would be taken. "Some were good and some were bad," was all that he would say to-day. The Director of Contracts and Judge Advocate General, the legal authority of the Department, were summoned to a conference with the Minister immediately upon his return, and afterward General Hughes interviewed the Prime Minister. There is no doubt but that the boot question will figure in the parliamentary discussion at the pending session and whether action is taken by the Department or not, parliamentary inquiry will be demanded.

OTTAWA, Feb. 2.—The Dominion Police and Secret Service has been notified in connection with the attempted blowing up of the C.P.R. bridge at Vercheboro, and the Militia Department will also be notified. An investigation will be held as to the circumstances. A man named Van Horne is under arrest by the United States authorities. He has confessed that he planned the explosion for political purposes.

Kaiser At Historic Spots On Battlefield of Sedan

Accompanied by an Author, He Sees Where His Father Stood and Where Bismarck and Napoleon Met—Praises Crown Prince's Cook

BERLIN, via London, Feb. 1.—The Lokal Anzeiger published some further accounts of the call on Dr. Ludwig Ganghofer, author, on Emperor William at the German field headquarters. It tells of a trip made by the Emperor and Dr. Ganghofer to Donchery, in the region of the Sedan battlefield. Here the Emperor in speaking of the unity of the German people, is quoted as saying to Dr. Ganghofer:

"It is my greatest pleasure that I could live to see it."

The Emperor showed to the author where his father had stood at Sedan, where Napoleon and Bismark had met and other historic spots.

The trip by automobile finally took the party to the headquarters of Crown Prince Frederick William, where after luncheon the Emperor, smiling, turned to his son and said:

"One gets better things to eat by you than by me. I shall consider whether I shall not requisition your cook."

The Emperor here had an opportunity to see a thousand French prisoners march by. He was greatly pleased when some of them doffed their caps to him and he returned their salute. During this review he turned to a photographer who was taking pictures and said:

"Photograph the prisoners and not always me."

The party later climbed a steep ascent to get a view of the surrounding region. When descending Dr. Ganghofer slipped, but the Emperor quickly grasped him by the arm and saved him from a fall, saying at the same time:

"Soldiers and citizens must help each other all they can."

THE PART OF RED CROSS NURSES IN WAGING WAR

While the man in khaki is bearing the brunt of the battle in the firing line the Red Cross nurse is performing as important and in many cases, as dangerous, a work not very far away from where the shells are bursting and the big guns send forth their messengers of death. They know neither danger nor fatigue, but quietly and courageously go about their mission of mercy. Upon their armlet they bear the Red Cross sign, but this has not prevented the Germans on many occasions from firing upon them in order that they may be prevented from succoring and binding up the wounded and the fallen.

These are brave women, and when the smoke of battle has died away and peace has once again been restored upon the continent of Europe the work that they have performed and the brave acts they have done will be written in letters of gold in the imperishable annals of British history. That the work of the Red Cross nurses does not merely comprise looking after and tending the wounded will be shown by the following intensely interesting account of the work of Lieut. Amy Neale, whose letter to her brother, Lieut. J. B. Neale, of the 10th Royal Grenadiers of Toronto, was recently published in the Toronto Sunday World.

In the course of her letter Miss Neale says: "A short time ago a very long train stopped at our siding about 10 p.m. It contained two complete hospitals from India, one for the native and one for the British Indian wounded. Just imagine how cold they were. They had left India in the hot weather and had come straight to Boulogne and Marseilles. We gave them hot tea, etc., as we always have boiling water ready, and in the morning I got the sisters into the dispensary to have a good warming. Poor things, they were grateful as they had spent the night in the train, and of course when the engine was taken off the carriages were not heated. One of these Indian hospitals is now housed at a beautiful hotel facing the sea, with the tents round it.

"I was on duty here at the station," continues Miss Neale, "where we heard the sad news of Lord Roberts' death; one says 'sad' and yet in a way it seemed the right thing and what he would no doubt have liked. One of the railway officials said: 'We weep also with you, my sister.' He had tears in his eyes when he spoke."

Miss Neale then goes on to speak of the ambulance trains which are capable of taking three or four hundred cases and are equipped splendidly. The bunks are arranged something like a Pullman, and there is a dispensary and a kitchen on board, as well as quarters for nursing and surgical staffs.

The duties of the Red Cross nurse are varied, as will be seen from the following example described in Miss Neale's story. Early one morning some Frenchmen were waiting on the platform for their train for the front. They were not soldiers, but were going to dig trenches. It was bitterly cold, and they were invited to partake of a hot drink. They were all lined up and were given hot cocoa and bread and butter. The commanding officer wanted to pay, but when told that there was no charge he insisted on giving a donation to the Red Cross work. "Never, never will I forget the Red Cross," he said.

Miss Neale then cites what she describe as a "queer" case. A young lieutenant, coming to Boulogne in charge of guns, captured from the Germans, fell out of the train on the way as they were going through a tunnel. He was travelling in a sort of van with his guns, so of course no one knew. He lay on his stomach while the train passed by feeling things touching him all the time, afraid to stir, and expecting every second to be caught up and dragged. However, he luckily escaped that, and as soon as he had sufficiently recovered got up and walked to the station along the line. He was then sent round to Miss Neale for first aid.

"It was a wonderful escape," says Miss Neale, "as he only had one slight scalp wound and one bruise at the back of the head, but. Oh, the dirt. One does not get the cleanest sort of people in a London hospital, but after a fortnight or three weeks in the trenches, well, as the London coster said, 'There ain't no word.' I simply had to give him a shampoo before I could reach the wound."

Nurse Neale has graphically described the various duties that fall to the lot of a Red Cross nurse at the battle front and near the base where the wounded men are restored to health and in many cases, almost brought back to life, so terrible are the conditions under which they are fighting at the present time. It will be readily realized that this work can only be carried on successfully if the people of Canada give it their hearty support, both in material and actual cash.

It will be necessary to prepare for many more months of war, and as long as this dreadful campaign lasts so will comforts be needed for the troops and money needed to purchase necessities for use in the hospitals and near the trenches where the wounded men are given first aid. So much can be done in the way of knitting circles, entertainments, contests of various kinds, and those who unselfishly give up some of the more frivolous enjoyments of life and take up the more serious ones as befits the present period in our national history will be rendering a service to their country and their countrymen as valued as those who are actually engaged in the force of arms.

Besides cash contributions, the Red Cross Society is in need most especially of socks, sizes 11 and 11½, grey flannel shirts, the patterns of which will be supplied on application to the society, and knitted knee caps, patterns of which will also be sent to those making application. The headquarters of the society are at 77 King Street East, Toronto, Ontario, Canada, to which all contributions should be sent.

The Board Is Supreme

When It Comes to Obtaining Money From the City Council

The eighteen thousand dollar overdraft which the Board of Education is anxious to have paid off will be included in the judicial enquiry that was sanctioned by the City Council at the regular meeting that was held last evening. The amount represents the money that was spent in excess of the original appropriation of eighty-five thousand dollars for the construction of the East and West Ward Schools. Mr. G. N. Gordon's qualifications for the office of City Solicitor and member of the School Board will be included in the same investigation.

Mr. Eastwood, who was present on behalf of the School Board, was examined at length by Ald. McIntyre in respect to a number of items that appeared in the statement relating to the overdraft. One item referred to the purchase of the East Ward School site, which had exceeded the original estimate. Mr. Eastwood drew the Council's attention to the fact that the old West Ward School property was still in the hands of the Board, and when disposed of would go towards reducing the overdraft.

"Are you going to return the money to the City when you dispose of the property?" enquired Ald. Stratton.

"We propose to use it in connection with a system of technical education," replied Mr. Eastwood.

WILL ISSUE DEBENTURES.

On motion of Aldermen Stratton and McIntyre, it was decided to issue debentures to the amount of eighteen thousand dollars, with a rider added that if the Board exceed any future appropriation without the approval of the Council, the overdraft will not be paid.

Mr. Eastwood objected to the rider on the grounds that it was not fair to the Board, especially in view of the fact that the Council had no option but to pay the account.

Ald. Green: "So far as current expenditures are concerned, we must meet the demands. That is the law. It's another matter when it comes to meeting expenditures connected with the construction of school buildings. We should let the people decide that. We have power to provide any amount of money that the Board may require, but I don't think we should use that power."

Mr. Eastwood: "The law is this—you could submit money by-laws to the people on behalf of the School Board, but if the people turned them down, we could put up the schools and the Department of Education could withhold the grant to the municipality until the money was paid."

Ald. Dobbin: "What's the use of coming to us at all?"

"The Board spend the money and we have got to go to work and dig it up," observed Mayor Buller.

HANDSOME PRESENTATION TO REV. MR. SAWERS FROM ST. LUKE'S

Departing Rector Fittingly Remembered by His Congregation at Gathering Last Evening—The Speeches

At a largely attended congregational meeting at St. Luke's Church, last an outstanding evidence of Mr. Sawbeen Rector for the past four years, and who leaves for Cobourg to-morrow, was tendered a farewell presentation in the form of an illuminated address and a handsome cabinet of sterling silver.

The chair was taken by Mr. R. B. Rogers, who referred in a few brief words to the object of the gathering, to say good-bye to their Rector, prior to his departure for his new field of labour. Everyone associated with St. Luke's felt keenly Mr. Sawers' removal from their midst, but rejoiced in the recognition that has been shown his abilities in the appointment to the bigger charge.

Mr. J. J. Turner, Jr.

Mr J. J. Turner, Jr., was next called upon, and in the course of his remarks, paid a glowing tribute to the wonderful work accomplished by Rev. Mr. Sawers during his pastorate at St. Luke's. He referred to his own associations with Mr. Sawers, which had always been of the happiest character. The Rector's kindly advice and ever readiness to do his share in the carrying out of many enterprises, had always been most encouraging. The splendid, flourishing condition of the Parish at the present time was outstanding evidence of Mr. Sawers' ability to accomplish things and

The Presentation.

Mr. E. A. Peck was the next speaker and after referring to the object which had brought them together, read the following adress to Rev. Mr. Sawers:

To Rev. F. J. Sawers, M. A. Rector of St. Luke's Church, Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Mr. Sawers,—The congregation of St. Luke's Church wishes this evening to convey to you something of the feeling with which it views your departure for another and more important work, and a wider field of usefulness. True it is, men grow to meet responsibility, and in so doing carry willingly the burden imposed. That you will be entirely adequate, both in a personal sense and as willingly assume the greater cares incidental in your advancement we are quite assured.

You came to us, and during your encumberance have met every wish that we put forward, and every call that we could have suggested, made on you time and attention. You have been most worthily Rector, Comrade, Friend and Confidant. Your sympathy has ever been entrusted and appreciated. You have generously given of time and means that nothing might be left undone by the Rector that would make for further prosperity and advancement of the Church and congregation.

Four years have passed very quickly, all too short for you, never too long for us. Your zeal we have remarked, your assiduous attention to detail has been noticed, while the larger and broader things appertaining to the Church have been skillfully administered. The congregation has grown, our borders enlarged, and unity and concord are a marked feature of intercourse between Rector and people.

We know that you will carry to your new field just those qualities of mind and heart that will presently draw to you the generous commenation as deserved, as it will be a recognition. We look to see you make advancement in the affairs of the Anglican Church, and in years to come grow to be one of those whose work and administration is such as the Church will rely on for advice and counsel.

The several Societies and Organizations within St. Luke's all bear testimony to your helping hand. Not only has the Church as a whole made substantial progress, but each interest has been guided and strengthened so as to become a source of support and help in carrying on the work. The Sunday School will, in you, lose a friend and advisor, and one ever energetic in this work.

Not only in the Church, but outside you will sever relations of large moment. No man who comes into a community and contents himself with the duties of his profession or occupation is a true citizen. Only those who do a distinct service to and for the public may be so named. You have been a citizen of the City ever ready to help in all good movements, to assist by advice, counsel and active work. For this you will be gratefully remembered by the community at large, while the recollection of your association with the congregation will ever be a green and pleasant memory.

And we ask, Reverend Sir, that you accept on behalf of the Congregation, the Cabinet of Sterling Silver, as a gift from your friends and people, who part with you most reluctantly, but know that the Parish of Cobourg is to be congratulated, while that of St. Luke's has lost a true friend, a most efficient and capable Rector and sincere Christian gentleman.

Signed on behalf of the congregation—

Geo. Curtis,
S. Gaskins,
Church Wardens

Mr. Sawers' Reply.

Mr. Sawers, in most appreciative terms, thanked his congregation for their very beautiful gift and the kind words embodied in the address. He spoke at some length of his happy associations at St. Luke's. He would have liked to have stayed longer in this parish, but when the Bishop wrote him, urging him to accept the Rectorship of St. Peter's Church, Cobourg, he felt it his duty to go. He liked a long ministry, but he had never yet had one. He had been moved about a great deal. However, if he had been allowed to remain a few years longer, the parting would only have been made the harder.

He spoke of the untiring loyalty of the officials, and like the officials, so were the people. In unity there was strength, and the secret of the spiritual growth and prosperity of St. Luke's was in the fact that all had worked harmoniously together. The Ladies' Aid, that had accomplished such wonderful things, the growth of the Sunday School and the faithful services of the Choir, under the able leadership of Mrs. W. A. Greenslade, were all referred to in eulogistic terms by Mr. Sawers. He expressed, on behalf of Mrs. Sawers, her deep regret at her inability to be present. He conveyed her best wishes to the people of St. Luke's, and, in conclusion, assured those present that St. Luke's would be ever close to their hearts and their unvarying kindness would never be forgotten.

The meeting closed with the singing of Auld Lang Syne, and the Benediction, by Mr. Sawers.

Reply From Mr. R. H. Parsons

As to Whether He Possesses a Diploma

The appended communication has been received by the City Council in reply to Alderman McIntyre's request for information as to whether City Engineer R. H. Parsons, possessed a diploma.

"I received my engineering education at the University of Michigan. About two months before I would have received my diploma, through the Dean of the Engineering Department, I was offered a position with the Pennsylvania Railway, which I accepted. This was in 1897, and since that time, or about 18 years, I have been continuously engaged in engineering work. The last 14 years have been spent entirely in municipal engineering work, most of it in Ottawa and Toronto.

"I might say that the question as to whether I had a diploma or not was never raised until after I came to Peterborough."

R. H. PARSONS.

HE SAYS HE TOLD HIS NEIGHBOURS

And They Told Him to Try Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Mike Rudy, Young Manitoba Farmer, Sick for Two Years, Tells how He Got a New Lease of Life.

Camperville, Man., Feb. 1.—(Special)—Cured of Kidney and Heart Disease of two years standing, Mr. Mike Rudy, a well known young farmer, living near here, is telling his neighbours that he owes his new lease of life to Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"For two years," Mr. Rudy states, "I suffered with a terrible pain in the small of my back and shoulders. I took many different medicines, and was under the doctor's care, but nothing seemed to do me any lasting good. Finally heart disease was added to my troubles.

"Hearing Dodd's Kidney Pills well spoken of by my neighbours, I decided to try them. To my surprise and relief one box cured me completely."

Dodd's Kidney Pills cured Mr. Rudy because his troubles all came from sick kidneys. Dodd's Kidney Pills are a kidney remedy, pure and simple. If you have pain in the back, rheumatism, lumbago, gravel or diabetes, your kidneys are wrong. You need Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Site For The Disposal Plant

Is Responsible for a Mild Display of Fireworks in the City Council

More than the usual number of citizens attended last night's meeting of the City Council. The majority of them left before the meeting was half over so that it fell to the lot of the five who remained to witness a verbal engagement between Alderman McIntyre and Alderman Green. The former was insistent that work on the outfall sewer should be rearranged so as not to jeopardize the city's interests in event of the city having to select another site for the sewage disposal plant. The men are now working on Prince George street, whereas Alderman McIntyre wanted the work started on Park street so that if another site was selected the course of the sewer would not have to be changed. At present the work is costing the city one hundred dollars a day. Alderman McIntyre insisted that the Council get a permit from the Provincial Board of Health authorizing the construction of the sewer along the present proposed course.

No Doubt Whatever.

Mayor Buller said that he did not think that there was any doubt but that the Provincial Board would see that the city secured the site that has been selected.

Alderman McIntyre—"I want it to go on record that I am against it." He then moved that the Council first obtain the assurance of the Provincial Board that the present proposed site would be adopted and in the meantime have the sewer started on Park street. Alderman Weir seconded this. He thought that the Council made a great mistake by not starting on the street referred to.

Alderman Green assured the Council that the city was working in accordance with the instructions of the Provincial Board of Health. The city was not anxious to undertake the work in the first place, but was forced to do so, through the action instituted by the adjacent townships. He did not think that there was any danger but what the plant would be situated upon the site selected. The city would have to go wherever the Board designated despite the protest of Mr. H. P. Kennedy, or anyone else.

"A Donnybrook."

"If we have got to fight we might as well fight H. P. Kennedy as anyone else," put in Alderman Green. "The work will be done in accordance with the plans of the City Engineer who was employed for that purpose, whether it is our present engineer or some other."

"It will be done according to the idea of the Council," thundered Alderman McIntyre. To emphasize his remark he pounded on the desk and shortened up the distance between himself and Alderman Green.

Alderman Johnston—"First thing we know we'll have a little Donnybrook here."

"We have got some good big men downstairs," put in Mayor Buller. The latter thought that the Council should have more confidence in the City Engineer.

Alderman McIntyre's motion was defeated. Outside of the seconder no one voted for it.

RULES OF HEALTH FOR DYSPEPTICS

DIETING UNNECESSARY

There are two ways by which people who suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia, sour stomach, flatulence, etc., can overcome the trouble. First, as practically all cases of the above are directly or indirectly traceable to acidity and fermentation, they can eliminate from their diet all foods which ferment and form acid, such as all starches and sugar and foods containing them, thus prohibiting bread, potatoes, fruits and most meats. About the only safe foods are gluten breads, spinach and small quantities of white meat of chicken or turkey. This diet is almost a starvation one, but it is sometimes quite effective. The second way, which appeals especially to those who like to eat hearty meals of good foods, is to eat whatever is reasonably digestible, neutralise the acid and stop fermentation by the use of a good antacid such as bisurated magnesia, a teaspoonful of which in a little water immediately after eating or whenever pain is felt, instantly neutralises the acid, stops the fermentation and permits the stomach to do its work without pain or hindrance. Owing to its simplicity, convenience and effectiveness this latter plan is now being adopted, instead of the old fashioned, expensive, weakening starvation process. In this connection it is interesting to note that since the widespread use of bisurated magnesia was established, many druggists have arranged to supply it in 5 gr. tablets 7 or 8 of which are equivalent to a teaspoonful of the powder form and are much more convenient to carry.

All Saints' Choir Honour One of Their Number Who is Going to the Front

Last evening Coleman's Parlours were the scene of song and mirth. The adult members of All Saints' Choir, about 40, had met to say farewell to one of its much loved members, in the person of Mr. Harold Farr, who is leaving with the Third Contingent Mounted Rifles. Supper was partaken of, and the choirmaster, Mr. Geo. E. Chandler, in a few well chosen words, voiced the feelings of the choir, and their great sorrow at losing such a tried and valued member, and asked his acceptance of a small tangible recognition in the shape of a watch which was fastened to his wrist by Miss B. Dawson, to the tune of "He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

Mr. Farr made a neat and fitting reply, and thanked the choir for their kindness, expressing the pleasure it had given him during his membership, and hoping to soon be with them all again.

Songs, recitations and speeches were then the order, and a happy evening was brought to a close, with the singing of "Auld Lang Syne," and "God Save the King."

The unavoidable absence of the rector, Rev. R. B. Grobb, was much regretted by all.

The supper was excellently served, and reflected much credit on Coleman's catering.

WARTS REMOVED WITHOUT PAIN.

Putnam's Painless Wart and Corn Extractor never fails to remove Warts, Corns or Bunions, without pain, in a few hours. Give Putnam's a trial.

Beware of Trouble

It is the wisest thing you can do to have your watch examined at this time of the year.

The cold weather is apt to harden the oil—that strains the mainspring and affects the motion.

People usually wait until something breaks. The other way is the cheapest in the end and a little attention at the right time saves the watch.

Afterwards he joined, as a sustentation student, the Royal Manchester College of Music, which had been recently founded by the late Sir Charles Halle, conductor and pianist. Mr. Smith continued his studies there for four years, after which he matriculated and took his degree with record marks in harmony and musical composition at the Manchester University. Since then he has been a member of various orchestras in England. He joined the famous Halle band in 1908 and a year afterwards was invited by Dr. Hans Richter to become a member of the celebrated orchestra at the Royal Opera, Covent Garden. This, with much private work, occupied his time very fully until a year ago, when he took up his residence in Toronto.

The Belleville train, due at 8 a.m., arrived at 11.10 a.m. The early morning train from Lindsay got stuck in Beals cut, but got through about 11.30 a.m. It left this afternoon for the east, and shortly afterwards was reported stuck-bound near Drummond Station. Two engines were despatched from Peterborough to haul her back to the city, where she will be cancelled for the day.

Double headers are being used on all the Grand Trunk trains through the city, excepting on the Lakefield run.

C.P.R. in Trouble, Too.

Several people were late at business this morning and at noon.

The Street Railway men had their troubles too. Two sweepers have been busy trying to keep the lines open, but it is impossible to keep the cars running on time. The lines in the outlying districts are the most troublesome. On George Street there are a number of cars passing every hour, and it is not so difficult to keep the track clear, but at other places the snow is coming down faster than it can be cleared.

Clock Stopped.

The town clock on the Market Square stopped a couple of times today. It has evidently been affected by the storm also.

NOBILITY AT THE FRONT.

British Tommy Has Some Class by His Side

LONDON, Feb. 1—There are 178 Peers serving in the British Army, including eight dukes, ten marquesses, sixty-one earls, twenty-two viscounts and seventy-seven barons. The Earl of Annesley, Viscount Hawarden and Lord Congleton have been killed in battle, and the Duke of Roxburghe, the Marquesses of Northampton and Tweeddale, the Earl of Leven, and Lords Gerard and Somers have been wounded, while the Earls of Erne and Stair have been taken prisoners by the Germans.

Lord Somers and his brother-in-law, Lord Hyde, came to Canada in 1912 and established an ideal fruit farm at Pickering, Ont. His uncle, Mr. Perry Somers-Cocks, had already been farming in Canada for eighteen years.

Lord Somers, who is a descendant of one of the most famous Lord Chancellors, is a fine specimen of manhood, standing well over six feet in height. He is duly entitled both to speak and vote in the House of Lords. He is fairly well off, having an income of $12,500 a year from the entailed property of his Barony. He will, however, become a very rich man on the death of his kinswomen, Lady Henry Somerset and the Dowager Duchess of Bedford.

At the outbreak of the war he at once returned to England to join his regiment, the 1st Life Guards. He was previously reported wounded on December 14th.

BROTHERHOOD OF KINDNESS

"Be ye kind one to another."—Eph. iv., 32.

The train was very crowded. On board was a frail mother, who looked ill, with five little ones, the youngest a baby in arms, which was very fretful. Next to age was a wee boy, who had on new boots which, though they evidently hurt him cruelly, he absolutely refused to allow to be taken off, as he seemed afraid he might lose them. A tall and grave-looking minister came on board. He had not been settled in his seat many minutes before he went to the rescue of that little woman. He made her lie down. To the amusement of some, the admiration of others, and the interest of all, he then walked up and down in the aisle with the baby, until he had it asleep. Then, the hardest of all, he attempted to get those new boots off, which after much persuasion and diplomacy, he succeeded in doing.

Many in that car will never forget that object lesson. But the greatest test of true kindness is practising it habitually in the wear and tear of the familiar home life. That requires far more strength of Christian forbearance than the occasional act of courtesy or attention shown to an outsider or a stranger.

It is often trying to give up the easy chair to one of the family, even though one knows it ought to be done. It is very hard, in the midst of an interesting book, to stop to search for those spectacles that hide so provokingly. Very often acts of service for our own are performed so grudgingly and ungraciously that the recipient wishes sadly that there had been no need for help.

Another scene is also recalled. At the top of a sloping gangway stood, hesitating, a lame old woman, as sweet-looking as she was timid. Immediately two men rushed to help her; one, a dignified, immaculately-dressed gentleman, the other, a grimy, coal-blackened stoker. One on each side, they carefully and tenderly helped her down. In this way did those two extremes meet, the link being brotherly kindness.

May we wait on our dear ones just as courteously and graciously as we would on the stranger or friend that needs our help, and try to do it all the time, not spasmodically.—I. H. N.

The best help is not to bear the troubles of others for them, but to inspire them with courage and energy to bear their burdens for themselves and meet the difficulties of life bravely.

WHAT "K" STANDS FOR.

It has been pointed out by an English contemporary that this is a war in which the letter "K" is playing an important part. As a rule this letter is one of the least used in the alphabet, but it seems to have a great vogue in the present war. The Kaiser, the Krupps and Kuller are the three big factors in the German war of aggression. On our side we have Khchener of Khartoum, who is getting together an army of Khaki and Kilted soldiers. There is then the Kiel Canal as an object of attack, to say nothing of Konigsberg. Our soldiers are having their Kits filled with comforts supplied by Knitting ladies, and are fighting for "King and Kindred."—Journal of Commerce.

PETERBORO' BONSPIEL OPENS WITH OVER FIFTY RINKS

Arrival of Entries, However, Depends Upon Train Service—Big Success Promised If All Rinks Arrive.

NOTES OF PROCEEDINGS

THE BONSPIEL COMMITTEE.

Chairman—W. G. Morrow.
Secretary—Harry Foote.
Executive—W. G. Ferguson, R. Harstone, R. Neill, Geo. H. Giroux, H. R. H. Keaner.

Between fifty and fifty-five rinks are entered in the Peterborough Bonspiel which opened at the Curling Rink this afternoon with the first draw at 1:30 o'clock. February blew in with one of the most copious storms in years, copious both in wind and snow that tangled railway systems and suspended schedules. While it appeared, early this morning, that the bonspiel was being seriously threatened, the management resorted to the telephone and learned that all the rinks were on the way, either waiting at stations or stalled somewhere on the way to Peterborough. The bonspiel schedule was immediately proceeded with. At one o'clock there was an encouraging representation of clubs and the draws will proceed through the preliminary round and will be filled out as the other rinks arrive.

The first draw was as follows:

W. G. Morrow, skip, vs. W. A. Davis, skip, Bobcaygeon.

T. F. Matthews vs. W. Campbell.

A. Moore vs. J. E. A. Fitzgerald.

E. J. Broad, Bobcaygeon, vs. Geo. Sinclair, Orillia.

Stewart vs. McCamus, of Keene.

Farewell, Orillia, vs. Needler, Millbrook.

Bottum, of Bobcaygeon, vs. Nicholl, of Norwood.

The second draw is at 4:30, and the round will continue all night, it is understood, if the trains arrive in the meantime.

Among the rinks represented at one o'clock were: Norwood, Keene, Millbrook, Oshawa, Peterborough, Orillia, and Bobcaygeon.

Curling notes

"If the bear stayed out to-day, he's a 'damfool,'" said a visiting curler.

Two hand-picked rinks were drawn against each other in the first draw. Tough, eh!

Two Oshawa rinks struck a snap, being drawn against the local Tankard rinks, thus getting a default.

Orillia's extra rinks could not get home this morning. Hence they decided to take the bonspiel splash.

Skips McDermid, Moore Fitzgerald and others were playing at 2 a.m. today and also at 2 p.m. Verily, a strenuous week.

John H. Renwick, Felix Brownscombe and Harry Foote did the worrying over the schedule.

Skip Campbell of Keene keeps young playing curling.

Skip Woods of Millbrook, reneged at the last minute, but two rinks reported.

Scarborough Was Remembered In Recent Naval Battle

LONDON, Feb. 1.—A naval chaplain, who was in the North Sea battle, in a letter to a relative, says:

"The public would have loved to have heard the cries of the men as they loaded the guns. 'Three for Scarborough!' 'That's for the child-killers.' Then 'Tipperary,' and the enthusiasm was intense. They are splendid fellows and I just love them."

Russians Abandon March On Konisberg

ALL POLAND IS NOW A BLOODY BATTLE GROUND

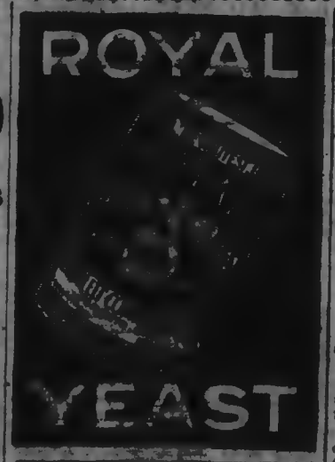
Official German Despatches Report Furious German Attacks Along the Bzura--Germans Considerably Reinforced

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

PETROGRAD, Feb. 4.—All Poland from Warsaw west to the Prussian frontier is now a bloody battle ground. Official despatches to-day reported furious German attacks along the Bzura. Sanguinary fighting proceeded the capture by the Russians of Skempe, north of the Vistula, southwest of Warsaw. The Czar's aviators rained bombs with deadly effect upon German concentration camps. "The Germans have been considerably reinforced," was the official admission from the general staff to-day. "East of Warsaw, in the region of Goumin and Borzhymow, south of the Bzura, heavy artillery fire continues day and night. Stubborn hand to hand fighting continues at all hours, with both sides suffering severe losses. Goumin is still held by our forces, though the enemy is making desperate attacks in that region. A victory for the Russians north of the Vistula aroused enthusiasm to-day."

Have Abandoned March.

LONDON, Feb. 4.— The Russians have abandoned their march upon Konigsberg. For the last three days no mention of any progress of the campaign north-east of Insterburg has been contained in official despatches from Petrograd. Advices received to-day said that the Czar's armies have encountered superior forces of the enemy west of Pilkallen and have been forced to halt their advance south-east of Insterburg. A Russian force assigned to push in a north-westerly direction along the railway leading through Insterberg to Konigsberg, made desperate efforts to cross the Angerap at Darkehmen, on the railroad. The Germans suffered heavy losses from Russian shells, but occupied such strong positions on the west bank that Russian attacks were unsuccessful. Russian cavalry, however, drove the Germans out of a village on the west bank of Angerap, south of Darkehmen and the village is now occupied by the Czar's troops north-east of Insterberg. The Russians encountered unexpectedly large forces of Germans concentrated along the Lasdehmen-Mallwischken line, west of Pilkallen. German prisoners taken in this vicinity reported that some reinforcements had been brought into East Prussia from Flanders, along the western battle line to-day. Military experts were chiefly concerned over new German attacks near Verdun. The army of the German Crown Prince has resumed its efforts to drive in French infantrymen entrenched outside the besieged city.



TO STOP TRANSPER OF ENGLISH TROOPS

Will Try to Engage British Fleet in Southern Waters—Last Night's Late Bulletins

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, Feb. 3.—The Kaiser's visit to Wilhelmshaven is believed to be in connection with new naval developments and to stop the transportation of English troops to France.

LONDON, Feb. 3.—It is rumoured here that Germany will try to engage the British fleet in the southern waters, while another fleet goes north to intercept British transportation.

PETROGRAD, Feb. 3.—Turkish reports of great successes in the Caucasus in their advance towards Batum are not recognized by Russian military authorities.

PARIS, Feb. 3.—Continued heavy charges of Germans at St. Paul near Soissons have been repulsed. French reinforcements are taking the offensive at this point.

London In Darkness For Two Hours When News Is Flashed "The Zeppelins Are Coming"

Hostile Airships Seen Over Dover Are Driven Away by Fire From Forts, But War Office Sends Police to Blind All Lights in Metropolis as Safeguard Against Raid.

LONDON, Feb. 4.—London for two hours Monday night had the appearance of a dead city. Blinds were drawn and lights were extinguished when word was flashed to all police stations stations from the War Office to prepare for an attack by Zeppelins.

It was a few minutes before eight o'clock when the police were told that five Zeppelins had been sighted over Dover, presumably headed inland, and had been fired on by the forts. Immediately every policeman, acting on instructions recently given to him for his guidance in such an emergency, hurried over his post and issued warnings that covered the metropolitan district under a blanket of darkness. At the same time the gas works and the electric illuminating stations were notified to be ready to cut off all illuminations at a moment's notice.

For more than two hours the city lived without light or remained behind shutters through which no rays from gas or incandescent could penetrate. Gradually, as nothing unusual occurred, the watchfulness of the police relaxed and normal life was resumed. At several of the railway stations the lights were extinguished and trains passing over the bridges did so in darkness.

The only information vouchsafed by the police authorities regarding their precautions was the statement that orders had been issued from the War Office to prepare for an air raid. These orders are thought to have resulted from despatches from Dover, reaching London about half-past seven o'clock. The first despatch said five hostile airships were seen over the city and that they were under the fire of the anti-aircraft guns in the forts. Half an hour later a second message said the gun fire apparently had been effective and that the air raiders had turned about and sailed away eastward, penetrating inland.

That submarines accompanied the airships or were engaged in an independent raid is indicated by a despatch at eleven o'clock to the Exchange Telegraph Company, which said that the harbour batteries opened fire while searchlights played over the water.

"It is believed," the message said, "that German submarines were the cause of the activity."

Telephone calls from London to Harwick, Cromer, South End, King's Lynn, Yarmouth and other points elicited the reply that no air raiders had been seen at these points. The Official Press Bureau issued no statement.

The flurry in London caused by the police activities served to break the monotony of the news from the battle fronts, where none of the armies, either in the east or the west, has been able to deliver a blow sufficient to cause any shift in their alignment.

The extended precautions taken in London indicated the fact that virtually all special constables, under the regulations, were required to report at the various stations, even those attending the theatres, where, in some cases, the audiences were greatly depleted.

The circular of instructions outlining to the police their duties in event of a raid has just reached the men. It is a voluminous document, but even after the policeman has digested and memorized its provisions for various detailed duties he is informed that "these instructions are issued for the guidance of the police generally, but the action taken must necessarily be dependent on circumstances." The more important instructions are as follows:

"Any police officer who becomes cognizant of a bomb explosion, and so forth, will immediately give an alarm, call the fire brigade and acquaint the nearest police station by the most rapid means available. If any persons have received injury he will summon medical aid and proceed to render all possible assistance.

"The officer in charge at a police station, on receipt of information as above, will immediately despatch as many police as possible, some with lamps, to the scene, and, if medical aid is likely to be required, will summon local physicians and send all available ambulances. He will also acquaint, first, the chief station; second, surrounding stations, with a view to obtaining aaid. If there are many injured he will notify local hospitals and infirmaries. Motor garages and private persons also may be requested to send motor cars.

"The officer on duty at a chief station will at once wire to headquarters and inform his superintendent. Having done so, he will, if circumstances call for such action, send all available ambulances and police to the scene and will then apply to hospitals, boards of guardians, Metropolitan Asylums Board and local authorities for horse and motor ambulances. The earliest possible information is also to be sent to the St. John Ambulance Association and the headquarters of the Fire Brigade.

"The telegraph operations at the Central Office will at once transmit the messages received to the Admiralty and the War Office, then to the Commissioner, Assistant Commissioners, Chief Constables, Special Constabulary Headquarters and all stations.

"The special constabulary will cooperate with the police. Upon alarm being given, special constables in the neighbourhood, whether on duty (not guarding vulnerable points) or off duty, have instructions to proceed to the scene or to the police station, whichever is the nearer, and to report themselves to the senior officer of police. Special constables on duty at vulnerable points are not to leave them and are to be especially on the alert in protecting them.

"Police officers off duty or on leave, on hearing that an explosion has taken place or that incendiary fires have broken out, should proceed at once to the nearest police station. The officer in charge at each station will, on receipt of the message notifying of an explosion, issue all available automatic pistols to officers qualified to use them. These officers will remain at the station on reserve pending directions.

AMERICANS NOT ASTONISHED BY BRITAIN'S ACTION

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—The Tribune this morning says editorially:

Great Britain's decision to treat as contraband all foodstuffs, destined for Germany, does not come as a surprise. The recent action of the German Government in commandeering all food and grain supplies obliterated the distinction which it was formerly possible to make between food intended for the use of non-combatants and food intended for he use of the armies.

The taking over of all food supplies by a belligerent Government is a new thing in war, and has been made necessary only because war is now conducted on an unexampledly vast scale. Because of changed war conditions old relations between neutrals and belligerents must undergo many modifications. Existing disputes about the laws of contraband are due more to a new pressure of circumstances than to any deliberate desire on the part of one belligerent or another to restrict neutral rights. That fact should be taken into account in passing on the merits of such disputes. It is natural and proper for neutrals to want to preserve the accepted principles of the code governing neutral trade. But in the application of these principles a fair allowance must always be made for the revolutionary changes in the scope and conditions of warfare, which every great new war is likely to bring about.

France Still Has 2,750,000 Men That She Can Count On

PARIS, Feb. 4.—Despite the losses suffered and the errors dearly paid for at the beginning it may be affirmed that the power of France has steadily grown since the beginning of the war. Leaders and soldiers become veterans. The mad bravery of the first days has given place to seasoned courage and to patience in the face of all difficulties.

The loss of officers in the beginning was considerable. Including the killed, wounded, missing and sick, it amounts now about 60 per cent. of the total number. Many officers easily distinguishable by their uniforms, exposed themselves unnecessarily.

The French effective, after five months of war and despite heavy losses, has increased. Of men hors de combat the French enumerate 950,000 killed and missing and about 490,000 wounded and sick; of the latter at least 50 per cent. have already rejoined their regiments.

Two classes of conscripts have been called, furnishing a total of about 450,000 young men, whose period of training is ended and who are at the front. The reserves of the active army, the territorials and the reserve classes of the territorial army that have been called thus far have furnished nearly 1,500,000 men. Including the classes of 1914 and 1915, there are 2,000,000 men, in round numbers, to which may be added the 800,000 men of the active army, giving a total of 2,800,000 men. From this number one may substract the 250,000 killed and missing and one-half the 490,000 wounded or sick, or 500,000 in all. There then remains 2,300,000 able bodied fighting men of France under arms.

A re-examination of men hitherto exempted should give an additional 250,000 men. To these must still be added the 200,000 soldiers of the class of 1916 now being prepared for service. That makes 2,750,000 men on whom France can still count.

Member of Pat's Pets Injured When Jack Johnson Hit Trench

SPECIAL CABLE:

TORONTO, Feb. 4.—How one member of the Princess Pats found his way to a hospital in England is told in the letter received to-day by his Toronto family from Mr. A. J. Dorney. He writes from the 3rd Southern General Hospital, Oxford, Eng., to which he has been transferred from the Berlieu Hospital, France.

"First of all, I must tell you why I am here. I got buried up in the trenches near Ypres. A German Jack Johnson shell hit the bank in front and our trench fell in on top of us all. Several of our regiment were killed and wounded, but I got buried up. It crushed my stomach and legs a little, fairly gave me a shock. I could hardly walk but they took me to a hospital on a gun carriage. I was sent down the line to Perlieu Hospital, thence on to Rouen. Here they decided to send me to England.

"I am the only Canadian in this ward. There are three of us in the hospital, one shot in the neck, and the other crushed in the trench with myself. I am on chicken diet. We get well looked after by the nurses. We were in the trenches near Ypres, in Belgium. Over your knees in mud and water. I lost all my belongings when we got buried up, even my Princess Mary's tobacco box."

A Never Failing Way to Banish Ugly Hairs

(Aids to Beauty)

No woman is immune to superfluous growths, and because these are likely to appear at any time, it is advisable to always have some delatone powder handy to use when the occasion arises. A paste is made with some of the powder and water and spread upon the hairy surface; in about 2 minutes this is carefully removed and the skin washed. You will then find that your skin is entirely free from hair or fuss. Be sure, however, to get real delatone.

Retired Manufacturer Keeps Even the Name of His Wife a Secret

Special to The Examiner:

CLEVELAND, Feb. 3—J. W. Conger, seventy-two years old, formerly member of the Auld & Conger Company, roofing manufacturers, after secretly wedding his housekeeper, twenty-three years old, is now somewhere upon the Pacific Ocean with her on their way to Japan, where they will pass a few months. Later they will go to China. They intend to be away a year.

Mr. Copger, who was a widower and prominent in club circles, kept his marriage a deep secret until to-day. Early last August he slipped quietly away from Cleveland, and on his return declined to tell friends where he had been. Two weeks ago he turned his business over to his son, F. H. Conger, and procured a passport to Japan. On January 24th he left with his bride for San Francisco.

Members of the family on Monday were reticient in speaking of the marriage. David Auld, whose partner Mr. Conger formerly was, said to-day that he had learned of the marriage in August, but helped to keep the affair secret.

"It was an elopement pure and simple," said Mr. Auld. "I suppose age has no effect on the desire for romance."

Members of the family of F. H. Conger, the bridegroom's son, said Mr. Conger had kept his marriage, and the name of his bride a secret from them.

ENQUIRY INTO WHEAT ACTIVITY TO BE PRESSED

Phenomenal Advances in Wheat and Flour Prices Force Washington to Take Vigorous Action

CHICAGO, Feb. 4.—As a result of the phenomenal activity of the wheat market and the advance in price of bread and other bakery products, the Government's investigation of wheat and flour prices became more pressing to-day.

Subpoenas were ordered issued by Charles F. Clyne, U. S. District Attorney, to bring in the books and records of a number of big grain companies, among them the Armour Grain Company, J. Rosenbaum Grain Co., and Bartley, Frazier and Co. The District Attorney, it was announced, desires to investigate their connection with elevator lines in the west and north-west.

The amount of grain handled by the companies since the outbreak of the European war, and how much grain is stored in Chicago elevators at present was said to be the object of the new enquiry.

"THE BATTLE CRY"

Charles Neville Buck

CHAPTER XXX.

It was a very expeditious trial. Judge Sidering glanced at the faces of Old Milt and young Jeb and had no desire to prolong the agony of those hours. The defence half-heartedly relied upon the old device of a false alibi which the State promptly punctured and riddled. Even the lawyers seemed in haste to be through and set a voluntary limit on their arguments.

At the end His Honour read brief instructions and the panel was locked in its room.

Then the McBriars drew a little closer around the chair where Old Milt waited and the militia captain strengthened his guard outside and began unostentatiously sprinkling uniformed men through the dingy court-room until the hodden-gray throng was flecked with blue.

The lawyers rose and stretched their arms and stood chatting and chewing tobacco about the rusty stove. Milt McBriar and the accused whispered together, wearing faces devoid of expression, but through and over this affectation of the casual, brooded the spirit of the portentous.

The militia officers who stood charged with the duty of curbing these dangerous potentialities made no attempt to conceal their anxious earnestness, and Jeb McNash in whose eyes dwelt the fierce intentness of a cat at a house-hole was not dissembling either.

At length there came a rap on the door of the jury-room and instantly the low drone of voices fell to a hush. His Honour poured a glass of water from the chipped pitcher at his elbow while Luke Thixton and Milt McBriar, for all their forced immobility of feature, stiffly braced themselves. Like some restless animal of many legs the rough throng along the court-room benches scraped its feet on the floor.

Young Jeb shifted his chair a few inches so that the figure of the defendant might be in an uninterrupted line of vision. He leaned far forward with his eyes riveted on the face of the man he hated. His right hand quietly slipped under his coat, and his fingers loosened a weapon in its holster and nursed the trigger.

Then with a dragging of shoe leather the twelve "good men and true" shambled to a semi-circle before the bench, gazing stolidly and blankly at the rows of battered law-books which served His Honour as a back ground.

There they stood awkwardly in the gaze of all eyes. Judge Sidering glanced into the beetling countenance of their foreman and inquired in that bored voice which seems a judicial affectation even in questions of life and death, "Gentlemen, have you agreed upon a verdict?"

The foreman nodded. The sheet of paper, which he passed to the Clerk, had been signed by more than one juror with a cross-mark because he could not write.

"We, the jury," read the Clerk in a clear voice, "find the defendant Luke Thixton guilty as charged in the indictment."

There although he had not yet reached the end he indulged in a dramatic pause, then read on the more important clause in the terms of the Kentucky law which leaves the placing of the penalty in the hands of the jurors—"and fix his punishment at death."

As though relieved from a great pressure young Jeb McNash withdrew his hand from his holster and settled back in his chair with flexed muscles. Judge Sidering's formal question broke on dead quiet. "So say you all, gentlemen?" and twelve heads nodded wordless affirmation.

Soldiers filed in from the rear. In less than thirty seconds the prisoner had disappeared. Outside the Gatling guns remained in place, and the troops patrolled the streets.

For two days the McBriars remained in town, but the troops stayed many days, and in that time Luke had again been taken back to Louisville. Neither of the clans would have been foolhardy enough to have defied the warning scowl of Gatling guns that could rake hills and puncture walls as fast as a man could turn a crank.

Once more Old Milt led back a disgruntled faction with no more spirited a programme than to go home and bide their time again. When they brought Luke back to hang him, they would have one final opportunity.

A seeming of quiet under which hot wrath smouldered settled over hill and cove; but a new note began to run through the cabins of the McBriar dependents. It was a note of waning faith and shaken loyalty for their chief.

From every recent clash of brains and efficiency, the younger man west of the ridge had emerged the victor. Old Milt had been a lion once, but now men said: "It sorter seemed like he'd done lost his gumption." So the lesser McBriars with cooling military ardor began sending their children back to school.

Twice Milt had called his clan out to battle and twice they had responded with no faltering or hesitation. Twice he had ordered them home again with nothing done. When next he called there would be men among them who would not stir from their hearths at his bidding. Meantime their children might as well be learning their rudiments, for in spite of all the quick reversion to type at the call of battle, that spirit which Juanita Holland had planted was growing, and in each interval of peace it became more apparent. Many old and acknowledged ideas were being subtly undermined.

Juanita's spirit began to revive again. Her children were coming back to her and elders came with the children. There were guns again in her rack now, and some of them were guns on which the pale wintry light had glinted that day just before Christmas when the McBriars had made their primitive attack on the bastille.

Old Milt read the signs and felt that his dominion was now a thing upon which decay had set its seal, and under his grave face he was masking a breaking heart. His star was setting, and since he was no longer young and was utterly incapable of bending, he sickened slowly through the wet winter, and men spoke of him as an invalid.

With Milt "ailin'" there was no one to take up the reins of clan government and those elements that had been held together only by his iron dominance began drifting asunder and weakening.

One mill day when a group of McBriars met with their sacks of grist at a water-mill someone put the question, "Whose a-going' ter go down thar an 'take Luke Thixton away from ther Haveys now thet Old Milt's about petered out?"

There was a long silence and at last a voice drawled, "Hit hain't a-goin' ter be me. What's Luke Thixton ter me anyhow? He didn't nuver lend me no money."

"I reckon thars a heap o' sense in thet," answered another; "'pears like, when I come ter recollect, mos' of ther figtin' an' fursin'. I've done in my time hain't been in my own quarrels nohow." And slowly that spirit spread and gained recruits for peace.

When Anse Havey went over to the school one day about that time Juanita took him again to the rifle-rack, now once more well filled. "Have a look, my Lord Barbarian," she laughed. "Mars is paying me tribute So ever shall it be with tyranny."

Slowly and one by one Anse Havey took up the pieces and examined them. "It ain't only Mars that's payin' ye tribute," he thought, but he only said: "That's all right. I seem to see more McBriar guns there than Havey guns. It would suit me all right if ye got the last one of 'em."

"Mightn't you as well hang yours there, too?" she challenged. "I'm still willing to give you the honours of war." But he only smiled. "I'll hang mine up last of all, I reckon. Luke Thixton ain't hung yet, and there's other clouds a-brewin' besides that."

"What clouds?" she asked. "Are you still expecting a foreign invasion?"

"There was a bunch of surveyors through here lately," he said slowly. "They just sort of looked round and went away. Some day they'll come back."

"And then?"

Anse Havey shrugged his shoulders. "I may need my gun," he said.

Not until it became certain that he must die did Old Milt send for his son, or even permit him to be told of his illness. But just as the winter's siege was ending Young Milt came home and two days later the mountains heard that the old feudist was dead. When that news reached Luke Thixton in the jail at Louisville he turned his face to the wall of his cell for he knew that his last chance had died with the old McBriar. Now without doubt he must hang.

The father could not force himself as he lay dying in his great four-post bed to make a full confession to his son. Soon he must face a Court where he could no longer dissemble, but he must die without forfeiting Young Milt's respect.

HEART WOULD PALPITATE.

HAD WEAK and DIZZY SPELLS.

Palpitation of the heart is one of the most common of all heart troubles. The heart will beat fast for several seconds, then slow, then start to flutter, and a feeling of utter depression will come over the system accompanied by weak and dizzy spells, making you feel that you are surely going to die. When you feel this way what you require is a real good heart and nerve tonic; one that will strengthen the weak heart and build up the nerve system. For this purpose we know of nothing that can equal Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mrs. J. S. Nicholls, Listowel, Ont., writes: "I was weak and run down, my heart would palpitate, and I would take weak and dizzy spells. A friend advised me to try your Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills so I started at once, and found that I felt much stronger, and my heart was ever so much better within a short time. I cannot praise your medicine too highly for it has done me a world of good. My husband has also been bothered with heart trouble ever since childhood and finds great relief in using your valuable pills."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Before He Became Famous as the Author of Dr. Chase's Receipt Book.

Here is a letter from an aged gentleman who consulted Dr. Chase, long before his Receipt Book attained a world - wide circulation or his family medicines became known to the ends of the earth.

MR. O. D. BARNES.

Like most people of advanced years his kidneys were the first organs to break down and when doctors failed to help him he remembered the physician who cured him of pleurisy in his younger days.

Mr. O. D. Barnes, R.F.D. 1, Byron, Mich., writes:—"About fifty years ago, when living in Ann Arbor, Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous Receipt Book author, was called on to treat me for pleurisy. Ever since that I have used and recommended Dr. Chase's Medicines, and have two of his Receipt Books in the house.

"Some time ago a cold settled in the kidneys, causing backache, frequent urination, dizziness, and affected the eyesight. My appetite failed and I could not sleep nights. Two doctors failed to do me any lasting good, so I started using Dr. A. W. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and Nerve Food. The results have been highly satisfactory to me. Appetite improved, I gained in weight, sleep and rest well, and feel strong and well. My kidneys resumed their natural functions, and I believe that my cure was due to Dr. A. W. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and Nerve Food. I am 78 years old, superintend work on my farm, and can turn in and do some work myself."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Bachelor's Complaint

By F. A. MITCHEL

I am a bachelor, and I propose to remain a bachelor. Heaven forbid that I should be tied by unbreakable chains to one of those paradoxical, unreasonable, illogical creatures, a woman.

Why my bosom friend, Jim Brown, had to put a firebrand between himself and me I can't imagine. We were inseparable. I never felt at home with any other person as with him, and without me he did not know what to do with himself. Suddenly there popped up between us—what? Clothes—many clothes, clothes varying in cut with every season. And within these clothes was a woman.

There is nothing unreasonable about me. I would have been perfectly willing that Jim should go to see this much adorned grownup child once a week and stay till 3 in the morning if he liked. I certainly would never have thought of being jealous of one who is not endowed with a spark of manliness. But she was not satisfied with this. She wanted him all the time. And Jim, poor beggar, was so under her thumb that she did what she liked with him.

Then she must needs nag at him to bring me to see her. Why she wished to meet me was a puzzle. I certainly had no desire to meet her. "Do bring your friend. He must be a lovely man since you are so fond of him." And Jim was fool enough to believe that she wanted to meet me because I was "a lovely man."

Just as soon as they were engaged there was friction as to the evenings she wanted Jim and those I wanted him. I, being a reasonable creature, was willing to divide Jim's evenings with her. Not so she. If Jim made an engagement with me she would make him break it.

Despite all this pulling and hauling for Jim's companionship, he must bring that "lovely" friend of his to see her. I refused to go. This frightened Jim, for he said that it would create an enmity between her and me that would be unpleasant all round. I gave in to Jim—not to her.

Considering what she wanted me for, her treatment of me was remarkable. You would have thought she was in love with me instead of Jim. "I'm awfully glad to see you!" she said, all smiles. "I've heard so much about you that it seems I have known you a long while. You have no idea how fond Jim is of you. You must come and see me often. Any one that Jim speaks of so highly must be very nice."

If you had heard the intonation she gave the words "very nice" you would have realized the irony between the beginning and ending of this sentence.

Mind you, I didn't see through all this then. I confess I was fooled while she was showing plainly that she had an object in fooling me. No one but a woman can coddle a man and let him know that she is stuffing him without repelling him. Instead of repelling she winds him round her finger while she is feeding him poison.

But I know it all now. Jim was married, and when he returned from his wedding trip he tried to grasp my hand with fervor, but it was not the same fervor as before. I knew that I had been supplanted, and, more than this, I knew that his wife had undermined his good opinion of me. Then it became apparent why she wished Jim to bring me to see her. She couldn't attack one she had never seen, or if she did her onslaught would have had no weight. She must have something tangible to attack.

"So this is the wonderful man," I doubt not she said after seeing me, "that you have been lauding to the skies. Why did he not say some of those bright things that you have so often spoken of? Didn't feel well enough acquainted? I suppose I shall have to wait till he does. Some day when he feels more at home here I presume he will deluge us with his wit."

What a melancholy awakening Jim must have had after this first inspection by his ladylove of his bosom friend to discover that I was after all a commonplace person! And how singular it is that these creatures, who do not know the difference between a syllogism and sole leather, can produce on a man of intellectual vigor the effect they require by mere irony! Jim had known me intimately for years, and yet by a few words a woman had shattered his idol.

Jim has a relapse occasionally and drops into my room for a bit of "old times," as he calls them. But he knows they are not old times; they are altered times. Doubtless he thinks that for him they are changed for the better; that he is leaving me in a stationary position, while he has advanced. At any rate, I have noticed that those things I continue to enjoy, or think I enjoy, are beginning to bore him. If I speak of a new play on the boards he will turn the subject to the smart sayings of his little Jim. Then, too, he has become absorbed in piling up money for his wife and children after he has gone. He says it is awful to think of leaving them without support. It seems to me that in getting married he gave up all the fun there is in life to make a slave of himself.

Sometimes I wonder whether if Jim and I had grown old as bachelors we would have maintained the same interest in each other. I fear not. Men develop on different lines. Some men don't develop at all. At any rate, I find that association with any one does not interest me as it once did. I wonder if I will some day regret not having put my head in one of these pestiferous matrimonial nooses.

Don't Merely "Stop" a Cough

Stop the Thing that Causes It and the Cough will Stop Itself

A cough is really one of our best friends. It warns us that there is inflammation or obstruction in a dangerous place. Therefore, when you get a bad cough don't proceed to dose yourself with a lot of drugs that merely "stop" the cough temporarily by deadening the throat nerves. Treat the cause—heal the inflamed membranes. Here is a home-made remedy that gets right at the cause and will make an obstinate cough vanish more quickly than you ever thought possible.

Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth) in a 16-ounce bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. This gives you 16 ounces of the most pleasant and effective remedy you ever used, at a cost of only 54 cents. No bother to prepare. Full directions with Pinex.

It heals the inflamed membranes so gently and promptly that you wonder how it does it. Also loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough and stops the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending the persistent loose cough.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, rich in guaiacol, and is famous the world over for its healing effect on the membranes.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex," and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

REPAIRING WARSHIPS

Huge Dreadnoughts Can be Taken Clear Out of Water

Among the greatest engineering marvels of to-day are the gigantic floating docks owned by the British Admiralty and utilized for the repair of naval vessels. The biggest type of these docks has a minimum lifting capacity of 32,000 tons, and is capable of lifting a battleship like H.M.S. Lion, which displaces over 30,000 tons, high and dry out of the water to a height of 36 feet in three hours and ten minutes, thus permitting every part of the vessel's hull to be accessible.

Some idea of the labor involved in the construction of one of these huge docks may be gathered from the fact that whereas a first class warship takes about two and a half years to build, it takes two or three times as long to construct a floating dock of a size sufficient to receive the vessel.

A floating dock may be likened to a box with neither ends nor lid. It is built of steel throughout, the largest type having a length of 680 feet and a width of 144 feet, while the walls are 60 feet in height.

The dock is first submerged by admitting water into the ballast tanks or pontoons forming the base of the structure. When it has been sunk to a sufficient depth to receive the vessel the latter is warped into its correct position on the keel blocks of the dock, and is then made fast. Powerful pumps are set to work to eject water from the pontoons, causing the structure to rise gradually with its burden. To lift a battleship the size of the Lion 46,000 tons of water has to be pumped out of the pontoons. So perfectly, however, are these huge floating docks constructed that one man can control every movement from what is known as the valve house, which is at the end of the side walls.

TO LEAD CANADIANS.

Col. the Hon. J. E. B. Seely Appointed To Command Mounted Brigade.

LONDON, Feb. 3. — It is learned that Col. the Rt. Hon. J. E. B. Seely, former Secretary of State for War, will take command of a Canadian mounted brigade, including the Strathconas, the Royal Canadian Dragoons and the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery, now at Salisbury. Col. Seely has already seen considerable service at the front in France, and his selection to command a Canadian corps is regarded a distinct compliment to the prestige and efficiency of the Canadian troops.

Col. Seely will be with his Majesty King George at the royal inspection of the Canadian troops to-morrow.

Russians Sink Gunboat.

LONDON, Feb. 3.— The Morning Post's Petrograd correspondent says a Russian submarine sank a German gunboat off the German coast; also hit and seriously damaged a small cruiser of the Gazelle type, possibly the Gazelle herself. Exclusive of the Black Sea fleet Russia has 21 submarines, all built between 1903 and 1908. None of them is bigger than 500 tons. The fastest makes 13 knots and carries four torpedo tubes, the others carrying fewer.

The German cruiser Gazelle's displacement is 2,603; length, 328 feet; beam, 35 1-2 feet; crew, 636 men; speed, 18 knots. She was launched in 1908.

Earth Shocks In England.

LONDON, Feb. 3.—Earth shocks occurred Monday night in a number of districts in Yorkshire. One miner was killed and many had narrow escapes owing to the shaking down of coal in the pits. In some cases the pits were rendered unworkable by the fall of coal.

Mrs. Thomas Bridges, Gorrie, Ont., writes: "I was so bad with a cold I gave up work, and I was in bed four weeks being unable to do anything. I thought the cold was turning to bronchitis, so I changed my medicine to Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. I used three bottles, and they completely cured me, and I am as strong as ever. I highly recommend it to all sufferers.

The "War Department" of the Young Men's Christian Association recently announced that it had established 600 centres of Y.M.C.A. work in the British army.

"Wherever Kitchener's army encamps, there goes the Y.M.C.A.," says the association's war secretary in a report. The association is following the army abroad, not only into France and Belgium, but also into India and Egypt.

RELIEF THAT DOES NOT PAUPERIZE

Why Apply Old-world Methods to New-world Problems?

In this fair City of ours, with its much boasted "possibilities unsurpassed," there are hundreds of men who would almost sell their birthrights for work, but who would not sell their souls for all the charity in the world, at least not in the form in which it is doled out at the present time.

There are families of good social standing, families of skilled workmen, that are facing privations through unemployment. Many of these are most deserving of relief, yet they refuse it.

Simply because we do not see examples of destitution on George Street is no proof that it does not exist. On every hand we see cases where charity is given, yet there is an inward feeling that it is not accomplishing the best results.

Times without number we hear unfavourable comments from citizens who seem to give these matters careful considerations, such as: "Well, there is a man getting charity but he does not deserve it," followed by remarks tending to show how extravagant the family is when a dollar happens to find its way into their hands.

To a careful student of things economic, it would appear, however, that the recipients of charity are not so much to blame as the system of which they are the victims.

THE SYSTEM IS ALL WRONG.

The best way of proving that our system of charity-giving is wrong is to take a concrete case.

Let us consider three neighbours: Mr. Saver, Mr. Spender and Mr. Shiftless, each with a small family. (In most cases, however, Mr. Shiftless will have the largest family).

Mr. Saver lives in a small house, which he owns, and works the little garden to the rear. The luxuries of the family are few. They live plainly, but well. They enjoy life, because contented. They have a saving's bank account, which laughs at the proverbial "wolf." This type of citizen forms the backbone of the community. The motto of the home is "Save a Little for a Rainy Day."

Mr. Spender earns good money, lives in an expensive house which he rents at a high figure. The family have few wants that are not supplied. They try to keep pace with the family of the bank manager across the road. They see every show that comes to town, and they never miss a hockey match. Their motto is, "Eat, Drink and be Merry, for To-morrow You (May) Die."

Mr. Shiftless works only when the spirit moves him. (We will not say who the spirit is). If he does happen to make a dollar, the whole family takes a holiday and helps him to spend it (usually at the nickle shows). The winter comes and the family gets relief regularly. His motto is, "The Government be Hanged, the World Owes Me a Living Anyway."

The system upholds him in the argument, for does not the City literally extract the cash (in the form of taxes) from Mr. Saver and from the landlord of Mr. Spender and hand it over to Mr. Shiftless. In other words the City says to the last named gentleman, "Why work and save, when your neighbours will keep you."

The foregoing remarks apply to ordinary conditions; this year, a year of war, and unemployment, presents new problems, however.

Mr. Saver is without work. Because he was so prudent as to save a little "nest-egg" he is punished by being offered no assistance.

Mr. Spender is likewise out of employment. The family would not hear of charity, yet they have no hesitation in telling their landlord they cannot pay their rent, and in accepting credit from merchants who are willing to be their bankers.

Mr. Shiftless simply settles himself into his old nut, and calls on the City to "produce the goods."

Such a procedure puts a premium on laziness and discourages economy.

The worst poverty is the sort concealed with dignity behind closed doors. Charity cannot reach it. Only work will. Canada, happily, is a land of democracy, and gives the labourer and artisan as much dignity as the bank president.

There is a quality of poor that we always have with us, improvident and unfitted for life's struggle.

THE SOLUTION, THEN, LIES IN WAGES, NOT CHARITY.

Alderman Dobbin sounded the right note recently when he proposed "moving mountains (Hilliard Farm) and casting them into the sea (Goose Pond)." But why charge it to the Relief Fund?

Has not the Council been doing the same thing for years? Each summer they carted gravel into the streets, and the following spring scraped it off and dumped it into Goose Pond.

It should be the duty of the municipality to provide work so that those needing it may have the chance of earning an honest dollar. Every city has plenty of work to be done, or which they can cause to be done, especially during the lean months of the winter.

Other cities are doing it, and are accomplishing splendid results, with the advantage of securing a modest return on the investment.

Every dollar given "for value received" (wages), is relief with dignity; every dollar doled out grudgingly—in the form of charity—is an insult to a man, and a demoralising agent to the pauper.

Spain's Neutrality Is Threatened As Country Splits on German Protest

MADRID, Feb. 3.—There has been great excitement throughout Spain as a result of the action of leading members of the radical party in going to the French Embassy to leave their cards and protest against the action of German military commanders in Brussels, who removed the statue of Francisco Ferrer from its pedestal. The statue of Ferrer was erected there after he had been shot to death for his anarchistic work in Barcelona.

Leading members of the conservative and liberal parties have gone to the German Embassy to express their approval of the acts of the commanders in Brussels, and the result is that Spain to-day is torn in two parts and there is strong feeling on the part of the radicals against the monarchists, and the monarchists are resenting the actions of the radicals.

So intense has become the feeling between the political parties that Senor Data, Premier, went to Seville to see King Alfonso and put the matter before him. The King is at Seville on a shooting expedition.

The situation became acute when prominent members of the radical party attempted to organize a large mass meeting in Barcelona to protest against the action of the German commanders in Brussels in tearing down the Ferrer statue. The government interposed and refused to permit the mass meeting to be held by the radicals and also forbad the monarchists' meeting to pass any resolutions with regard to the matter.

Barcelona became highly excited as a result of the government's action and the matter was taken into Congress in the form of an interpelation to the government by leading members of the radical party. There were long debates on the subject and for a time it seemed that Spain would be forced from her position as a neutral nation. Radical members of Congress declared themselves strongly in favour of France and the monarchists were equally as strong in their declarations in favour of Germany.

Senor Dato returned to Madrid from Seville to-day and immediately called a meeting of the Cabinet. After the meeting the Premier issued a statement, in which he said there was no cause for alarm and that Spain would not be forced to violate her neutrality. He said that the rumours to the effect that the country was threatened with being forced into the war were untrue, an he cautioned Spaniards to put down such rumours, characterizing such reports as unpatriotic and calculated to do harm.

GLASS OF SALTS CLEANS KIDNEYS

If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers You, Drink Lots of Water

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralise the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

FALLING HAIR MEANS DANDRUFF IS ACTIVE

Save your hair! Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine right now

Thin, brittle, colourless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which, if not remedied, causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine to-night—now—anytime— will surely save your hair.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and after the first application your hair will take on that life, lustre and luxuriance which is so beautiful. It will become wavy and fluffy and have the appearance of abundance; an incomparable gloss and softness, but what will please you most will be after just a few weeks' use, when you will actually see a lot of fine, downy hair—new hair—growing all over the scalp.

THE EMDEN'S GRAVEYARD

Romantic History of Cocos Island Where German Raider Was Lost

The island where the Emden put up its last fight—Cocos—is one of the most romantic in the Pacific. It is a coral reef, really, fringed with palm trees, and lying about 250 miles from the Dutch East Indies.

The king of the island is a colored man named Ross, rich as a trader, and despotic among his own people. He is the descendant of a Scottish sailor of 1830, who established himself on the island, planted palm trees by the thousand, and settled down with a colored spouse. Life went very well in those solitudes then. Of course, there was always the fear that a tidal wave might sweep the island with a sudden tornado of waters, and Ross was never quite certain whether his strip of land would make up its mind to stay where it was, or whether it would sink back again to the depths. But he chanced it. And the island stayed on top and Ross stayed with it.

The Eastern Extension Cable Company secured a lease of the island for cable relays, and a station was built which was of the greatest value to the commerce of nations. The operators have to pass their time as best they may, and they usually row out in spare hours and harpoon the sharks which infest the waters thereabouts.

When their quarters were being built, the contractor experienced a lot of trouble with his Chinese workmen owing to the fact that beri-beri had broken out among them, and that they had got it into their heads that the island was being haunted by a devil. They erected a joss and prayed to it; but the disease continued to get worse, and it became so bad that, after turning the face of the joss to different parts of the compass to ascertain whether he was punishing them because he was not being made to face the right quarter, they smashed him up. After his destruction the epidemic died out.

The Emden was the second German cruiser to threaten the island. The cable was cut shortly after Japan declared war on Germany; it was repaired speedily, and its repair contributed to the destruction of the Emden.

NAVAL PUNISHMENT

Severe Penalties Inflicted For Misdemeanors in Old-time Navy

When Rear-Admiral Troubridge was thought to have made a mistake in connection with the escape of the cruisers, the Goeben and the Breslau, from Messina, he was tried by court-martial, and acquitted. In the past sea leaders who made mistakes in war were drastically punished. At the time of the second Dutch war with England when De Ruyter played havoc with the shipping in the Thames and Medway, the captains of the three ships, Blessing, Blacknose, and John and Elizabeth, which had been stationed off Gravesend, were charged with carelessness in carrying out their duties. Each captain was ordered to be sent on board the Victory Prize at Deptford, where he had a halter put about his neck and a wooden sword broken over his head. The culprits were then towed through the water at a boat's stern, from the ship to Deptford Dock.

Naval punishments were very severe in all ranks in the old days. A man who killed another at sea was tied to the body of his victim and both were thrown into the water. Keelhauling was also a popular punishment amongst the fleet. The latter was a fate doled out to gamblers in the navy, who, according to the law of the period, "were to be dipped into the sea every morning for three days, after the manner of seamen." Another drastic naval law stated that "A thief or felon being lawfully convicted shall have his head shorne, and boiling pitch poured upon his head, and feathers strewed upon the same, whereby he may be known, and so at the first landing-place they shall come to he shall be cast up."

The Atholl Highlanders, a force of men drawn from the Atholl country, and commanded by the Duke himself, is the only private regiment which still exists in Great Britain.

DON'T HAWK, SPIT, SNEEZE, CURE YOURSELF! BREATHE "CATARRHOZONE"

Gives Instant Relief, Clears Out Nose, Throat and all Breathing Organs.

In this fickle climate, repeated colds very easily drift into Catarrh.

The natural tendency of Catarrh is to extend through the system in every direction.

Exposure to cold or dampness intensifies the trouble and nasal catarrh is the result.

Unless a complete cure is effected, inflammation passes rapidly to the throat, bronchial tubes and then to the lungs.

Catarrh sufferers, meaning those with colds, sore throat, bronchial trouble, etc., can all be cured right at home by inhaling "Catarrhozone".

In using Catarrhozone you don't take medicine into the stomach—you just breathe a healing piney vapour direct to the lungs and air passages.

The purest balsams and the greatest antiseptics are thus sent to every spot where catarrhal trouble exists, germs are killed, foul secretions are destroyed, nature is given a chance, and cure comes quickly.

Cold and throat troubles can't last if the pure healing vapour of Catarrhozone is breathed, — sneezing and coughing cease at once, because irritation is soothed.

Use Catarrhozone to prevent—use it to cure your winter ills. It's pleasant, safe and guaranteed in every case. Complete outfit $1.00. Smaller size, 50c., at all dealers.

Infantry Training

The Matter in This Column is from the Official Manual 1911 and is Published According to Orders of the Home Guard

FORM—FOURS. FORM TWO—DEEP.

The section will then be turned about and proved as above; when it has been proved it will be turned about again. When the section is turned about supernumeraries will gain their places by doubling round the flanks of the section.

86. Preliminary Training in Close Formation.

1. The soldier, during his training in close order drill should have learnt the habit of prompt obedience to orders, he should also have learnt to march and to shoot, and should have become a fair judge of distance.

The object which must now be kept in mind by his instructors is to teach him the best method of closing with an enemy. It should be explained that victory can rarely be won by fire alone, that the object of fire is to prepare the way for the charge with the bayonet and that decisive victory can only be gained by closing with the enemy. This is the most important part of the training of the infantry soldier.

2. In order to approach to within close range of a well armed enemy by day it is usually necessary to advance with intervals between the men. This is called advancing in extended order. Successive lines of men in extended order gradually work their way forward and eventually, when close ranges are reached, increase the density of the front or firing line until fire is developed from the greatest possible number of rifles in a given frontage.

The first stage, therefore, is for the recruit to learn to move in extended order formations. Other methods of advancing under fire are considered later. (See Part IV.)

3. At first these formations will be practised as a drill by word of command, but a very short period should be spent over this, and, as soon as the soldier has learnt the few necessary movements on the drill ground, the section should work over broken ground, which the soldier will be taught to use to the best advantage. (See Part IV.)

87. Instructions for Extended Order Drill.

1. The section under arms will first be formed in line, standing at ease.

2. The rifle will be carried at the trail when the section is moving in extended order. In extending the rifle will, if necessary, be carried at the short trail until there is sufficient room to trail.

3. Correct dressing and keeping step are not required, but an approximate line should be kept, otherwise men may mask one another's fire.

4. The assumed position of an enemy will be pointed out, and when halted, each man will turn in that direction, either lying down, standing or kneeling, according as he can best see to fire at the target.

It is important that men should always be trained in extended order drill with reference to a target or targets.

It should be explained to the recruit that as extensions are usually made in order either to develop fire or avoid loss, they are normally carried out at the double. An extended line is closed only when under cover or when not under fire, closing is therefore carried out in quick time unless it is desired to close on the move.

5. Words of command will be preceded by a whistle, and the corresponding signal will be given at the same time as the word of command. (This is in order to accustom the men to work by signals.)

6. Each man will look towards the commander on the sound of the whistle.

7. When in extended order, section and squad commanders will be in rear of their commands or where they can best supervise them. Supernumeraries conform and move in the positions relative to those which they occupied in line.

8. In extended order extensions will be from the centre which will direct unless otherwise ordered.

88. Extending from the halt.
TO——PACES —EXTEND.
(OR TO THE RIGHT OR LEFT)
TO——PACES —EXTEND.

The front rank man of the centre, left or right file, will remain halted, or kneel or lie down according to the visibility of the target (Sec. 87, 4). The remainder will turn outwards or to the named flank and extend in double time.

The rear rank men will form on the left of their front rank men.

Each man is responsible that the given number of paces separate him from the next man to him towards the centre, or towards the directing man.

Note. A section may be extended similarly from a named man.

89. Extending on the move.
TO——PACES —EXTEND.
TO——PACES —EXTEND.

The front rank man of the centre file (or of the left or right file) will continue to advance, the remaining files will turn outwards (or to the named flank) and will double out to their positions as in Sec. 88, when each man will break into quick time and advance in the original direction.

90. A Section marching in fours extending to a flank.
TO THE RIGHT (OR LEFT)
TO——PACES —EXTEND.

The whole will form two deep.

If the extension is to the right the left man of the leading file will continue to advance, the other man of the file forming up on his right at the number of paces ordered. The remainder will make a partial turn in the required direction, and will double into their positions.

The left man of each file will form on the left of the other man of the same file. As each man reaches his position he will break into quick time and continue to advance in the original direction.

If the extension is to the left the right man of the leading file will continue to advance, and the right man of each file will form on the right of the other man of the same file as above.

Note. 1. If when working with two squads, it is desired to extend outwards, one squad may be ordered to extend to the right, the other to the left.

2. Should it be required to form in a direction oblique to the line of advance, the words HALF (or QUARTER), RIGHT (or LEFT) will precede the commands given in the above sections.

91. Movements in line in extended order.
1. To increase or decrease the extensions.
TO——PACES —EXTEND. (OR CLOSE).

The men will increase or decrease their extension from the centre, or from or to a named flank or man.

2. Inclining.

Each man will incline to the right or left.

Note. If a second order is given to incline in the same direction, the section will then move as in file, the intervals between the men being preserved.

3. Changing direction.
CHANGE DIRECTION.
RIGHT (OR LEFT) OR HALF RIGHT (OR HALF LEFT)

The right (or left) hand man will turn in the named direction and continue in quick time, the remainder will double direct to their new positions and break into quick time when on the new alignment.

4. Closing to two ranks.
AT THE HALT — (ON THE LEFT, OR RIGHT) CLOSE.

The centre (right or left hand) man will halt, the remainder will close on him in quick time and take up their original positions, each man halting and standing at ease.

Note. A section may be closed on the move by omitting the words AT THE HALT, the centre, right or left man, leading on, and the remainder doubling to their positions in line.

British gunners maintained the advantage in the region between Arras and Bethune. West of Labassee the German artillery has been particularly active; air scouts have reported that the Germans are preparing for another onslaught on the British positions between Labassee and Bethune. The allies' shells worked havoc in the ranks of a German regiment convoying supply and ammunition trains in the Woevre regions. The Germans at this point [illegible] their train movements.

A thaw has set in in the Vosges region and mountain streams have been converted into rushing torrents of water. The floods threaten to hinder all operations.

FARMERS ARE EXPERIENCING A FEED SHORTAGE

As a Result There is Considerable Liquidation of Live Stock—Conditions in Peterboro' County

ARE NOT PROMISING

The scarcity of feed throughout Peterborough and adjacent counties is having the effect of reducing the number of cattle owned by farmers throughout the districts effected. It is simply a case of turning the stock on the market for the reason that the price of feed is too high to justify the farmers carrying them over until spring. Hay, at from twenty to twenty-three dollars a ton, and straw, at fifteen and sixteen dollars, makes pretty expensive feed, so that the farmers have no alternative but to dispose of the "star boarders." At Jarvis, farmers are paying sixteen dollars a load for straw and twenty two for hay. The buyers are paying around six cents a pound for the better quality of cattle on the hoof. Canners are not worth more than half that.

Conditions in the West.

It is in the West that the liquidation of live stock has been particularly pronounced, A number of exigencies has so conspired — chiefly the shortage of feed in certain sections of large production which suffered severely owing to last season's drought .Of course the removal of the United States cattle embargo in the Fall of 1913, immediately brought about a [illegible] here; and while this circumstance was largely balanced up by the marked development in stock raising, since conspicuous, the recent rushing of animals to market has reversed the situation

Therefore, when war conditions are added to those of more local significances, high prices for all meats would seem a foregone conclusion. In view of this, the Federal and Provincial Governments are doing everything possible to encourage the expansion of the stock industry, holding forth to the farmer the prospect of prices which his father never even dared to dream of, and impressing upon him that wheat will be by no means the only line promising unusually ample returns.

"VETS" TO BANQUET OTHER TEAMS

There will be a big time at the "Y" to-morrow night when the Veterans, who won the late basket ball league, will banquet the men of the other teams. The Vets. know how to do things right, as is shown by the way they walked off with the Cressman Cup. All the men who played in the late league, and all interested in forming a new league, are asked to be on hand to-morrow night at 8 p.m., as a new league will be started, and we want every fellow who is interested in the game to be in on it.

A good programme has been provided, and we can leave the rest to the Vets. Come and bring a big appetite.

LT.-COL. R. H. LABATT—Of Hamilton, who was in command of the 48th infantry battalion of the first Canadian contingent, who has been ill at Salisbury, but is reported improving. His place has been taken by Col. A. P. Birchall of the Canadian Permanent Force.

BODY WILL BE SENT TO OTTAWA

Usual Custom Will be Followed in Connection With Disposal of the Remains of the Late Lee Quen

BURIED TEN YEARS

Arrangements for the funeral of the late Lee Quen have been altered. The local Chinamen, who have charge of the funeral, have been advised by the Chinese Consul at Ottawa to forward the body to Ottawa for burial. It had been prepared for shipment to Canton, China.

There were no services held here in connection with the funeral which took place at noon from Belleghem's undertaking parlours to the C. P. R. station. The custom in practice in coastal cities will be followed in this instance, namely that of raising the remains after a period of ten years and shipping to China for burial. A ship leaves San Francisco or some other coast city once a year with the remains of Chinese residents who have been buried [illegible] years.

Report of the Labour Gazette

Concerning Labour Conditions in Peterboro'—Refers to Factories That Are Working on Government Contracts.

The January issue of the Labour Gazette which is published by the Labour Department of the Dominion Government is to hand. It deals with conditions as found in Peterborough during the preceding month and chronicled from time to time in the daily press .The report is as follows:

The condition of the labour market was about the same as last month, the supply being far in excess of the demand. The Peterborough branch of the Canadian Industrial Association is doing a good work. It has established a free employment bureau, and the last report showed that out of 402 applicants for work 81 men had been provided with employment.

The building trades continued quiet Very little new work was undertaken, only four permits being taken out in December, valued at $3,200, as compared with 12 permits, representing a value of $7,605, last year.

Textile factories, however, were very busy, working night and day. B. F. Ackerman Company's harness factory has secured a big order for war supplies, and was busy. The flour mills were also busy. The iron industries were doing very little. They have been working short hours and with greatly reduced staffs. The Canadian General Electric Company was showing some improvements. This company has an order from the Militia Department.

A company has been formed to be known as the Sweetmeat Company, Limited, capitalized at $50,000 for the manufacture of candies, jam and preserves.

The total assessment for 1915 is $11,59,805. an increase from last year of $1,226,541.

Farmers were occupied with the care of stock and marketing produce. The Christmas market was one of the best held in many years. Fowl were very plentiful and prices fair. Hay was scarce, selling for $20 a ton and oats at 50c a bushel.

Lumbering was rather quiet. Except for pulpwood, very little was being cut. One contractor has a contract for all the pulpwood he can secure this winter, and was paying $8 per cord for spruce and $3.5 for balsam delivered at railway sidings.

SERGT. PLAYFORD'S WAR TROPHIES AT 438 GEORGE ST.

The souvenirs from the front sent by Lance Corporal Playford, as announced in the Examiner, sent home to relatives, may be seen displayed in the shop windows of Alexander & Miller, electricians, Corporal Playford's former employers, 438 George Street Before joining the active forces, Lance Corporal Playford was colour-sergeant of No. 8 company, 57th Regiment. He has a brother-in-law, Sergeant Griffin, now with the Canadian forces at Salisbury Plain, and several other relatives at the front.

William Robinson Passed Away Within a Few Minutes After His Removal to the Knight's of Columbus Hall—His Last Words.

WAS A MOULDER

At 10.30 o'clock last night, William Robinson, an employee of the Peterborough Lock Works Co., passed away after being assisted into the Knights of Columbus' Hall on Simcoe Street. The course of death was heart failure.

Became Ill on the Street.

Two small boys found the deceased leaning against the fence on Simcoe Street near the Knights of Columbus Hall. He had a valise in his hand, having come from the Grand Trunk railway station. He complained of feeling ill and the boys ran into the Hall for assistance. Some of the members who happened to be there carried him upstairs. Father McGinnity was present and Dr. Sutton, who was addressing a meeting in the Y.W. C.A., was summoned, as well as Dr. Greer. Deceased passed away five minutes after he was taken into the hall, without having spoken after remarking to the two youngsters that he felt ill.

Came From Lindsay.

The late Mr. Robinson returned from Lindsay on the evening train. He had spent two weeks there visiting his relatives. When he became ill he was on his way to the home of Mr. Edward Cavanagh, 389 Queen Street, where he boarded. He had received a 'phone message to be in the city to resume work at the Peterborough Lock Works this morning.

While in Lindsay he was apparently in his usual health, though for the past couple of years he has complained a little of stomach trouble.

Was a Moulder.

The late Mr. Robinson has followed the occupation of a moulder, and for the past twenty-four years has been in the employ of the Peterborough Lock Works Co. He had boarded at the home of Mr. Edward Cavanagh, 389 Queen Street, while in Peterborough, and has many friends in this city who will regret to learn of his sudden death.

It is a rather striking coincidence that he should pass away just six weeks after his friend, Mr. James Cavanagh, at whose funeral he was a pallbearer.

The late Mr. Robinson was born in Lindsay, where his mother and members of his family still reside.

There are left to survive, his mother, two sisters, Mrs. Dennison and Miss Mildred, Lindsay, three brothers, George and Ebb, Lindsay an Joseph of Peterborough.

The remains will be taken to Lindsay on the 5.30 o'clock Grand Trunk train this evening for interment. Mr. Ebb. Robinson arrived at noon from Lindsay, and with his brother, Mr. Joseph Robinson, will accompany the body this evening.

OPENING OF PARLIAMENT

Took Place This Afternoon to the Accompaniment of Booming Guns —Duke and Duchess Present

IDEAL WEATHER

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Feb. 4.—The fifth session of the Twelfth Parliament opened at three o'clock this afternoon. Weather conditions were ideal. The sun shone brightly, and naturally people took advantage of the perfect day to come in large numbers.

Promptly at three o'clock to the accompaniment of booming guns on Nepean Point His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught with Duchess, and escorted by a body of the Princess Louise Dragoon Guards, and attended by his new staff of aides, drove up to the Parliament Buildings where they were received by a detachment of the Governor-General's Foot Guards. The Guards in their brilliant red uniforms, and the Dragoons with their waving columns, gave colour to the ceremony after months of khaki.

Within the Senate and House of Commons chambers the scenes were about the same as is usually witnessed.

The Duke's Address.

The Duke of Connaught, Governor-General, said that since he last addressed Parliament, Canada had given abundant and convincing proof of its loyalty to the Empire by despatching troops to England and preparing others to go there. As to trade conditions the Speech from the Throne said that notwithstanding inevitable disturbance as a result of war financial and business conditions have shown great stability, and on the whole the country has adapted itself to new conditions in a very effective way. In conclusion His Royal Highness said that the strong unity of purpose which inspires His Majesty's Dominions gives firm assurance that the war will be maintained to an honourable and successful issue for Britain and her Allies.

TO FIGHT FOR FOOD.

Switzerland Will Defend Her Right To Free Passage of Supplies.

GENEVA, Feb. 4.—The new Swiss Minister to Italy, M. De Planta, made an important statement to Rome papers declaring that Switzerland was ready to fight for her food, neutrality or no neutrality. De Planta said:

"Our national organization essentially is defensive and neutrality which we always observed cannot be broken except in three cases:

1. A violation of this neutrality by a third party.

2. An attempt on our territorial integrity.

3. A menace to starve us by preventing food from reaching across our frontiers."

This is the first time a Swiss in his official capacity has stated that Switzerland would consider the stoppage of food supplies a casus belli. Swiss papers strongly uphold him.

HOW EMPLOYEES ARE AFFECTED

By the Recent Change in the G. T. R. Train Service

Owing to the cancelling of the Grand Trunk flyer, about a dozen employees have received a set back. Conductor Adams is now on the Toronto via Port Hope run. Baggageman Myers from the flyer is brakeman with conductor Adams.

Conductor Frank Connors from Lindsay, is now brakeman on the Lakefield run in place of Brakeman Thos. Wibbs, who is on freight out of Lindsay.

It is to be hoped the changes will not be for long, and that the traffic will soon increase sufficiently to warrant giving all the men regular employment again.

PATRIOTISM AND PRODUCTION.

The Globe says in a brief note that "the cloud at present hanging over Canada has a nickel lining." Is this true? With Canadian nickel so treated by Canada that there is possibility of it reaching Germany to strengthen her in a war which Britain and Canada are straining every nerve to end, would seem to indicate that Canadian nickel occupies the outside of the cloud in full view of, and in reach of, Germany. And there isn't much nickel lining to the cloud from Canada's point of view, when Canada's monopolistic possession of nickel resources is not used so as to give Canada the monopoly of benefit as she has the monopoly of basic possession. The Dominion Government is conducting very creditably, on the educational side, a campaign described as "Patriotism and Production—more than usual." Does this apply only to wheat, potatoes et hoc genus omne of national productions. Nickel provides an admirable opportunity to the government, to give a practical turn to its educational campaign for enlarged production and enlarged domestic advantages. If the government were to provide for the refining in Canada of Canadian nickel, it would be contributing to strengthening the "sinews of war" most effectively, and would be conferring an immense and permanent material advantage upon the country in the way of profitable employment of labour and capital. There may be difficulties in the way, economic and fiscal difficulties. Great Britain and the Allies have immense difficulties to overcome in prosecuting the war, and they are taking the direct way of solving these difficulties, by applying war measures and war expedients. Would not the policy of "interning" Canadian nickel be justified as a war measure? Would not such a measure be justified by the immense advantages it would bring as a tactical move, and as the opening to a national policy providing for the exploitation, within the country, to the ultimate point, of all our natural and national resources? Making our national resources national products in the fullest sense seems to be the true and logical way of effective conjunction of "Patriotism and Production."

The time is too short, the indications to action are too strong, to warrant putting too much stress upon the theoretically educational side of the patriotism and production campaign. The educational might better be made practical, and good action be conjoined to good advice. The government literature is admirable in every way but the rightly effective way. It enjoins upon farmers, and tillers of the soil in other ways, to increase production; but it doesn't "get down to brass tacks" by telling them in practical detail how this increased production is to be brought about. Thousands of farmers are producing to the limit of effectiveness of the means available. The farmer to increase his output must put more land under tillage, or provide conditions for increase of crop from already cultivated soil. In either event he must have the help of labour; he must have more seed; and if he can't get the one or afford to purchase the other, how is he to increase production? The farmers and agriculturists of Canada are less in need of being told what to do than of being told how to do it.

DUTIES OF THE HOUR.

In the midst of the multiplicity of new demands made upon our philanthropic and altruistic activities, there may be danger of some important interests being partly neglected. Two interests stand out as worthy of close attention no matter what else is overlooked. One of these is the preservation and promotion of the public health and the other closely associated, is solicitude for the preservation of child life. This war is actually decimating the population of half the world; there are perhaps every day of the week human lives destroyed to a number equal to the population of Peterborough. And these are no weaklings; when they entered the war they were composed of the best, most robust, most physically fit of the population. Not only the dead are to be subtracted from the robust population of the country, but those that survive will be either broken in health or weakened with wounds; comparatively few will return to the ranks of peaceful life with a tenth part of the splendid physical energy or for the matter of that, of the moral energy, they withdrew from the country when they went to war.

There is, therefore, necessity of doubling and redoubling the efforts to maintain and improve the general public health. This has been impaired in mass by the withdrawal—in Canada—of thousands of the flower of our young and vigorous manhood. Our health organizations, provincial and local, should be kept in the highest state of organization and efficiency; our sanitary conditions should have the most alert attention; the fight against preventable diseases such as typhoid, tuberculosis and other diseases communicable by contact or infection should be waged with relentless and untiring energy; in fact, every possible effort should be employed in every direction to safeguard and improve the public health.

It is also evident that there is a most insistent call to provide for the saving of child life and the strengthening of the forces of child life, to compensate for the loss of healthy population produced by the deadly drain of war. Very largely the destruction by war selects the unmarried and marriageable, the best fitted for marriage in regard to the production of healthy offspring, which, in spite of the virtually vicious philosophy of the age, is the chief, and Scripturally, the only, object of marriage. The protection of child life from the deterioration of poverty, insufficient nourishment and lack of intelligent care is all the more indicated as war conditions cause greater deprivation and destitution—the excuse if not the cause of neglect of proper care of child health and child life.

Here opens a wide field for philanthropy—improvement of economic conditions to the lessening of unemployment and poverty; the instruction of motherhood as to the best means of child feeding and rearing; the enlargement of the popular intelligence as to the necessity and ways of creating, improving and maintaining community and domestic sanitary conditions; the awakening of the public conscience to the duty of wholesome sanitation, and the sharpening of the public mind as to the necessity of liberally cooperating to create and maintain the best sanitary conditions; educating the public to the spirit of sacrifice to provide the means; and other measures of which sympathetic reflection and study of conditions will reveal the necessity of adopting and applying. Here is work for all; for the Federal Parliament and provincial legislatures, for the municipal governments, the health boards, the charitable and altruistic organizations and the individual citizen.

CRUELTY TO RECRUITS.

Some of the military regulations and "orders" discourage recruiting. Now the fiat has gone forth that Canadian soldiers at Salisbury are not to kiss the buxom English lasses, whom the stalwart charms of the Canadian Tommies tempt to the practice of lip loyalty. It seems to be hard lines when a soldier has to stand English downpour and Salisbury mud, and is denied oculatory compensation. The military authorities may theoretically hold with the first part of the Byronic couplet—"Kiss rhymes with bliss in sense as well as verse," and very practically agree with the concluding sentiments; for they take care that it shall "lead to nothing worse" in the communication of spinal meningitis, measles, et al., through the long-drawn soulful kiss. If a recruit is deprived of the hope of exercising and enjoying an inalienable right, he will not be too anxious to fight for a British freedom that denies the first principles. But war knocks sentiment as well as soldiers on the head; and abstinence from promiscuous osculation is one of the sacrifices, and not the least, our gallant or gallant—according to the incidence of the accent—soldier boys are making. Cutting off beer and 'baccy at one fell stroke seems to be using a two-edged sword upon the budding "Bobs" of this fair Dominion.

UNITED STATES PUBLISHER'S OPINIONS OF GERMAN ETHICS

One of the most moderate, and at the same time most convincing, arraignments of Germany that has appeared from the pen of an American citizen is assuredly that of Mr. George Haven Putnam, the great publisher. He was asked by the German University League to become a member. This league has been in existence for some years. It is composed of German-Americans who have received their education in Germany.

Now, in the belief of Mr. Putnam, it is being revived with the object of continuing the German propaganda in the United States. Though Mr. Putnam was once a German student and has many friends in Germany and many friends in the United States of German origin, he finds himself obliged to decline the invitation of the league to associate himself with it. His reply has passed on to the New York Times, which prominently displayed it in last Sunday's edition.

Unwilling to Meet Germans.

Mr. Putnam says in part:

"I am an old-time German student, and I have since 1869 made many friends in Germany and a number of German friends also on this side of the Atlantic. I have found myself keenly interested in German literature and in sympathy with not a few of the German ideals and purposes. I have also found cause for admiration for the wisdom and efficiency shown in the management of many of the social and political problems in Germany, and particularly in the control and development of the resources of its municipality. Under other circumstances I should doubtless have found much to interest me in associating with the members who are to be brought together in the University League, although, as I am now an old man and have little time for frivolities, I am planning for no present additions to my list of clubs, associations or committees.

"Under the conditions now obtaining, I find myself, however, unwilling to meet Germans, whether friends, acquaintances, or strangers. Our thoughts are full of the great issues connected with or arising from the present European war, and we are looking at these issues from very different points of view.

The American Verdict.

"It is my judgment that we Americans have, from the outset, been in a better position than are any other people to secure a trustworthy knowledge of the events and conditions, and to arrive at an impartial judgment in regard to the causation of the war, the relative responsibilities for the beginning of the war, and the interests of Europe and the world as to the results of the war. We have, with but few exceptions, convinced ourselves that the responsibility for beginning the war rests with Germany and with Austria, and primarily with Germany, which not only influenced, but controlled, the action of Austria. We believe that the preparation for this war had been made by Germany years back, and that the Serbian incident merely served as a convenient occasion for the outbreak. We believe that the main purpose of the war is the destruction of the British Empire, and the taking over of her colonial possessions, to which Germany has long expected to become the heir. France stands between Germany and England, and, to use the German words, 'France must be crushed this time so thoroughly that she shall never again stand in the way of Germany.' The unauthorized invasion and the devastation of Belgium seem to have been considered by the German ruler as but trivial incidents which should carry no weight in connection with this larger policy.

Speaks as an Old Soldier.

"I am myself an old soldier, and I have looked with increasing indignation at the manner in which Germany is conducting this war and at the barbarous precedents that in this twentieth century are being made under German official orders. The destruction, by order, of Belgian cities, and the taking of hostages, and the making of these hostages responsible for the actions of individuals whom they are not in a position to control; the shooting of many of these hostages; the appropriation for the use of the armies of the food which had been stored in Antwerp and elsewhere, so that the people in Belgium, now officially classed as 'subjects of Germany,' are dependent upon American charity to save them from starvation; the imposition upon these starving and ruined communities of crushing indemnities—all these things impress Americans as contrary to the standards of modern civilization.

"We find ground also for indignation at the use of vessels of war and of Zeppelins for the killing of women and children and other unarmed citizens in undefended places. Such killing, which has nothing whatsoever to do with the direction of the work of campaigns, can only be classed as murder. With these views I can, therefore, not at this time at least, accept the companionship of German-Americans who are prepared to approve, defend, or excuse these actions.

Germany is America's Enemy.

"Americans believe further that it is only through the decisive success of the allies that progress can be made toward a great disarmament, through which the peoples of the world can be freed from unnecessary burdens, and some assurance may be secured of continued peace. The success of Germany would involve, of necessity, renewal of war in the near future. I have in my hands a volume prepared by a member of the general staff of the German army. The author presents plans for the invasion and the domination of the United States, and contends that Germany is the only great power which is in a position to conquer the United States. This little book constitutes one further contribution to the conclusion that the Germany of to-day is, like the France under Napoleon, aimin gat world domination.

FRENCH AND GERMAN WARS THROUGH SEVEN "SCRAPPY" CENTURIES

A few days ago there was picked up on Simcoe Street a newspaper clipping, carefully tied with a silk ribbon. The clipping is yellow with age and was doubtless highly valued by the owner, who now mourns it as lost. But the loser is reassured for it is reproduced below as a most interesting piece of reading at the present time. No indication of the date of the newspaper, except the date printed below, (Dec. 13), is apparent. With no book of reference conveniently available, the period when Von Waldersee was Field-Marshal, cannot be given. It is to be seen by the figures given below that in seven hundred years of war, previous to the present great struggle, a total of 2,158,300 French and Germans were killed and wounded. The tremendously destructive character of the present war is emphasized and a contrast of casualities shows that all previous wars have been as mere riots. Already the destruction of human life—the killed and wounded in the present wholesale war, have been far greater than that which attended seven hundred years of previous warfare between France and Germany. Below is the text of the clipping referred to:

Berlin, Dec 13 — Field-Marshal Count Von Waldersee, of the German Army, recently summed up the result of seven hundred years of fighting between France and German. "The figures prove to my mind not only the folly of war in general," says Von Waldersee, "but likewise that French and Germans are alike."

Here is the grand total of victories and defeats, with the number of men killed and wounded on the battlefield, for both countries.

Frenchmen killed and wounded by Bermans—1,100,520.

Germans killed and wounded by Frenchmen—1,057,70.

Number of French victories over Germans—235.

Number of German victories over French—99.

The Germans on the whole have had five more victories than the French, and have killed 42,740 more of their antagonists than the antagonists have killed of them.

The five extra victories, Count Von Waldersee believes, may be accounted for by the fact that the French have always fought single-handed while the Germans have had from two to three allies.

Both nations have lost about the same number of men in battle, but French mortality has been greater, owing to fevers and epidemics. It seems a strange fact that the two countries have hammered away at each other for over seven centuries without any actual results, so far as statistics of slaughter are concerned. The French have gained exactly as many fortresses as the Germans have won sieges. Both nations have been forced to honourable surrender an equal number of times.

At sea neither has got the advantage of the other, although France has had a navy for over two hundred years and Germany has built hers up in about a quarter of that period.

Contrary to the general idea that French wage more brilliant campaigns than Germans, it is found that they have been evenly balanced. Out of fourteen brilliant coups de main—surprises on the field—seven have been executed by the French and seven by the Germans.

Russians have fought twenty-three times for the interests of Germany against France and the English have been allies of the Germans eleven times. Neither of these countries has supported France in battle against Germany.

The initial letters of Franco-German battlefields cover every letter of the alphabet except X. Ashenburg begins the list and Zusmarchausen ends it, alphabetically. At Benevento, in the year 1266, Germans and French fought their first engagement.

Cutting the Soul Out of the Presbyterian Hymnal

Rev. J. D. Morrow of Toronto Voices the Feeling of the "Plain People" Among the Presbyterians Over One Hundred Old Hymns Sacrificed

"These people are a bunch of ecclesiastical butchers," declared the Rev. J. D. Morrow, of the Dale Church, Toronto, discussing the action of the hymnal committee of the Presbyterian Church in eliminating 117 hymns from the old Hymnal and substituting a number of new hymns.

"I want a hymn with a soul, a hymn that will reach my people, and the good old hymns of our forefathers did that," went on the Rev. Mr. Morrow. "The people love the old hymns, if they are sung properly. I certainly will not agree to dropping such old favourites and beautiful tunes as 'Brightest and Best of the Sons of the Morning,' 'Blessing and Honour and Power with Glory,' 'O, for a Faith that Will not Shrink,' 'Saviour, More Than Life to Me.'

"If they drop these hymns I will get a hymn book of my own for my church," continued the athlete parson. "These hymnal committees are continually trying to cater to the lovers of the so-called high-class music. They are surgeons; they can't see anything but cutting. They are cutting the soul out of the church service by dropping such hymns as 'O, for a Faith That Will Not Shrink' and 'Saviour, More Than Life to Me.'

"I am writing a number of hymns myself," confessed Mr. Morrow, "and I'll publish them with the grand old tunes of our fathers for my church if they get this new idea through. Why can't they satisfy themselves with enlarging the hymn book and put their new hymns in? We should have a thousand or two thousand tunes. Don't cut any out. My people complain that they 'don't know the music' when they go to some other churches. I want everybody to sing, not to have them listen to a choir."

WALKING SAFETY.

But if the critics of the proposed destruction of the old hymns are outspoken, the same cannot be said of the committee in charge of the destructive process. Several members were asked, "What is wrong with such-and-such a hymn?" but nobody would answer the specific question.

NOT FINAL DECISION.

The Rev. Dr. John Somerville, treasurer of the Presbyterian Church and a prominent member of the committee by which the changes were made, would not discuss the elimination of some old favourites.

"It is not a final decision in any event," he explained, "the question will be taken up by the General Assembly when it meets some time in June. The various presbyteries will each report on the hymns which they wish retained or dropped and will also give their opinion of the new hymns inserted. The matter was very carefully gone into by the committee and there was good reason for eliminating each hymn dropped."

OLD TUNES UNPOPULAR.

The Rev. R. J. M. Glassford, of Knox Church, another member of the committee which recommended the change in the old hymnal, explained that some of the hymns dropped had not proved popular, generally, and that others merely duplicated thoughts expressed in other and better hymns.

"However, it's only in the nature of an experiment," said the Rev. Mr. Glassford. "The presbyteries will have the final say. While there may be old favourites left out, some of the new hymns may take their place."

The Rev. A. McMillan, who is now in Nova Scotia, acted as secretary of the committee and had a great deal to do with the alterations and substitutions made.

SAVING SOME PSALMS.

The Toronto Presbytery discussed the reasons for the omission of some 20 psalms for the new Presbyterian Hymnal. No decision was reached. The Presbytery, after dealing at some length with the question, decided to further discuss the hymn book as a whole at a special meeting on Tuesday, February 16th. Rev. R. C. Tibb, secretary, stated that the final report would not be ready until April, when the members could move a resolution to the effect that it be sent on to the General Assembly.

One of the members thought that there were five of the older Psalms which should be retained, and he would give their numbers at the special meeting, he said.

FREEMASONS ENTERTAIN 160 CANADIAN MEN

Member of Contingents Honoured in London Says of 32,000 Men in Canadian Contingent Over 6000 Are in Craft.

(Christian Science Monitor)

LONDON — The members of the Empire Lodge, No. 2106, recently entertained at the Criterion restaurant, 160 Masonic brethren of the Canadian contingents training for active service in the United Kingdom.

In proposing the toast of the "Canadian Grand Lodges" Bro. Hermann Klein, P. G. Org., expressed his great pleasure at receiving the request to propose so important a toast. Next year they would celebrate the thirtieth anniversary of the Lodge, which had been founded by brethren who possessed great love for the mother country, and the lands overseas, and were anxious to form a strong binding link between Masons of all lands. They had all along guarded jealously their privileges of exercising fellowship with visitors from distant parts of the Empire. They had heard much of the Canadian grand lodges, each of which had good men and true ranged under its banner, and it was recognised by the Empire Lodge as a distinct privilege to be able to entertain brethren from all of these grand lodges at that festival. They had entertained some remarkable gatherings in the past.

In the year of Queen Victoria's diamond jubilee, when Masons were present from all the distant points and colonies, the lodge had the honour of entertaining some 300 brethren of high rank, including five premiers of colonial governments. In 1903 they had initiated Viscount Hayashi, minister plenipotentiary of Japan to the United Kingdom, the first of his race to be received into a lodge in England. Brother Klein gave the names of the grand lodges of Canada, the brethren of each responding, and it was found that eight grand lodges were represented: Alberta, British Columbia, Ontario, Manitoba, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Quebec and Saskatchewan.

Brother Lieutenant-Colonel H. F. McLeod of the Hiram Lodge, New Brunswick, responded. He was gratified, he said, that he should have the honour of addressing Masons in the inland home-land, whence his progenitors went long ago, and to speak of that unity of kinship and Masonry which existed the wide world over. That unity was represented in Canada by the fact that of the 32,000 men who formed the Canadian contingent over 6,000, or about one-fifth of the total number, were members of the craft.

Every part of Canada was loyally represented, and though only a few brethren had responded to the toast of some grand lodges and a large number to others, their patriotism and Masonic enthusiasm were equally strong and active. In his own old province by the sea the flag of Masonry was unfurled as long ago as 1783, and by its side the flag of Britain had ever been revered.

All Masons were proud of having descended directly from the mother grand lodges of Great Britain. They created and maintained a unity of brotherhood and empire which no international upheavals could sever. They all gloried in the achievements of the past; they remembered the traditions of Waterloo, of Trafalgar, of Wellington and of Nelson, but the proudest thing they could think of, he said, and take inspiration from, was the present-day fact that they were presenting a solid front for the empire and following the flag which went to the ends of the world, ranged black and white round its standard, gave equal rights to all in their cities and Churches, and made its laws for the rich and poor alike That was why when troubled days came, Canada, New Zealand, Australia, India and all the isles of the seas, had responded with one voice and one purpose, to maintain and preserve the traditions and institutions which guarded the constitutions of liberty

Brother Harry Hereford, W.M., who presided, proposed the toast of the visitors from overseas, and in responding Brother Major Clarke said it was a matter of great pride that they should be welcomed to an English lodge which came under the rule of the Duke of Connaught as Grand Master. They in England little knew how his Royal Highness had inspired the whole of Canada with a sense of loyalty. What he had done would never be fully known. Every appearance of discord or disunion had suddenly disappeared all had vanished; and every Canadian felt a special pride in upholding the sentiment of a united empire by word and deed.

One-Thousandth Part of German Atrocities Untold Says U.S. Man

A letter in a recent issue of the New York Herald dealing with the acts of the Germans in Belgium and France is as follows:

The Journal Official de la Republique of recent date contains the report of the official French commission designated by the French government to inquire about the German atrocities in the localities previously invaded by the German troops and then evacuated by them. This report is the result of investigations only over a relatively small area; it does not cover even the one-thousandth part of German iniquities.

But it gives enough data to confound the defenders of German morals and culture, those professors of all sorts, of whom it is difficult to say what kind of aberration bears on their mentality and degrades their hearts, unless we simply recognize in them the common stigmata of hypocrisy, knavery or shameless lying.

At the beginning of the war, full of boasting assurance, they thought they could get rid of France with a few strokes and that they would be able to smother all protests against their crimes in the blood of the crushed nations. Sure of coming out victorious and feared by the whole world, they thought they would have no account to render to anybody of their actions, and so they violated women and even children, they stole, martyrized the population, devastated and wantonly mutilated.

Notice that, until the battle of the Marne and the German retreat we did not hear of those calculated protests from German officials and delegated professors against wrongdoings made by the Allies against the German soldiers. No! They were simply rushing themselves toward Paris like hordes of brutes, leaving on their passage shame and crime. Protests of the victims? What does it matter! "Germany is strong and strikes!" said Maximilien Harden. "Germany brings to the world a new law!" said Bernhardt. Who would think and dare of protesting in presence of the triumphal and sweeping German flood? And so, the real German nature expressed itself fully, from open heart, as the world witnessed, for two months, in Belgium and the north of France.

But the Marne battle came and the bandits in uniform began to think it advisable to organize a campaign of counter accusation against the French, Belgians, Russians and English, with the hope of neutralizing partially the reports of the atrocities committed by the German troops, horrors which had come to light. And the impudent campaign went on. German agents took the counterpart of every charge brought against the German soldiers and officers, and against the German princes themselves, and tried to force it against the Allies combatants. This was a stupid expedient, but in such a case there is always some hope of abusing the public who cannot read everything, and these Teutonic tactics kept up the hearts of Germans all over the world, and principally in America.

However, since the Germans have lost the hope of crushing France and trampling on the French nation, as they did in Belgium, they seem more cautious and prudent. But even now we do not know what treatment the bestial instincts which are at the bottom of their nature inflicts on the population of France and Belgium, cut off from all communication with the civilized world.

DRIVING THE AUSTRIANS OVER THE MOUNTAINS.—A report says the Russians have regained all the passes in the Carpathians, in which case the Austrians are in trouble again. The figures in the map indicate: (1) Russians' advance over the principal mountain ridge from Jasliska to Mezo-Laborc. (2) An offensive movement by the Austrians south-east of Uzsok Pass was repulsed with tremendous losses. (3) South-east of Beskid the Russians destroyed a German battalion.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Man., Feb. 3.—May wheat sold as high as $1.61⅛ in the opening five minutes of business; July sold at $1.62 at about the same time; 70c was bid for May oats while July was unchanged. The market was excited and nervous, and in the official openings a wide range in prices was registered.

Trading was light in futures and millers buying, exporters holding aloof, awaiting more settled conditions. The cash market was quiet.

Wheat futures closed 2⅛c lower. Cash closed 3c to 4c down; oats ⅛c lower, and flax 1¾c lower.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Feb. 3.—The foreign demand for Manitoba spring wheat showed little improvement, but there were bids for No. 1 northern for February-March shipment, and as they were 1c per quarter higher than yesterday, sale of a few loads were made at 65c to London, which is the highest price made up to the present. Owing to the decline in prices for oats in the Winnipeg option market today there was an easier feeling in the local market for Canadian western grades and prices were reduced 1-2c per bushel, but the demand is very limited on account of them being so much higher than local oats, which were stronger at an advance of 1c to 1c per bushel, with sales of 30,000 bushels of No. 2 white at 64c and carlots at 66c. The flour market was without any new feature, but the feeling is firm at the recent rise.

MINNEAPOLIS GRAIN MARKET.

MINNEAPOLIS, Feb. 3.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.65½; No. 1 northern, $1.65½ to $1.65; No. 2 northern, $1.62 to $1.64½; May, $1.69 bid.

Corn—No. 3 yellow, 72c to 72½c.

Oats—No. 3 white, 55½c to 56c.

Flour and bran—Unchanged.

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, Feb. 3.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 168 cattle, 341 hogs, 40 sheep, 15 calves and 819 horses.

Outside of the horses which were for army purposes, it will be seen that there was scarcely enough in the different classes to make a market.

Values in the different classes were practically unchanged excepting for hogs, which being scarce on account of the storm, were reported and higher, as follows: Selects, fed and watered, sold at $8, and $8.25 weighed off cars, and $7.65 f.o.b. cars.

J. Hodgkinson bought for Armour of Hamilton, 21 cattle, 1100 lbs., at $7.50.

Fred Armstrong bought six milkers and springers at $65 each.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Feb. 3.—At the C. P. R. live stock market there were no new developments in the market for cattle, the feeling being steady and demand fair. Choice steers sold at from $6.75 to $7.25, cows, $4.50 to $6, and bulls, $4.50 to $6.50 per cwt. Demand from packers for common canners is fair, and sales were made at $2.75 to $4 per cwt. Lambs are firm under a good demand and small offerings, and sales were made at $7.75 to $8.25 per cwt., as to size and quality, while sheep were steady at $4.50 to $5 per cwt. Hogs declined 10c to 15c per cwt., owing to the fact that the supply was somewhat in excess of the requirements. Sales of selected lots were made at $8.25 to $8.40, and heavy at $7.75 to $8 per cwt., weighed off cars. Trade in calves fair at prices ranging from $5 to $12 each.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

CHICAGO, Feb. 3.—Cattle—Receipts, 4000; market, firm; beeves, $6.80 to $9.30; cows and heifers, $3.80 to $8.25; calves, $8.25 to $11.75.

Hogs—Receipts, 16,000; market, higher; light, $6.85 to $7.20; mixed, $6.85 to $7.25; heavy, $6.70 to $7.25; rough, $6.70 to $6.90; pigs, $5.60 to $6.75; bulk of sales, $7.05 to $7.20.

Sheep—Receipts, 8000; market, strong; native, $6.25 to $7.15; yearlings, $7.25 to $8.10; lambs, native, $7.50 to $9.10.

Invasion Fixed In September.

LONDON, Feb. 4.—The correspondent of The Morning Post at Petrograd telegraphs:

"I hear unofficially that Enver Pasha, foreseeing utter ruin for the Turkish armies, has attempted to despatch valuable documents by time to Erzerum.

"The Russians, nevertheless, have captured a considerable quantity of valuable documents, among which are letters affording incontestable proof that the Turkish invasion of the Caucasus was a settled thing early in September."

The Dogs of Turkey.

In the matter of kindness to animals it is said that the Turk cannot be surpassed. Thus at Stamboul the wandering dogs are treated with great gentleness, and when puppies come into the world they are lodged with their mother at the side of the street in improvised kennels made out of old boxes lined with straw and bits of carpet. And frequently when a young Turk happens to be flush of money he goes to the nearest baker's shop and buys a quantity of bread, which he distributes among the dogs of the quarter, who testify their gratitude by jumping up at him with muddy paws and sniffing muzzles.

Hamlet In South Africa.

It can hardly be expected that "post impressionism" will be confined to pictures in the future. A friend of mine writes me from South Africa that some genius out there has done "Hamlet" in the Taal and quotes the following example, which seems to me extremely post impressionistic. Here it is:

Hamlet—Wie is u?
Ghost—Ik is een spook.
Hamlet—Wies spook is u?
Ghost—Ik is yn papa's spook.

A Spade and an Acre.

I believe in a spade and an acre of ground. Whose cuts a straight path to his own living by the help of God, in the sun and rain and sprouting grain, seems to me to be a universal workingman. He solves the problem of life, not for one, but for all men of sound body.—Emerson.

Pocket Mirrors.

From the twelfth to the fifteenth century small mirrors, carried in the pocket or attached to the girdle, were regarded as indispensable adjuncts to ladies' toilets. The pocket mirror was a circular plaque of polished metal fixed in a shallow box and covered with a lid.

Unselfish.

She—George, is that one of those cigars I gave you on your birthday? He—No; I'm saving those for my friends. She—You dear, self sacrificing, unselfish man!

Children.

Children are to be trained daily. To teach a child the right is to give him ideas; to train him is to reduce those ideas to practice.—H. W. Beecher.

The first hour in the morning is the rudder of the day.—Herbert.

CONSECRATION NIGHT AT EPWORTH LEAGUE

Regular Meeting Proved Interesting and Instructive.

LAKEFIELD, Feb. 3—The Epworth League of the Methodist Church held its regular Consecration meeting in the lecture room of the Church on Monday evening, Feb. 1st. The meeting was well attended and proved to be of a most interesting and instructive character ov. Wm. J. Johnston presided. In addition to the routine business programme, the following numbers were given:

Paper on "My Favourite Poet," by Glen Madill.

Paper on "My Favourite Lecture," by Mrs. (Rev.) Johnson.

Violin solo—Miss E. Balsdon.

Paper on "My Favourite Book," by Stanley Hill.

Paper on "My Favourite Hymn," by E. Northey.

Paper on "My Favourite Sermon" by William Lemay.

The President, F. Brown, B.A., then gave a summary of the papers given, and blended the thoughts expressed by the different individuals into one comprehensive idea.

The pith of Mr. Brown's remarks was, "that in choosing one's favourite poet, book, hymn, lecture, or sermon, one must choose the one, that points out most clearly our duty towards our fellow-man, for, in this age, 'one does not live unto oneself.'"

Extradition Soon.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—The attempted destruction of the international bridge of the C. P. R. and Maine Central Railways, near the Canadian pier of the St. Croix river bridge, created consternation among officials of the State Department and the British embassy yesterday. Up to a late hour neither the Department nor the embassy had been officially apprised of the crime, but were expecting despatches of an explanatory character.

Secretary of State Bryan expects that the course of the Canadian Government will be to demand at once the extradition of the miscreant, and it is probable that the British embassy will be the first official channel of information on the subject. Extradition will not be long withheld, according to Mr. Bryan.

Bitter Struggle Now at Cernay

PARIS, Feb. 4.—The fighting in Alsace is being carried on with the greatest ferocity by both sides. The French began the new attack with an army which had been amply reinforced, and were able momentarily to storm the German positions on Hartsmannsweiler-kopf, Molkenstein and Hirtzenstein. They met with check at but one point in the valley between the first-named points.

The Germans, thinking their positions were secure again, tried to take the offensive. At only one point, north of Hirtzenstein, did the enemy meet with any success, and this partial gain cost them dearly. At every other point the French held their ground.

After the last heavy bombardment of Cernay it was rumored in Switzerland that the Germans had succeeded in reoccupying the town, but this report is quite untrue. French guns mounted on the hills commanding the town made any German occupation impossible, but the enemy is able to drop shells into Cernay from their present position. The fact of the matter is that neither the French nor the Germans are in possession of the town. According to The Journal du Jura, the Germans have retired to the north to a strongly fortified position east of Steinbach. The Germans also have increased their fortifications around Uffholz.

The German guns that are bombarding Cernay are installed in the forest of Nonnenbruch. The French will not attempt to enter Cernay until these batteries are silenced.

There is every reason for believing that the recent advance of the French on Altkirch was more important than has been officially stated. The French are considered to be in an excellent position on the Cernay-Altkirch front. Their next attack is likely to mark yet another advance.

MISSED DEATH BY INCHES THREE TIMES

This Soldier Had an Adventurous Career—Eager to Return to the Fray

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

TORONTO, Feb. 4 — To escape death by inches three times, then to be sent back from the front, paralysed from the waist down with rheumatism, and now beginning to think of getting to the firing line again—this has been the experience of Platoon-Sergeant A. P. Scardifield, brother of Lieut. L. B. Scardifield, both of whom are Toronto boys with the Eaton Motor Battery at the Exhibition Camp. He tells his experience in a letter.

Platoon-Sergeant Scardifield has been in the battle of the Mons, Marne, and Aisne. In the retreat from Mons a bullet went through the ammunition pouch strapped over his tunic. It drilled right through a clip of cartridges without discharging any. Later a piece of shrapnel passed through the equipment Scardifield carried on his back, failing by a matter of an inch to penetrate his body. Next a bullet lodged in his right arm. It was extracted in the trenches to save sending him back from the front. At the battle of the Aisne he suffered so severely from rheumatism that he had to be almost dragged from the trenches and sent home to Winchester Now he expects to shortly go to Sheerness, and then back to France, and fighting. In his letter he says the soldiers "sing while going into hell and laugh while they are there." His comrades have been several times shot at by the enemy while trying to assist the wounded Germans. When the war is over he says he is coming to Canada.

The late H. P. Scardifield and his four sons were all in the Rifle Brigade, Prince Consort's Own, in the Old Country. Lieut. H. W. Scardifield, who is with the Eaton Battery at the Exhibition, and A. P. Scardifield, both served in England, Ireland, Africa, Malta, and India. Bandmaster L. J. Scardifield, another son, died in Malta, while on service. Lieut. L. B. Scardifield, also at the Exhibition Camp, served in England, Malta and Ireland. He was wounded in the Belfast riot eight years ago. His father-in-law is State Trumpeter for Scotland.

Altogether there are some 25 relatives of the two Toronto officers at the front. Both are married.

MAN'S LIFE RESTORED AFTER BREATHING ENDED

PARIS, Feb. 3.—War is surgery's opportunity. Many are the miracles of lancet and scalpel in the rude field ambulances just behind the line of fire, as in the admirably equipped regular hospital where wounded are nursed back to health. It frequently happens, too, that war brings surgeons face to face with novel emergencies, life hanging upon the ingenuity and speed of the operator.

At the British hospital installed at the Hotel Majestic in Paris there was such an emergency the other day. It was the case of a French soldier wounded in the fighting on the Aisne by a shrapnel ball, which had struck his backbone and glanced off. The very top, or atlas vertebra, had been struck by the ball in such a way as to cause a pressure upon the spinal cord. The man was rendered dumb by the shock and the pressure lost him the use of arms and legs.

Chief Surgeon Jell operated immediately, but just as the patient was placed on the table one of the nurses exclaimed that the man was dying. The surgeon verified the patient's apparently fainting condition and found that he had indeed stopped breathing. The heart still fluttered a little.

The soldier was turned over on his stomach, an incision was directed into the region of the base of the skull, and in a few seconds the portion of the atlas vertebra which was pressing on the spinal cord had been removed. Then the patient resumed breathing.

To-day the soldier can use his arms and legs, and it will not be long before he can leave the hospital.

CRITICISM OF COUNTY COUNCIL CRITICIZED

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—In vain I have scanned your pages in the hope that someone would say a word in condemnation of the childish onslaught hurled by the County Council at their meeting reported in your paper of the 30th ult., at Miss Beavis, of the House of Refuge, a tirade of abuse which is founded, according to the discussion at the meeting referred to, entirely on heresay evidence.

Would it not have been more in keeping with level-headed commonsense and dignity—if the members of the Council know what dignity is—had they quietly inquired into the pros. and cons. of the "hired girl" question first, instead of dragging a young woman's affairs all over the County, and ordering an inquiry afterwards?

What, I would like to know, has the County Council of Peterborough to do with the "digging up," as they so vaguely put it, of their public servants, in this particular case? As they do not provide a uniform I consider that it is unmitigated impertinence on their part to discuss this young lady in such a way. Let them try to think, as sane people, that if Miss Beavis is tidy and neat in her habits of dress, living as she does, among a number of people, old, and tending, perhaps, to be careless in the matter of dress, as impoverished age often is, that this very "fault," as they would have it, is, instead, an admirable example.

It is really too bad that the young women of Havelock are in such impecuniary circumstances that so many of them would be willing to give their services for board, plus $7.50 a month. I had no idea that Warden Kindred represented such a place of destitution. I would suggest that within the next few days the House of Refuge be removed to that locality in preparation against the host of Havelock dames who will some day be compelled to flock to this institution, not as helpers, but as partakers of the magnanimous beneficence of the County of Peterborough.

And Reeve Fitzgerald, poor fellow, who does not know the difference between a suggestion and a "kick." His cook must have an original way in suggesting an egg for breakfast. I particularly notice in this report, however, that the "egg kick" was passed over as a joke, and and suggest that this also be inquired into. On the face of the fact that the House Farm sold eggs to the value of $19.00 only last year, it would appear they have eggs and to spare, and in these circumstances it can be but a weak argument that they sell eggs to buy meat.

Surely an occasional egg might be given to these poor old folks, and more especially to those incapable of thoroughly masticating butcher meat.

I am,

Yours, etc.

Another Country Kicker.

Bribery Charge Was Proved

Aldermen and Commissioner in Montreal Found to Have Profitted

QUEBEC, Feb. 4 — The report of Judge Wilfrid Mercier, of Montreal, on an investigation held into the charge laid by the newspaper Le Pays that a member of the Montreal Catholic School Commission received a bribe of $3,000 in respect to lands acquired for a school site, was laid on the table of the Legislature yesterday.

Judge Mercier finds that there was a conspiracy among Gustave Vinet, Aldermen Julien Therrin and Napoleon Giroux, who is also a school commissioner to divert $14,572 from the treasury of the Catholic School Commission of Montreal, to their own personal profit.

The report states that by reason of the conspiracy Gustave Vinet, original owner of the land, realized on the sale 60 per cent. more than he would have done, if the lands in question had been sold at the price fixed by him in an option given to Achille Laurin, which price, in fact, was then the current price.

"Julian Therrin, who bought the land from Vinet on his part," continues Mr. Justice Mercier, in the report, "realized a profit of nearly 100 per cent., in which Comissioner Giroux participated in a very large measure."

Therrin paid $18,154 for the land, and it was bought by Ald. Giroux on behalf of the school commission for $32,465.

Vinet is also found guilty of perjuring himself during the investigation.

The charge was laid by Le Pays on September 28, 1912. Judge Mercier made his investigation, but his report was held up by action in the courts taken on behalf of Ald. Therrin. Finally Armand Lavergne, M.P.P., demanded that the report be laid on the table of the Legislature.

Few Licenses Have Been Issued

To Motor Car Owners in Peterboro —Current Year Starts Feb. 1st

Ontario motorists will have to get a move on if they expect to comply with the regulations of the provincial secretary's department. The license branch of the department reports that out of the 32,000 licenses issued in the Province last year, only 2,300 applications have been received for 1915 licenses.

The regulations provide that the police of the various municipalities can collect the license fee by bringing the delinquents to court, but in other years two weeks additional time has been allowed motorists. This year, in view of the new license laws and the inability of many motorists to fully comprehend their meaning, it may be necessary to allow a longer period.

In the order in council passed by the Government, the 1914 license law was extended to February 1, but this time has now expired and motorists are liable to be summoned and fined heavily for operating cars without licenses.

There are over three hundred motor car owners in Peterborough and so far very few have applied for a license. Of course an owner who is not operating his car does not need to secure a license until he is prepared to start using it. The current year started Feb. 1 and a license secured after that date will only be good until Feb. 1, 1916.

War Swells The Savings in U. S. Postal Banks

WASHINGTON, D.C., Feb. 4. — More than one-hundred thousand persons have been added to the list of postal savings bank depositors since the European war began, increasing the total deposits of the system at the rate of nearly $3,000,000 a month. Officials think by this means that thousands of foreigners working in this country are holding their earnings instead of sending money orders to their native lands, as in the past.

Figures made public to-day by the Post Office Department showed that the total amount on deposit with postal savings banks on December 31 was $39,200,000 to the credit of 497,000 people. Handling this money were 9,631 post offices, New York city leading all the others, with deposits of $9,498,538.

Until the war began the deposits of the system had increased steadily at the average rate of $1,000,000 a month. During the six months from July 1 last to January 1 the increase was $15,750,000. In August withdrawals began to fall off, new faces appeared at the post offices and at the end of the month $4,000,000 had been added to the total deposits.

GENERAL GERMAN ATTACK IS DUE WITHIN A FEW DAYS

French, British and Belgian Officials Await With Confidence the Next Desperate Offensive of the Teuton Legions.

LONDON, Feb. 4. — The Daily Telegraph has the following from C. F. Bertelli, dated Paris:

"I learn from official sources that the Germans are expected to assume a determined offensive all along the line in Flanders and France within the next few days.

"The military authorities here are awaiting the attack with calm confidence, convinced that it is foredoomed to failure."

In a desperate effort to halt the French through Champagne and the adjacent Argonne region, the Germans during the past 24 hours have made seven distinct counter-attacks without success in a single venture, according to the French War Office reports received from Paris yesterday. The official statement from Berlin says the French were on the offensive near Perthes (in the Rheims sector), and their attacks were repulsed.

The German efforts were directed against the French positions west of Perthes-les-Hurlus, north of Mesnil-les-Hurlus, north of Massiges, and against Hill No. 200, near Perthes, in the Champagne district, and against Bagatelle in the Argonne, where attacks were made at 2 p.m. and at 6 p.m. on Tuesday, and a final assault during the night. Every attempt was repulsed, says Paris.

Of late the Germans in the region of La Bassee and Lens have adopted a new form of attack. They open terrific musketry and machine-gun fusillades, which swept the crest of the French and British trenches, forcing the allies to hug the walls of their earthworks, but almost never do they follow these fusillades with infantry attacks. Yesterday's afternoon report chronicles the silencing of one such effort by the use of artillery. The French batteries are quite overcome the German riflemen, and they soon were content to remain quiet.

The French War Office said last night:

"There is nothing of particular importance to report, except that in Champagne three German attacks were all repulsed to the west of Perthes, north of Mesnil-les-Hurlus and to the north of Massiges.

"In the Argonne a fresh attack at Bagatelle was repulsed by our troops during the night of Feb. 2-3.

The afternoon bulletin issued at Paris said:

"In the country north of the Lys there is nothing to report.

"Between the Lys and the Oise, in the sector of Nouvette, to the west of Lens, French batteries put an end to a spirited fusillade from the enemy.

"The Germans endeavored to float down the River Ancre some blazing rafts, starting them from a point above Aveluy, which is north of Albert. We were successful, however, in stopping these floats before they exploded.

"Our artillery has continued to secure excellent results in the Valley of the Aisne.

"We have made slight progress and have taken prisoners and have repulsed a counter-attack to the west of hill No. 200, near Perthes.

"In the Argonne a second German attack took place yesterday near Bagatelle at about 6 o'clock in the evening. This also was repulsed, as had been the attack previously reported, and which took place at 1 o'clock in the afternoon.

"The front from the Meuse to the Vosges has been quiet. On Alsace we are organizing our forces on the ground won by us to the south of Ammertzyvillier."

ONLY PIN-PRICK CAMPAIGN

CAIRO, Feb. 4.—(Via London.)—The following official communication was issued here yesterday:

"During Tuesday night the enemy attempted to cross the Suez Canal near Toussoum (35 miles north of Suez). They were permitted to bring bridging material to the bank of the canal unmolested, but directly they started bridging operations our troops attacked and the enemy fled in disorder, leaving all the material in our hands. Several of the enemy were drowned.

"The enemy also attacked on the El-Kantara front (40 miles south of Port Said), at daylight yesterday. They were easily repulsed, losing 16 killed or wounded and 40 prisoners. Our casualties were three men wounded."

British forces had a skirmish with Turks Tuesday in the neighborhood of Ismailia, on Lake Timsah, on the Suez Canal. The Turks finally retreated. The British had six men wounded. The engagement occurred during a sandstorm, but the shooting by the Tuffs, both with rifles and with artillery was bad.

An earlier despatch stated:

Australian troops were victorious over a detachment of Turkish soldiers in a skirmish near Nakhl, on the caravan route between Suez and El Akaba, Monday night, according to advices received here yesterday.

The Turks are said to have retreated, leaving 30 dead and wounded on the field. This fight was the Australians' baptism of fire, and they acquitted themselves with great credit.

The Australians here are now of considerable strength, a second expeditionary force having just arrived from the Commonwealth. The new forces include infantry, cavalry and artillery, with complete hospital and commissariat equipment.

A Pin-Prick Campaign.

LONDON, Feb. 4. — The opinion still prevails in London that the Turks will not attempt to cross the desert with a large force, and that the present pin-pricks were arranged only to compel the British to keep troops in Egypt instead of sending them to France.

Tea growing is a fine art. The quality of tea depends on the elevation of the land and the nature of the soil. Cheap teas are produced in vast quantities in the low lying valleys where the humidity encourages the growth of large coarse leaves. On the breezy hill-tops are found the most delicate and tender growths. Salada tea is grown entirely in hill-top gardens, hence its distinctive charm of flavour.

FIREMEN AND POLICEMEN ARE NOT WORKMEN

According to the Legal Interpretation of the Compensation Act A Case in Point

ACT DOES NOT APPLY

Firemen and policemen are not workmen within the terms of the Compensation Act, and if they be injured in the performance of their duties, they cannot claim an indemnity under the provincial enactment which governs accidents to workmen, according to a decision handed down by Mr. Justice Panneton in the case of Germain vs. Maisonneuve. Germain, who exercises the double functions of fireman and policeman in the east end of the city, was thrown from a fire engine when responding to an alarm. He sued for a lump sum as well as an annual rente, in virtue of the Workmen's Compensation Act.

"The first question to be decided," said Mr. Justice Panneton, after summarising the facts, "is whether the Compensation Act applies in a case such as the present one. A municipal corporation can be subject to this law for all things which it does of a nature appertaining to the industrial domain, but I cannot see that all the operations conducted with a view to the protection of the property of citizens against fire, can partake of the nature of industrial operations.

"In this case we have before us an accident which occurred in the course of the transporting by its own employees of a pumping engine belonging to the defendant, from the station to the site of the fire. The defendant is not paid for this service by the victims of the fire. But the plaintiff has alleged that he from time to time did little repair jobs on the station and that he did such work as a labourer. This work, whatever its nature, was not done on an industrial building. Whilst doing these little jobs, plaintiff did not exercise the trade of workman, but simply as one having the care of the ordinary maintenance of the building in which he lived.

"Under the circumstances, the Compensation Act does not apply; as there is no fault laid at the door of the defendant, there is no reason to examine whether plaintiff was himself guilty of fault. The action was dismissed with costs."

BACKING UP ARGUMENTS.

Arguments addressed to Canadians in favour of buying goods made in Canada would be as much use as trying to haul a load with a rope made of sand, if the goods themselves were not the best proof of the argument. It is a melancholy waste of language and printer's ink to drool out all sorts of lofty and intangible reasons for spending money that way, if there is not the quality and the immediate and ultimate value in the goods, themselves to back up the language.

There is no doubt about the value of Canadian goods. All they need is the test of use. Spending the first ten dollars or so specifically for goods made in this country may seem like an experiment at first. The experiment soon becomes a certainty, the certainty a habit, and the habit a great and lasting economy. Furthermore it is a habit once formed hard to break. And inasmuch as there is no sane Canadian manufacturer likely to ask people to break it, and no Canadian who has formed the habit that will care to break it on his account, it follows that when buying Canadian goods has become a popular custom, the economic prosperity of this country will be an assured fact.

But there is no value in language if it is not backed up by value in the goods.

Frenchmen Cheerily Face Death in the Argonne

Merry Parties of Soldiers Chat Here and There Along Front at Sainte-Menehould, Their Conversation Giving No Hint of Perils of War.

(Special Dispatch.)

Paris, Jan.

"At a table near the window three officers, each with a captain's galons on his kepi, are chatting amicably. Every now and then a little burst of laughter greets a sally of one or another. A closer look shows that they are chaplains; one is a priest, another a preacher and the third is a rabbi."

Frantz-Reichel is describing, in the Figaro, a scene in the St. Nicholas Hotel, at Sainte-Menehould in the Argonne, where he stopped while making a tour of the French lines. This town is a headquarters base for one of the army corps operating in that region. Mr. Reichel gives an interesting description of the town in wartime.

"Sainte-Menehould," he says, "is stirred by an intense military life. Through its narrow streets interminable convoys of provisions pass; on the sidewalks soldiers of all arms are going to and fro; cyclists flit by, blaring automobiles demand a right of way; detachments clad in weather-beaten uniforms go clumping by with heavy tread; young and old, all are there; fine looking old men, with bristling mustaches, modern avatars of the ancient Gauls or of Napoleon's Troopers; all in good humor, laughing, talking, singing, buttressed by the indomitable trait, the characteristic of France.

Deadliness of Cannon.

"And, through it all comes the everlasting rumble of the far off cannon. I listen to it, but they pay no more attention to it. In front is Vienne-la-Ville, the woods of la Grurie, where every day the shells fall, rifle bullets rain and dynamite belches in volcano-like eruption. These are the troops who have fought. They fought yesterday, they rest to-day, they will fight again to-morrow; their joyous serenity confounds me, and I admire the marvellous phenomenon which has united the nation and made of them all prodigious warriors.

"It is noontime and we go to the hotel to luncheon. At a big table on the left are soldiers and civilians mixed; to the right, aligned along the walls, rows of little tables, all occupied by soldiers except one, which we take. Every one is in good humor. They drink, eat, smoke, sheltered from the wind and rain; yet the front is near, the firing line less than two hours' hike, and all those who surround us have met death face to face and have seen him pass them to strike elsewhere. Do they think of this? I do not know. In the habit of conversation I am unable to hear any one thing connectedly, but I know that they are telling anecdotes of combat, stories of the trenches, mishaps on the road. Elbows on the table, jests on their lips, they are no different from soldiers in times of peace who in their hours of idle liberty gather about the tables in the the cavalry encampment."

Inns and Cafes of Garrison Towns.

"But this is Sainte-Menehould, and out there are the trenches; ours to be defended, the enemy's to be taken; wires to be cut—through rebuffs, bombs and bullets and hand to hand at the bayonet's point. To-day it is life, to-morrow perhaps death. They live for the moment and profit by it, simply, bravely."

Mr. Reichel gives some interesting details of the road to Sainte-Menehould, through the defiles of the Argonne.

"It was at the little railroad station of Villers-en-Argonne that for the second time I heard the booming of cannon," he says. "Villers-en-Argonne is a little station at the foot of a double line of hills. The sound came from far off, from the corridors of the Argonne hills, and seemed to come at once by air and through the ground.

"For some time we had been passing convoys, and now we began to encounter detachments of horsemen who, well mounted, were going at a fast trot to relieve sentinels, and provision wagons pulled by robust horses and driven by weather-beaten wagoners. The road to Sainte-Menehould leads straight ahead through a picturesque countryside. On the right is the development of the Argonne forest, high hills, stripped of verdure and tinted red and rusty, framing the green meadows. Here and there villages set in corners or at the feet of slopes, with rustic houses, give an Alpine aspect to the place.

Alpine Effect Is Strong.

"At —— the Alpine effect is accentuated. The town is filled with soldiers, who have improvised picturesque shelters for themselves, some for shelter, others for their comfort. The presence of the Alpine chasseurs, the 'black devils' so dreaded by the Germans, completes the Savoyarde effect; mules are parked in the fields bordering the road, small hooded, with shining skins; on the road more mules, driven by their conductors, are coming from water. Further on there is a picturesque confusion of uniforms—blue trousers, red breeches, gray cloth; berettas, kepis and fatigue caps, all mingled in a brilliant melange.

"In the neighboring fields are all the material, the equipment of military organization; here the ammunition park, there the wagons, under improvised shelters of planks, branches and mud, stables and primitive huts; kitchens in the open air, men at work, pipe in mouth, washing their linen; others, hands in pockets, standing lazily by or seated on some howider, reading a month-old newspaper.

"Beyond —— the crests increase; the valleys grow narrower, more beautiful, more savage, defended by the picturesque disorder of nature. Finally, a break in the ledge and we see Sainte-Menehould, spread out at the foot of two hills—on one side of them the old town, on the other the cavalry encampment."

French Troops on Line from Nancy to Epinal Rejoice in Respite from War

Officers in Their Freshest Uniforms and Men Healthy and Well Kept Greet a Party of Newspaper Men Officially Escorted Along the Battle Front in Flanders to Gap of Belfort.

(Special Dispatch.)

Paris, Jan —

How the French troops of the first line, who have been fighting without cessation from the beginning of the struggle until a short time ago in Lorraine, the Vosges and the Argonne, are enjoying a well earned respite while fresh men have taken their places is told by Mr. Emile Berr in the Figaro. Mr. Berr was one of a party of newspaper men taken under official escort along the front from Flanders to the gap of Belfort.

"Along the road from Nancy to Epinal," Mr. Berr says, "there is no fighting. Our guides from the general staff indicated to us various bodies of troops in repose. Here was the division of cavalry of General G——. They were waiting for us. It was almost a review; the officers were in their freshest uniforms, the men healthy and well kept. Together with the Generals we went to the cantonments.

"'We have been fighting for four months,' he said, 'in the Argonne, the Vosges and in the Woevre district. My men are enjoying a well earned rest. My horses, too, are resting up. They needed it.'

"He adjusts the horses now in perfect state, with glistening coats. They are recovering from hard work. Some of them, we are told, have been for a week at a time without being saddled. Now their flanks are filling out.

"We go into the officers' club in the village, hanging beside the door is a bird cage, in which are two cabins made of a match stick. On the cage is the inscription, 'Dangerous birds.'

"Outside we see the cyclist battalion with their machine guns mounted on automobiles. They are in fine shape, ready for instant work.

"But time presses. We must be on our way. We drink a cup of champagne with the General—a toast to France, to victory—and then go on our way.

"The war is still going on here, but has changed its character. Veritable cities have been dug, subterranean villages with shelter for men and horses, and immense holes made, where, protected to a certain extent from the batteries of seventy-five and of heavy artillery, are shelters. One could wander in the woods, over the plains and across rivers from the Marthe to the Moselle, from la Montagne to Grand-Couronne, from the forest of Champenoux to that of Parroy almost without suspicion that the enemy was near, that one was rubbing elbows with battalions, with divisions and with army corps.

"Silence everywhere, now and then troubled by the grumble of cannon—like a prayer which only the Grace encourages could render fearless, exuberant and courageous—nation has adapted itself to scientific warfare.

What Regiments Do Here.

"I have seen in the Argonne forests entire regiments sheltered in huts so cleverly constructed that one would not notice them until almost upon them. A few branches, turf and clay roofs and holes, in shape holes rooms where eight men can sleep. A small chimney, from which a wire illuminates the den. Racks of wood hold the rifles. An improvised chimney carries off the smoke of the wood fire that heats the place.

"In a plain I saw near the camp of Chalons another subterranean village where territorials had been camping for more than six months. During their spare time they had cut through streets and roadways. For their general, General ——, whose activity and sprightliness are impressing, they have constructed a big reception hall, where champagne was offered to us.

"Further on I saw another trench constructed by the engineers and all ready for occupancy. It was covered with earth and from above seemed but a gentle undulation of the ground. It contained spacious rooms, observation posts, kitchen and sanitary conveniences.

"We went to the headquarters of General Dubail at X——. Outside the little house is a large court filled with automobiles; inside are several offices devoted to the staff. On the General's table are heaps of maps and photographs. In one corner, planted in a wash bowl, is a bust of the Kaiser, made of clay. He has not got a conquering air. The bust was modelled by a soldier who gave it to the General.

"The General received us affably. He praised his men and told us of his confidence in the success of the operations.

"'You have seen, gentlemen,' he said, 'the work of destruction of the barbarians—villages burned, houses destroyed, fields devastated, all the ruin they have caused in their passage.

"'For the future of civilization, be considered and for humanity, for the peace of Europe and of the world this predatory nation must be destroyed.'"

"Black List" of Belgians Made for Germany Year Ago Is Found

(Special Dispatch.)

Paris, Jan.

One proof that Germans anticipated the invasion of Belgium in their attack on France cited in a recent issue of the Figaro is the existence of a "black list" containing the names of men prominent in Belgian affairs who were known to be sympathetic toward France and would probably take sides with that republic in case of a war. The Figaro speaks of this as follows:—

"Our correspondent at Brussels has had occasion to speak of the 'black list' drawn up by the Germans of Belgian citizens known for their French sympathies who should be gotten out of the way. This list came into the possession of a Belgian who has put it in a safe place, but who made copies for some of the newspapers. Here is this 'black list' in the words and form which it was drawn up by the Germans:—

"'Mr. Roland de Mares, public man of Brussels; Mr. L. Dumont-Wilden, public man of Brussels; Mr. Leon Souhaetbet, public man of Brussels; Mr. Chalmaye (without Belgian name), public man of Brussels; Mr. Maurice Wilmotte, professor in the University of Liege; Mr. Charles Bernard, a public man of Anvers; Mr. Maurice de Smet de Naeyer, public man and president of the French Club at Gand; Mr. Fernin Van der Bosch, magistrate and public man, vice president of the same club at Gand; Mr. Gustave Abel, public man of Gand; Mr. Eugene Gilbert, lawyer and public man at Louvain; Mr. Maurice Renard, magistrate and public man at Bruges.'

"Certain details of this list show the German premeditation in the invasion of Belgium. As a matter of fact, this list has been in existence for more than a year. No change has been made in the address [illegible] the deputy, Mr. Firmin Van den Bosch, who was a chief justice of a court in Khartoum, Egypt; Mr. Maurice Sevaux is now a military auditor at Mons, and Mr. Gustave Abel is now chief secretary of the central organization of the liberal party of Belgium."

CLAD IN NIGHTGOWNS, FRENCH TAKE TRENCH

(Special Dispatch.)

Paris, Jan.

How night caps and night gowns played a prominent part in the capture of a German trench by a daring detachment of French soldiers is related in a letter written by a soldier serving in the Argonne district.

"Some dear old soul, who is under the impression that soldiers at the front go to bed clad in night garments," he writes, "will probably never know that her gift enabled us to execute a brilliant coup and rid ourselves of troublesome neighbors. A few days ago our company received, among other things, a package containing twenty white cotton night gowns and night caps, all carefully hand sewn. We did not know just what to do with them until the night before last one of our 'pioneers' thought of a brilliant scheme which he told the company commander. The officer thought the idea a good one and proceeded to put it into execution.

"The nearest German trench, one which bothered us a great deal, was not more than thirty yards away from us. But to cross that snow-covered space, in the bright moonlight would be certain death. Twenty of the men pulled on night gowns and caps and, holding their pieces beneath them, carefully and cautiously approached over our trenches and began to roll slowly toward the enemy's.

"It took almost a half hour to crawl to the brink of the German work. Then at a whistle signal the men hurled themselves into it, seized the rapid fire guns and drove the defenders out. Then the rest of us followed and took possession.

"So the night gowns served a purpose, after all, although it would probably have surprised the donor had she known to just what use her gift was put."

"STROKE OF PROVIDENCE" AIDED BRITAIN'S NAVAL PREPAREDNESS

(Special Dispatch.)

London, Jan.

How completely prepared for action was the British navy at the start of war is explained in an illuminating article in the issue for 1915 of the Royal Navy List. It gives a clear summary of the course of the war on the seas up to the present.

The main strength of the navy, it is stated, had, by a stroke of Providence, only a few days before war started, been assembled for a test mobilization and exercise, so that when the situation became grave it was even in a greater condition of readiness than in normal times, while the carefully planned system for receiving the reserves at the ports and drafting them to their ships worked so smoothly that the enemy could have gained nothing by a prompt initiative such as it might have been expected he would take. As Sir Edward Grey said on August 3, 'Never was there a time when confidence was more justified in the power of the navy to protect our commerce and our shores.'

Describing in detail how this readiness was reached, the Navy List's current history explains that on July 24, when the Austro-Hungarian note was presented to Servia, the British First, Second and Third fleets and the various flotillas were engaged at sea. By the end of that week the principal ships had returned to harbor and [illegible] with previous orders, the Third Fleet had been demobilized by the return to their homes of the reservists who had been called up for the ten days' test mobilization. The crews of the First and Second Fleet ships were to have received leave by watches, beginning on the 27th.

More Men Than Needed.

As the international outlook became more threatening an order was issued at midnight on Sunday, the 26th, that the first fleet, which was concentrated at Portland, was not to disperse for manoeuvre leave, while ships of the second fleet were to remain at their home ports in proximity to their balance crews. The first fleet had put to sea before receiving the order. It was recalled by wireless and the ships began coaling. The balance crews of [illegible] were then ordered to rejoin with their ships.

Other preliminary measures on land, such as the guarding of depots, &c., were undertaken. On July 29 the first fleet put to sea from Portland "to take up a position whence it could be ready to act as required." At this time the German high seas fleet was on its way back to Kiel from its summer cruise in Norwegian waters, which was not to have ended until July 31.

The number of men available in the reserves was a good deal in excess of the [illegible] required to man the fleet, and it was, therefore, not necessary to wait for all the reservists to report before the whole fleet could be completed to war strength.

"The response to the Admiralty's call, however, was both immediate and enthusiastic, so much so that the whole fleet was mobilized for war within twenty-four hours," the report says. "On the evening of August 2, the day after the notices to the reservists were issued, the Admiralty was able to announce that the mobilization of the British navy was completed in all respects at four o'clock this morning. This is due to the measures taken and to the voluntary response of the reserve men in advance of the royal proclamation which has now been issued. The entire navy is now on a war footing."

In a general review of the operations so far, the conclusion is reached that in every way "except for the loss of a number of gallant seamen, the preliminary period has been entirely in favor of Great Britain."

Much valuable reconnaissance work has been done by the British submarines [illegible] the transport of the expeditionary force a patrol was established day and night by the English flotilla in positions from which the submarines could have attacked the German High Seas fleet and if emerged to dispute the passage of the transports.

Telephone Attached to Probe Discloses Position of Bullet

Distinct Microphonic Rattle Is Heard by Surgeon as Soon as Metal in Patient's Body Is Touched in the Exploratory Process.

(Special Dispatch.)

London, Jan.

The London Times publishes the following:—

"'Search out your enemy and attack him,' is a military maxim which has been adopted by others and perhaps with benefit to ourselves. The maxim is one which has been adopted by military surgeons in the localisation and extraction of bullets and fragments of shell, but in this respect the tendency in the present war has been toward restricting both the searching for and the extraction of such foreign bodies.

"Our contemporary the British Medical Journal in its current issue publishes some interesting articles on this subject. Among these is one by Sir James Mackenzie Davidson on 'The Principles and Practice of the Localisation of Foreign Bodies by X-Rays.' The detection of a bullet or fragment of shell in the body by means of X-rays may be a most simple matter, but the localisation of it—that is to say, its depth from the surface and its relationship to surrounding structures and tissues—is far from simple; in fact, the X-rays, unless properly applied and interpreted, may be altogether misleading and conducive to meddlesome surgery. These articles at the present time are therefore most opportune.

Shadow Pictures Faulty.

"'At the risk of being too elementary Sir James Davidson draws attention to what sometimes appears to be forgotten—namely, that space has three dimensions, and that an X-ray picture on the fluorescent screen or an X-ray photograph is merely a shadow or silhouette. This single shadow picture indicates little more than that a foreign body is present, and gives no certain knowledge about its relation to surrounding structures. Indeed, if these limitations are not realized the X-ray method becomes a positive danger to the patient as well as to the surgeon.

"'The annoyance and disappointment brought about by failure to find, even after a prolonged search, the bullet or foreign body which was so clearly demonstrated in a single X-ray photograph is a matter of common experience among surgeons. The single X-ray photograph is misleading; an enormous advantage is gained by stereoscopic X-ray photography, as thereby a realistic view of the true and relative positions of all the parts concerned in the picture is given.

"'Sir James Davidson closes his article with a description of a method which he has recently adopted with considerable success as an adjunct to the operative measures. It consists in the use of a telephone—preferably one with double receivers—such as is used in wireless telegraphy. One end of the telephone wire is attached to a small piece of platinum. This is placed upon any part of the patient's skin which has first been moistened in the usual way with salt water. Plaster or a bandage is used for holding the small disc of platinum in position.

"'The other end of the telephone wire should be in the form of a disinfected thread of silver (for preference), because this can readily be attached to any of the surgeon's instruments, such as a knife, a probe, a needle or a pair of forceps. The only precaution necessary is that the attachment of the terminating wire to the instrument shall be firm. If the surgeon then attaches the telephone receiver to his ear and begins to use his instrument upon the patient's tissues he may possibly distinguish some slight sound on first making contact, but this is so faint as to be negligible. What he will hear with great distinctness is, however, the characteristic microphonic rattle the instant his instrument touches any metal embedded in the patient's tissue.

"'It is not necessary to have a man from the trenches with shrapnel in his body to demonstrate the value of this adjunct to surgery. A potato of good size may be taken to represent the patient in which the metallic foreign body is located, and a common nail well embedded in the substance of the potato may represent a fragment of shell or shrapnel. The potato is placed upon a piece of platinum foil, moistened in the usual way, on a table; the telephone is then connected up in the manner which has been described, both to the platinum foil and also to a knife which is steel throughout. The potato is incised with the knife, and the moment the blade touches the nail a grating sound is heard and is repeated whenever the contact of the knife with the nail is re-established.

"'This adjunct to the operative instruments of surgery when used carefully and intelligently is of considerable value, more particularly in conjunction with stereoscopic X-ray photography. With the help of the two the maxim 'Search out your enemy and go directly to the position which he occupies' can be fully adopted. By this method an operation is not only considerably shortened but the disturbance of adjacent tissues and structures in making a prolonged search is reduced and a more rapid recovery ensues.

"'Before leaving the subject, it would be well to draw attention to a popular fallacy that a foreign body, whether it be shrapnel, bullet or the smallest gunshot, in the human body should be removed, and if left alone must do harm. In fact, there seems to be an impression abroad among soldiers that their chance of employment is diminished if they are known to have a bullet embedded somewhere in their bodies.

"'The tendency of surgery, both in this war and in the Boer war, has been to abstain as much as possible from those extensive exploratory operations of former days, which perhaps left the patient with a far larger and more serious wound then any modern bullet could produce. Experience has shown that the human body has a remarkable tolerance of the foreign bodies with which we are at the present time concerned, so that the sooner the popular fallacy to which we have referred is removed the better.'"

Though Mud Caked to Waist, 'Tommy' Is 'Right as Rain'

(Special Dispatch.)

IN NORTH FRANCE, via London, Jan. , 1915.

What with violent storms daily in the area of the Yser, and the ever increasing floods left of the Allies' line, the fighting for some time has not been of what one could term a very whole hearted character.

About sixty German prisoners were brought in to the railhead at —— the other night, in a desperate state of dirt, and utterly worn out. They swallowed the hot soup served out to them in the tin bowls with the speed of starved wolves. They crouched round the big stove in the anteroom of their prison, steaming malodorously in the glow of the charcoal. There was no hope in the New Year for them; but they were glad in a dazed sort of a way that the great game of war was over at last so far as they were concerned. They said that they had been living in mud holes for weeks, frozen and soaked turn and turn about. The terrible gloom in their countenances and the utter hopelessness of their sturdy speech struck deep down in my heart as I gazed on them and listened to their mutterings. This is what civilization has come to, and perhaps worse things are in store.

About midnight each night a train comes in from Hazebrouk and St. Omer to the coast—a long, clammy journey. And out of it tumble little companies of khaki fellows with their kits all slung around them Autolycus fashion, and themselves bright enough, though they are used caked to the waist, stiff and cramped after their tedious voyage, but "right as rain." How they keep up their spirits is a marvel. A little blue of rum, they say, perhaps, as they unwind their arctic swaddlings from their shoulders and necks and stamp and swing their arms, and thump their chests in the draughty square.

And then one of the South Wales Borderers swinging by, more silent than ever on their journey to the duties and the dismal swamps behind them. Then night closes in and all is quiet for hours and hours, save for an occasional Red Cross machine slipping in with its bandaged passengers. The tall belfry wearily tinks out its midnight chime—a melancholy, wistful note; a couple of belated cabmen, hooded like holy friars, jabber for a spell in the curious singsong of their patois, and then, quite suddenly, a clatter of hob-nails out of the station gate, and the heartening sight under the moonshine of greenish gray rather ghostly looking ruffians foregathering in the square and bursting into song. One of them—a Lancashire lad, for sure—hauls a mouth organ out of the bag slung to his shoulder and begins to play a jig with that masterly command of the instrument of which the British soldier alone knows the secret, albeit they are "made in Germany." The others pile their kit in a heap in the middle of the square and start a rattling dance to tickle up the children on their [illegible]

Rural Wit.

Indianapolis Star:—The scene of action is supposed to have been located in Terre Haute.

"Say here, mister," said the indignant farm lady, "that calico dress you sold me last week won't wash!"

"Well," rejoined the dry goods man, "what did you expect for 10 cents—a $5 washing machine?"

BONSPIEL PRIMARY FINALS WILL BE PLAYED TO-NIGHT

And the Consolation Series Will Doubtless Be Completed Shortly After—J. E. A. Fitzgerald's Rink Held Good Chance This Afternoon and Looked Strong to go the Route

THE RECENT GAMES

THE PRIZES.

Primary.

1st Prize—4 pairs of curling stones.
2nd Prize—4 sets of dinner knives and forks.

Consolation.

1st Prize—4 travelling bags
2nd Prize—4 carving sets.

The Primary honours of the bonspiel will be decided this evening. The third round last night saw the elimination proceedings sweeping away some of the rinks that had struggled and fought their way up to the preliminaries.

Jack Moore of Keene went down before DeLaney of Cobourg, but fought for every stone. J. E. A. Fitzgerald's rink walked away with their game with Graham of Port Hope.

Farwell of Orillia, met the Hinds' rink from Orillia and defeated the four brothers who, considering everything, made a good showing in the bonspiel. Sam Sharpe's rink added another victory, simply going as he pleased ahead of Smith of Oshawa.

At two o'clock there were four rinks in the primary series, DeLaney, Fitzgerald, Farwell and Sharp. The first two were drawn at noon. Sharpe and Farwell will meet later and the finals will be played to-night.

Fitzgerald in Finals.

Jack Fitzgerald's rink qualified for the primary finals this afternoon by defeating DeLaney of Cobourg 11—6. "Fitz" took an early lead and was never headed. As in other games of the bonspiel he showed his best form this year, and had the edge all the way. At that, DeLaney was a trifle off and did not play up to yesterday's form. Besides, he was playing to Fitzgerald practically all the way, and was thrown off his steady game by the lead the locals secured and held. Mr. Fitzgerald's rink has played exceedingly well all the way, with Alex. Archibald and Ray Best strong as leads and Harry Foote taking a large share of work as vice-skip.

CURLING NOTES.

George Stevenson in the consolation marked up six counters on his last four ends and won out by a narrow margin from Campbell, of Keene.

Archie Moore made a grand finish against Frank Toogood last night. He came from behind and with five shots in the last two ends tied up the game and on the extra won out with nice playing.

Tom Brightman's last shot in his game with George Morrow was with, in a fraction of an inch of changing the last end. It was a good shot, but a miss is as good as a mile in curling.

"A prince" is what the local curlers think of J. D. Flavelle. In fact they like his whole rink.

Sam. Sharp, M.P., of Uxbridge, was an all-round athlete and delights in the exercise and fascination of curling.

One result of Little of Lindsay folding his tents yesterday morning was that A. E. Bottum, of 'Caygeon, went all day without a game.

Armstrong, of Stouffville, took an extra end, after coming from behind, to defeat his fellow townsman Sanders, and finished one up.

Sam Sharpe's (Uxbridge) Peterborough rink let Dick Davidson down to three lone singles. The M.P. piled up 17.

De Laney's good Cobourg rink cut short Geo. Giroux' flight, just doubling the score.

Angus McIntosh had to bring out the square to decide the lay of a stone over a ring. That's how narrow the margin was that defeated Carley's scrub Lindsay rink.

Jack Fitzgerald seemed to have the edge on Mr. Flavelle after the first three ends. The local skip was going fine and his rink gave him every support.

George Stevenson went down with all his flags flying before Stewart of Orillia. His rink was in the money all the way.

McKelvie, of Norwood, made a garrison finish against Ira Edwards, of Colborne.

We hand it to Mr. H. E. Smith, of Oshawa, upon having a rink that is sartorially well fit.

Jack Moore, of Keene, went through a strenuous day on Wednesday. Before dinner he defeated Nicholas, of Cannington. At 2 o'clock he went on and defeated Tom Brightman in the first round. At 4 p.m. he turned on Broad, of Bobcaygeon and cut short the latter's winning streak. At that he just missed being sent out at midnight against De Laney in the 3rd round.

After being defeated by Carley's rink, George Little of Lindsay returned home yesterday morning. Those who know the ethics of the game can most appreciate the littleness of this action.

Speaking of rinks, that Farwell quartette from Orillia travelled a long way, winning regularly, showing an interest in many of the games.

Two of the Hinds boys were in their first year's curling. It required a Tankard four from their own Town to send them back to the Consolation.

Flavelle's rink went out in front in the Consolation when they walked over Archie Moore this morning.

Harry Keslick of Cannington, who tried out with Davey Rowan during the training season at Preston, played "lead" for McLeod.

There are three good sports on Geo. Little's tankard rink. They are Walter Reesor, Frank Carew and W. McLennan.

A number of rinks have threatened to meet at Philippi. Of course they will be friendly engagements, with Oshawa bonspiel the scene of action.

Fifty-five rinks played in the local bonspiel.

Just a word for the local curlers who made the bonspiel possible by their donations. They will certainly be gratified at the success of the past three days.

By the way, George Stevenson's rink had quite a large share in the fun.

Talking of hand-picked rinks someone remarked that Herb. Martin's were "windfalls".

McCallum, of Fenelon Falls, has won three extra end games during the bonspiel.

The third round of the Consolation this afternoon saw two close finishes. Carley of Lindsay put George Stevens' rink out by 10—9. McCallum of Fenelon Falls needed an extra end to defeat Broad of Bobcaygeon.

Everyone was pulling for W. H. Collier last night. He was given quite an extempore reception when he trimmed Edwards. There was gloom when he fell before A. E. Bottum by one shot.

Farwell and Sharpe were playing at four o'clock. The winner meets Fitzgerald to-night.

Curling attracts very few men who would fail to qualify as gentlemen.

CITY'S FINANCIAL CAREER DURING THE YEAR NINETEEN HUNDRED AND FOURTEEN

A Few of the Departments Closed the Year With a Surplus ---Detailed Statement of Receipts and Expenditures, Also Appropriations.

According to the statement of receipts and expenditures of the City during the year 1914, also appropriations, a few of the departments of the civil administration would up the year with a balance on the right side of the ledger. Among these might be mentioned the fire department, which had a surplus of approximately three hundred dollars and the Manufacturers' Committee about five hundred dollars. Of the appropriation for garbage collection about thirteen hundred dollars remains. It has been arranged to apply this surplus to the liquidation of some of the expenses incurred in connection with the operation of the incinerator.

Premier Asquith Asks For a Straight War Session.

LONDON, Feb. 4. — Premier Asquith presented a resolution in the House of Commons yesterday to devote the present session entirely to Government measures.

"There is no precedent for this resolution," said the Premier, "but all our energies as a nation are concentrated on the war, and every interest must be subordinated to this overmastering purpose. Accordingly, the Government purposes to take away the opportunity for private members to introduce bills, and will confine its legislative proposals to measures for prosecution of the war."

A. Bonar Law, speaking for the Opposition, agreed to the resolution. He said that the Opposition intended to treat the present sitting of the House as a war session, as had been done in Canada and France.

In support of his resolution, Premier Asquith said, further:

"So long as war conditions prevail, and until they are determined — I hope and trust that at no distant date they will be determined in our favor —we must postpone discussion of the plural voting bill and all domestic legislation in subordination to the one national purpose."

The House adopted the resolution.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier as leader of the Opposition will then speak, and be followed by the Prime Minister. If the Opposition does not insist on prolonging the debate, the address may be adopted on Monday, with the understanding that Hon. W. T. White, Minister of Finance, is to announce his tariff changes and make his budget speech a day or two later.

ITALIANS IN GERMANY.

Peasants, Despite Warnings, Go to Get High Wages.

ROME, Feb. 4.—Riots growing out of the agitation over the high price of bread, are assuming a graver character. Crowds yesterday went about the streets sacking the stores. Strong reinforcements of troops have been called out to maintain order.

The disturbance continued throughout the day and the municipality finally fixed minimum and maximum prices on foodstuffs as follows:

Bread, per kilo (2.2 pounds), from 9 to 11c.; fish, per kilo, 15 to 20c; meat, per kilo, 16 to 30c.

Many Italian peasants, both men and women, are going to Germany to engage in farm and factory work, in response to offers of unusually high wages. For the men 6 1-2 marks ($1.57) a day is promised, and for the women 3 marks (75c.).

Italian newspapers are warning the peasants against accepting this employment, in view of the uncertainty in regard to Italy's foreign policy, but apparently many unemployed persons are willing to assume the risk involved.

Seven Sikhs To Die.

CALCUTTA, Feb. 4.—The judge at Firozpur, in the Punjab, has sentenced to death seven Sikhs who had been convicted of killing two police officials at Calcutta last October in the rioting which followed the arrival of the steamer Komagata Maru at that port from Vancouver.

The Hindus who mutinied at Calcutta last year were the men who for several months resisted the Canadian Government's order of deportation, but who finally were compelled to return from Vancouver to India on the same steamer which brought them out. The rioting at Calcutta was suppressed by troops, who fired on the Sikhs.

Portuguese Troops For Angola.

LISBON, Feb. 4.—(Via Paris.)—An additional contingent of troops has sailed for Angola, Portuguese West Africa. The Ministers of Marine and of the Colonies inspected the troops before their departure. Large crowds of people cheered the soldiers.

A Berlin despatch says a large portion of Angola is in German hands.

Where Did Supplies Come From.

LONDON, Feb. 4.—It was suggested in the House of Commons yesterday that the German submarines which have been playing havoc with British shipping recently might have obtained fresh supplies of fuel from a ship direct from an English port. Gershom Stewart, a member of the House, put before the Admiralty for reply to-day a question as to "whether a neutral oil steamer outward bound from Manchester was seen alongside two German submarines within the past week." Mr. Stewart also calls on the Admiralty for the names of the steamer, the shippers of the oil and the consignees, and asks whether the exportation of oil on neutral vessels will be permitted hereafter.

GERMANY'S LATEST DECLARATION

BERLIN, Feb. 4.—German submarines will be forced to attack neutral ships unless the neutral powers see to it that England does not misuse their flag.

The newspaper Kreuz Zeitung, the ultra conservative militarist organ, declared in a leading article to-day that such would be the result. Kreuz Zeitung's declaration was called forth by a report received here that English merchant ships had been secretly ordered by the English Admiralty to fly neutral flags as protection against German submarines. The Berlin papers made the report their principal theme to-day.

GERMAN OFFICER KNEW THE TRUTH OF MARNE DEFEAT

That even captive Germans can look upon the bright side of things is shown by an incident related in the Figaro, in which Prince Carl von Schonhausen, a member of the German general staff, is the central figure.

"This incident," says the newspaper, "took place upon the arrival of a train of prisoners after the battle of the Marne. Seven or eight officers were taken before a French commander that he might cross-examine them. In the canteen on one wounded lieutenant was found the pieces of a gold emblem which showed that he was an officer of the Imperial General Staff. It turned out that he was Prince Carl von Schonhausen, an over lieutenant. Then the following dialogue took place:

"'Are you on the General Staff of the Emperor?'

"'Yes.'

"'Were you with him when you were wounded at that defeat on the Marne?'

"The officer became ruffled. He flared back, 'It wasn't a defeat.'

"'Well, then, a retreat if you wish.'

"'It wasn't a retreat.'

"'Well, what on earth would you say had happened to your army?'

"'That, sir, was indeed a strategic move which was foreseen.'

"Then he explained that the Emperor had gone to confer with General von Bulow. But after he was through another German officer, a large, heavy set man of fine appearance, who had been raising his hand only the higher during the words of Prince Carl, approached the French commander. At the conclusion of the interview, when the French officer was showing the officers where they would be put, he said:

"'Sir, would you do me a favour?'

"'Well, what do you want?'

"Then pointing to Prince Carl and another officer, he said: 'Don't put me with these men. Put me with the captain. They think, these gentlemen of the General Staff, that it was a retreat. I know—I know it was a bad defeat.'

"At these words his voice broke, and, with a brusque gesture of his hand, he wiped the moisture from his eyes. But Prince Carl, thinking over Limoges, and meditating on the facts of Agen, can think that the results of this 'strategic movement which was foreseen 'has made possible a victory for his comrades in arms.''

ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND GERMANS IN HEADLONG RUSH AGAINST RUSSIANS

One of the Greatest Battles of the War is Developing--Snow Fields West of the Polish Capital Are Crimson With Blood

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

PETROGRAD, Feb. 5.—One hundred thousand Germans are hurling themselves in headlong rushes against the Russian earthworks west of Warsaw it was officially announced to-day.

One of the greatest battles of the war is developing. Seven divisions of Germans, comprising the flower of Von Hindenburg's armies, are making impetuous frontal attacks upon the Russians between the Bzura and the Rawka. Behind them a hundred German batteries are playing shells upon the Czar's trenches. The snowfields west of the Polish capital are crimson with blood. Fifty thousand fresh German troops were rushed into the firing line early yesterday as reinforcements. They filled huge gaps in the German lines, torn by Russian shells and Russian infantry charges. Their arrival was a signal for a renewal of the onslaught. For 24 hours Mackensen's divisions have surged toward the Russian lines. The battle has become gigantic, a death grapple with thousands of men stabbing with their bayonets, fighting with clubbed rifles and dealing death on frozen fields. In the Carpathians the Russians have been forced to withdraw from the Beskid passes, where a superior force of Germans and Austrians were encountered, it was officially admitted.

West of Beskid, however, the Russians have taken two thousand prisoners.

WINNING IN POLAND.

The Russians are performing brilliantly in Poland, official despatches reported to-day. Between Bolimow and the Bzura they have crushed German frontal attacks upon the centre of the Russian army blocking the road to Warsaw.

Following up their successes at Wola Szydlowska announced last night the Czar's arms have forced the Germans out of the village of Humin, captured by the enemy on Tuesday.

Belgian nuns and priests suffered the same treatment, the report said, regardless of climatic conditions.

Wheat Traders Have Big Profits

Toronto Crowd Has Played the Long Side and Made Much Money

SOME OF THE WINNERS

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, Feb. 5—The fascination of the wheat market continues to cast its spell over local speculators, and the Street is full of the stories of profits made by local traders who have caught the right swings. So far as can be learned, there is no short selling of consequence, even though the price of wheat is admittedly high. In the earlier days of the advance plenty of local traders were willing to fight it, but the fight has been taken out of them by the persistence of the advance, and several who were short earlier in the game have since switched to the long side, recovering not only their losses on the short side, but making a profit on the long end. Just now there seems to be a lull in the local trading, partly, no doubt because of the stiff margins being asked by some houses, and partly because even wheat bulls admit that the rise has been a big one and the war holds out possibilities which might cause a sharp reaction. The forcing of the Dardenelles or the collapse of Turkey would release a lot of Black Sea wheat, for instance, which would cause some reaction at any rate.

One young trader is pointed to on the Street as having put $3,000 into wheat some time ago and taken out $45,000, and it was his first speculative venture at that. However, old stock and grain traders say that this often happens. The greenhorn is often lucky at the start.

This is only one local case. Bigger trades are credited, with profits running into the hundreds of thousands, and, it is said, there are dozens of small operators who have made a few thousand apiece.

Local experts are not inclined to treat very courteously the theories of some that the rise in wheat is all a bit of manipulation. They admit that there has probably been more or less manipulation to help along the rise, but back of it all is the basic fact that the world is a little short of wheat at the moment and that various European Governments, having realized this, have accentuated the scarcity by buying heavily so as to keep their colossal armies fed.

As far back as November leading wheat experts were pointing out that there was a deficiency of as much as 165,000,000 bushels in the world's supplies of wheat, and the course of the wheat market indicates that the world is aware of the shortage and is paying the inevitable penalty of higher prices.

BRITISH TROOPS ON OFFENSIVE BREAK THE GERMAN LINES

Brilliant Stroke which May Result in the Capture of Lille Violent Effort Alone Prevented Disaster to Enemy

PARIS, Feb. 5.—The allies won important advantages to-day in Flanders and Northern France and defeated a German attack in Alsace. The report issued last night by the French government indicates that the allies have not merely checked German effort in the all-important region between the La Bassee Canal and the River Aisne but have retained the offensive and have delivered heavy blows against the German line.

From the French point of view, the most satisfactory success was in the desperately contested region just west of the City of Lille. Having maintained their occupation of Lille for many weeks, the Germans developed in the past two weeks offensive thrusts which put the allied line to great strain. There had been rumours that a terrific attack was to be made in that quarter. To-day, however, the allied troops made a violent attack against the German positions and at the end of a hard-fought battle had captured about 300 yards of trenches. The success was a brilliant stroke and may prove a serious embarrassment to the German occupation of Lille.

Silenced Batteries.

Once more the Government emphasizes the superiority of the French artillery. For months the German infantry occupying the heights north of the Aisne have been held at a distance by the effective fire of French cannon. On the few occasions when their massed attacks, delivered with absolute disregard of losses, carried them to the north bank of the Aisne, the French artillery decimated the ranks and forced them to withdraw to the caverns and burrows of the Aisne cliffs. Yesterday the French guns found the range of German batteries, which were being operated at several places along the Aisne, silenced the batteries, destroyed by caissons, forced trench diggers to flee and drove off German aviators who were on reconnaissance duty. A similar success was obtained by the French artillery at Hebuterne, north of Albert, while near Verdun a German aviator was brought down and captured.

The hardest fighting was in the Champagne region of Perthes, where French advances have bent the German line dangerously and compelled violent effort on the part of the invaders to prevent such a disaster as would compel them to withdraw from the whole district. Yesterday the Germans attacked with about 3,000 men Athers, Les Hurleus and Massiges. At Perthes and Les Hurleus the attack was hopeless from the start, as the German infantry were under fire of French artillery and appear to have been checked easily. At Massiges, however, the Germans preceded their advance by mining and blowing up a line of French trenches. In the temporary disorder of the French troops the Germans swept forward and seized the position. The French, reforming some distance in the rear, made a fierce counter-attack, which drove the Germans from the shattered trenches and repulsed them so effectively that the French were able to dig new trenches a few yards from the line destroyed by the German mines. The net result of the sanguinary battles was the maintenance by the French of ground won by them in the past few weeks.

Heavy German Losses.

There were infantry engagements also in northern France, south-west of Lens, in the Woeuvre district, and in Alsace, but apparently they were made by small forces and were without special significance. In the Lens district the French artillery broke a German charge. In the Woevre the French had the advantage in advance guard engagements, and in Alsace, in the Hartaman-Welerkopp region, where the ground is covered with hard snow, French and Germans fought on, the Alpine contingents of the French having the better of the skirmishing. The artillery fighting was rather general, with the usual advantage to the French gunners.

It is unofficially reported that the Germans are renewing their attacks against the allied positions near Westende, between Nieuport and Ostend. The Germans sent heavy forces of infantry against the French and Belgians and attacked with the bayonet, but their attacks were repulsed. According to a despatch from Amsterdam the Germans lost heavily.

ITALY CAN MOBILIZE ARMY OF 3,430,000 IN 48 HOURS

Picton Team Group Winners

Local Intermediates Lose on the Round by One Goal

PICTON, Feb. 5.—One to one, three to one, and six to one—that is just the awy it happened last night, when Picton intermediates defeated Peterborough's good team. With a lead of four goals to overcome, Picton took the ice and outskated, outchecked and outgeneralled Capt. Hunter's team from bell to bell. There was not a weak spot on the home team. Janes and Kelley put up a good game for the Petes, and it was only the grand work of Janes that held the score to single figures, as time and time again he was simply bombarded with dead-on shots. This gives Picton group No. 1 after a strenuous campaign.

ANOTHER RAID COMING.

This Time Germans May Try to Land Men In Britain.

LONDON, Feb. 4.—The Exchange Telegraph Co. has received the following despatch from its Copenhagen correspondent:

"Emperor William's visit to Wilhelmshafen is believed to be in connection with the warning of the German Admiralty to neutral shipping, that great activity may be expected on the north and western coasts as a result of German attempts to stop Britain's transportation of troops and munitions, as announced Tuesday:

"This is interpreted here as a prologue to important events at sea.

"It is rumered that Germany will try to engage the British fleet in southern waters, while another squadron goes northward at full speed with the object of covering the landing of troops in England.

"Large contingents of troops are reported to have been mobilized at Wilhelmshafen at the time of the Scarborough raid."

DARES THE GERMAN SEA LORDS TO TEST THEIR LATEST THREAT

Part of British Flotilla of Destroyers Likely to Be Detached From North Sea Fleet For Duty Nearer Home---What Will United States Do?

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

LONDON, Feb. 5.—Britain accepted Germany's challenge to-day. The Admiralty defied the Kaiser and dared the German sea lords to put to the test their latest threat to starve out England by sinking all merchantmen of belligerent nations that approach British ports after Feb. 18. The Admiralty officials went into a conference early to-day. What they discussed was a closely guarded secret. But it was reported on good authority that orders for part of the British flotilla of destroyers to detach itself from the North Sea fleet and report for duty in waters nearer home will be issued before nightfall.

Part of this destroyer fleet, it is expected, will be assigned the task of sweeping the seas free of German submarines. Others will be detailed to convoy merchantmen after Feb. 18, when the German Admiralty decree becomes effective until such time as the Admiralty is positive that German undersea terrors no longer menace shipping. It is possible that a few British cruisers of the Royal type will be assigned to convoy duty to allay fears of timid ship owners.

The British nation turned its eyes toward America to-day. What the United States will say to the German Admiralty's announcement that neutral ships may be endangered by German submarines was considered only secondary importance to the German proclamation itself. "Any attempt by the Germans to ignore the American flag on the strength of paper blockade," said the naval writer of the Daily Chronicle, "would be a hostile act towards the United States to torpedo an American liner with her passengers and crew would be an atrocity that would almost inevitably mean war."

That the United States will make a formal protest against the German decree upon its receipt at Washington is deemed certain here. In some quarters it was suggested that the United States might join with other neutral powers in a formal protest to Germany.

WILL TAKE NO ACTION.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—The administration authorities intimated to-day that they did not intend to protest against Germany's creation of a war zone, fringing England and the Dutch coast. The German warning it was pointed out, does not constitute a blockade. To establish a blockade Germany would have to serve a notice that her fleet would enforce. With her navy bottled up in the Kiel canal, she has taken no such step.

CHICAGO AGAIN ACTIVE, ADVANCING 4C BUSHEL

The Bulls Take Encouragement From President Wilson's Speech

CHICAGO, Feb. 5.—Although the opening of the wheat market yesterday was the steadiest for some time, it was not long before prices made an advance of nearly four cents a bushel. May rose to $1.63 as against $1.59¼ the night before, and July to $1.41½ compared with $1.38¾.

President Wilson's speech calling attention to the prospect that the United States would be called upon heavily for wheat had much influence toward encouraging buyers. Besides, there appeared to be evidence of renewed foreign demand here, and of export sales over night. Despite heavy margins insisted on, trading was of a decidedly lively character.

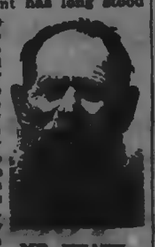
Justice of Peace Praises Dr. Chase's Ointment

After Nine Years of Agony He Escaped an Operation by Using This Great Healing Agent.

As a means of healing sores and wounds that defy ordinary treatment Dr. Chase's Ointment has long stood supreme. It is known far and wide as a positive cure for eczema and piles. Whatever uncertainty there may be about the results obtained by the use of medicines taken internally there can be no question of the healing of the skin when Dr. Chase's Ointment is applied.



MR. HEATH.

You can actually see with your own eyes just what takes place. The sore pores are cleansed and gradually the new skin is formed and the sore becomes smaller and smaller, until it finally disappears. It is often wonderful the results which are accomplished in a single night by the use of this great healing ointment.

Mr. N. A. Heath, J.P., Fitch Bay, Que., writes:—"Nine years ago I was taken with an abcess, and cannot begin to describe what I have suffered as a result. I was examined by two doctors, both of whom said I would have to undergo an operation to be cured. Thanks to Dr. Chase's Ointment, it has rendered an operation unnecessary, and has completely cured me. I cannot say enough in praise of this wonderful ointment which cured me after nine years of agony."

From the ice his victims staggered,

"THE BATTLE CRY"

Charles Neville Buck

Brother Anse Talbott and Juanita and a doctor who had come from Lexington were witnesses to that leave-taking. They saw the old man beckon feebly to the boy. Young Milt came and sat on the edge of the bed schooling his features as he awaited the final injunctions which, by his code, would be mandatory for life.

They all waited to hear the old lion break out in a final burst of vindictiveness; to see him lay upon his boy's young shoulders the unfinished ordeals of his hatreds. But it was the eyes of the father, not the feudist, that gazed up from the pillow. His wasted fingers lay affectionately on his son's knee and his voice was gentle.

"Son," said the old man, "I'd love ter hev live at peace of ye kin . . . . I've done tried ther other way an' hit's kilt me. . . . I'd ruther ye'd let my fights be buried along with my body. . . . Anse Havey's goin' ter run things in these mountings. . . .He's a smarter man than me. I couldn't never make no peace with Anse Havey, but the things that's always stood betwixt us lays a long way back. . . Mebby you an' him mout pull tergether an' end ther feud. . . . I leaves thet with you, but hit took death ter make me see hit. . . . . " Here he broke off exhaustedly, and for a time seemed fighting for breath. At last he added, "I've knowed all along thet Luke killed Fletch McNash. I thought I'd ought ter tell ye."

A week after the death of the old leader Young Milt rode over to the house of Anse Havey, and there he found Jeb McNash. The two young men looked at each other without expression. Just after the death of the elder McBriar, Jeb would not have willingly renewed their quarrel, and as for Young Milt he no longer felt resentment.

"Anse," said the heir to McBriar leadership, "I rid over here ter offer ye my hand. I've done found out that Luke is as guilty as hell. I didn't believe hit afore. So fur as I'm concerned he kin hang an' I'm goin' ter tell every McBriar man that will hearken ter me ther same thing. So fur as I'm concerned," went on the lad, "I'm against the shootin' of any man from the la'rel."

Just as the earliest flowers began to peep out with shy faces in the woods, and the first softness came to the air, men began rearing a scaffold in the Court-house yard, at Perii.

One day a train brought Luke Thixton back to the hills, but this time only a few soldiers came with him, and they were not needed. Juanita tried to forget the significance of that Friday, but she could not for all the larger boys were absent from school, and all day Thursday the road had been sprinkled with horses and wagons. She knew with a shudder that they were going to town to see the hanging. A gruesome fascination of interest attached to so un-heard-of an event as a McBriar clansman dying on a Havey scaffold with his people standing by idle.

But Luke Thixton, going to his death there among enemies, went without flinching and his snarling lips even twisted a bit derisively when he mounted the scaffold, as they had twisted when he declined Good Anse Talbott's ministrations in the jail.

Now he gazed for the last time about the jumbled levels of the town. Off among the mountains there was just a suggestion of coming green. The sky was full of the amber light that tells of spring. A week later there would be vividly tender little leaves where now there were only buds, but for him of course that would be too late.

Nearer at hand about the square, and further away, even on the roofs of houses, stood and perched an eat his audience. There were women in gay shawls and men on whose faces was only the curiosity of beholding an unusual spectacle. It was different from the type and temper of the crowd which he would have wished to see there. Now there were no grim faces and glinting rifle barrels, no implacable resolve to save him. Since he must die among enemies he would give them no weakness over which to gloat in memory.

He raised his head and his snarl turned slowly and unpleasantly into a grin of contempt, and his last words were a picturesque curse called down alike on the heads of the foes who put him to death and the false friends who had failed him.

Afterward Young Milt and Bad Anse shook hands, and the younger man said to the older:

"Now that I've proved to ye that I meant what I said, I reckon we can make a peace that'll endure a spell, can't we?" And Anse answered, "Milt, I've been hopin' we could ever since the day we watched for the feller that aimed to burn down the school."

CHAPTER XXXI.

That spring new buildings went up at the school, and brave rows of flowers appeared in the garden.

At first her college had been a kindergarten in effect, but now as Juanita stood on the porch at recess she wondered if any other school-mistress had ever drawn about her such a strange assortment of pupils. There were little tots, in bright calico, glorying in big bows of cotton hair-ribbon— but submitting grudgingly to the combing of the hair they sought to adorn. There were larger boys and girls, too, and even a half-dozen men who were just now pitching horse-shoes and smoking pipes—and they also were learning to read and write.

Off to himself, as morose as though he would brook no kindliness or companionship, was a bony lad of seventeen with a hermit visage, forbidding and sour. He had come to the school almost slinking, from some "spring-branch" back in the hills where his people lived like cattle. He walked with a scowl on his face and a chip on his shoulder and sat apart in the school-room, but he studied passionately with a grim tenacity of purpose and his mind drank up what came to it like a sponge.

In the afternoon women rode in on mules and horses or came on foot and Juanita taught them not only letters and figures, but lessons looking to cleaner and more healthful cabins.

May came with smiles and songs in the sky from sunrise to sunset and in the woods, where the moistnre rose and tender greens were sending out their hopeful shoots, the wildflowers unfolded themselves. Then Juanita Holland and Anse Havey would go together up to the ridge and watch the great awakening across the brown and gray humps of the hills, and under their feet was a carpet of delicate petals.

Blue clusters of wild flox were everywhere in little patches of cerulean and those demurest of blossoms, the "quaker ladies," lifted timid, dew-drenched faces to the sun.

They would stroll, too, down into the hollows where the earth was damp and the wind-flowers came to snowflake blossoms and the violets were little fallen stars and the wild columbine sprang from the angles of the rocks. The white cups of the May-apple hid there under their umbrella-like leaves. The dogwood soon came to dash the gruming woods with white spray and make the place of the pioneer redbud and the fruit snow of the wild plum. The leafage was all delicate and young and very bright.

Overhead were tuneful skies and gallantly riding clouds. In the bottom lands the lark sent out his single-noted call and his silvery trill and the black bird and his brilliant cousin, the yellow-winged starling, were flitting everywhere.

Even the ache in Anse Havey's heart, the ache of premonition, gave way to the spirit of spring. These blossoms and sap-fed trees must know that the future held for them the coming of winter and sleet and snow and death, yet they were joyous now with the fulness and richness of the present. He would make their bright philosophy his own. He was walking these woods with her, and in their silences together she smiled on him, even if she smiled with unawakened eyes.

Was there any woman born here, who could leap as lightly over rocky trails or dip as lithely under hanging ropes of vine or whose voice was more akin to that of the wood thrush, pouring out his soul in happiness and music back there in the timber?

Anse Havey had never had such a companionship and hidden things began to wake in him. He had been, in the stress of life, oak and rock. Now he began to realize the better part, for "in its sunshine he was vine and flower."

So when she stood there, with the spring breeze caressing the curling tendrils at her temples, and blowing her gingham skirt about her slim ankles, and pointed off, smiling, to his house, he dropped his head in mock shame.

"Only the castle moodily, gloomed by itself apart," she quoted in accusation and the man laughed boyishly.

HOW TO CURE A CHRONIC COUGH

Told in the Following Letter by a Jackson Man Who Knows from Experience. His Word Is Good.

Jackson, Miss.—"I am a carpenter, and the grippe left me not only with a chronic cough, but I was run-down, worn out and weak. I took all kinds of cough syrups but they did me no good. I finally got so weak I was not able to do a day's work, and coughed so much I was alarmed about my condition. One evening I read about Vinol and decided to try it. Before I had taken a quarter of a bottle I felt better, and after taking two bottles my cough is entirely cured, all the bad symptoms have disappeared and I have gained new vim and energy." —JOHN L. DENNIS, 711 Lynch Street, Jackson, Miss.

The reason Vinol is so successful in such cases is because the active medicinal principles of cod liver oil contained in Vinol rebuilds wasting tissues and supplies strength and vigor to the nerves and muscles while the tonic iron and wine assist the red corpuscles of the blood to absorb oxygen and distribute it through the system, thus restoring health and strength to the weakened, diseased organs of the body.

To find his wife and home again
Tramped many a weary mile
And, stealing in the garden gate
Through twilight shadows gray,
Before the cottage window stood
He started in dismay.

Eight Belgian Heroes Keep Back Germans and Save Weak Point

Column Advance to Storm Trenches Near Dixmude When Belgians with Machine Gun Discover Them and Halt Progress Till Reinforcements Arrive, Losing Three of Their Number During the Action.

In Northern France, via London, January—Every day along hundreds of miles of trenches men are performing splendid deeds of courage that will never be made public, for this has been called the "war of the unknown heroes." Now and then the curtain of secrecy is accidentally blown aside, and one learns of thrilling incidents like the following, in which eight real heroes took part.

A few days ago the Germans, after carefully scouting along the Belgian lines by aviators, decided that there was a weak point a little west of Dixmude which might be taken. They made preparations to hack a way through, and there were high hopes in the German forces. But "they had reckoned without the Belgians" — phrase which is now quoted almost every day.

A patrol of eight Belgians, with a machine gun, saw a small column of Germans advancing to storm the trenches at the weak point. In moments like that a man must act quickly, and he must not always do the most obvious thing.

In this case the gallant little handful of Belgians chose rightly. Instead of falling back to warn their comrades, they decided on the better plan of throwing themselves in the path of the Germans and attempted to delay their advance long enough for the Belgian line to be reinforced at the critical place. A small deserted farmhouse, battered and lonely, stood beside the road the Germans must take. The Belgians rushed in, and quickly made their preparations for a desperate defence. Given heaps of fallen bricks and beams, much can be done, and they soon had a machine gun in position.

Meanwhile, the Germans pressed on, never guessing that their approach had been seen. In solid formation they marched along the road till they were within two hundred yards of the farmhouse with its hidden heroes. Thus near were they allowed to come, for in the fight of the few with the many every shot of the former must tell.

Suddenly, to the consternation of the grey-coated Germans, a rifle shot rang out from the lonely farm house that had seemed so silent. A man in the front rank fell with a surprised grunt. Then the Belgian gun took up the song of death and led the terible chorus. The Germans pressed on bravely, their officers urging them forward with hoarse cries, but there came a time when discipline had to bow to death, and the first rush was stayed.

Behind their rough shelter the Belgians fired steadily They knew that every shot must tell, and they aimed coolly, as men who face a target for a prize. The German advance guard, with which they were now in action, outnumbered them by at least twenty to one, but this fact only put the more heart into them. A Belgian with a good mark to hit and a chance to wipe out a little of a gallant nation's sorrow and pain, is a trying fellow for a German to meet.

The Germans halted, and the men too such shelter as they could in ditches beside the road. Then began the next phase of the desperate fight. Every helmet that showed itself, every arm that was raised above the ground was the mark for a Belgian bullet. For two hours the unequal fight raged, and still the Belgians picked off individual Germans or mowed down any threatening rush with a machine gun spray of flame and death.

But the end of the gallant little fort in the farmhouse was near. When it became evident that to storm this mere heap of bricks, with its garrison of heroes, would cost too dear, the Germans sent back word to a battery. Presently shells began to fall around. The first two were wide, a third burst against a wall and killed one of the gallant Belgians, and then a fourth fell right in their midst. The Germans raised such a cheer as they had heart for, and jumped to their feet. But they were too late; the men of the farm-houses fort had snatched safety for their fellows out of one of the most critical moments of the last few weeks, and reinforcements had now been rushed to the Belgian position.

As the Germans came on they were met by a terrible volley and a party of Belgian infantry greeted them with fixed bayonets. There was a short, desperate struggle, but in a few moments the German attack was a thing of the past Their hope of making a small body of men against the weak place and making a breach for a bigger force to follow had been shattered. Now there was breathing time, and the Belgians entered the ruined farmhouse. Three of the brave defenders were dead and the five who lived were desperately wounded. They were carried back to the Belgian lines and now lie in a base hospital, all with a good chance of striking another blow at the enemy.

Ask the five heroes of the farm as they lie in their hospital cots, and they will say: "It was nothing; we happened to be there; that is all". And it is because in every crisis men of their type "happen to be there" that the task of beating back the Germans is carried on with such courage and hope.

GEN. JOFFRE PREPARED FOR WAR YEARS AGO

LONDON, Feb. 4.—It was Georges Boillet who first gave some of the American colony in Paris a line on the quality of General Joseph Joffre, commander in chief of the allied armies in France. Boillet has three times won the Grand Prix. He is considered the most supremely reckless automobilist in France. The day that mobilization was decided on Boillet received a message:

"At 8 o'clock to-morrow morning report to General Joffre."

At 8 o'clock the following morning Boillet was standing in front of Joffre. That kindly, soft-spoken old gentleman looked him over. Then he said:

"You have two hours in which to say good-bye and get into your uniform. At 10 o'clock be in the driving seat of my car."

Boillet was in that seat at 10 o'clock. Somewhat later he discovered that Joffre was not a man to be feared by another man who was doing his work well. One day he asked the commander in chief how it was that Georges Boillet had been selected to drive his car.

"I attended the running of the last Grand Prix," said Joffre simply, "in order to pick a driver."

There you are. Joffre believes in preparation. He believes that the very least detail must be foreseen in advance if one would be successful. He believed that the war was certain. For years his associates have mildly rallied him about it. They had a habit of asking him about "Joffre's war." A commander in chief in time of war needs a supremely irresponsible and magnificently skillful driver, and as his neck is intimately risked he should pick that driver out himself.

Success Due to Him.

It was because of that habit of foresight that the allied armies met with what success they did in the earlier days of the war —or were not more soundly trounced, as you please to state it. Four years ago Joffre became chief of the general staff of the French armies. He succeeded to the command of a good army, and he set about making it a better one. The manoeuvres of 1912 were praised by every military observer. Joffre returned from the field, and his first order was to retire five generals.

"They were not up to their work," said he in effect. "One of these days we shall have war."

He remodeled the plans for mobilization. As a consequence the French army took the field in 1914 days earlier than those who had formerly been familiar with it believed possible. He practically compelled France to adopt the three-year service law —a most unpopular measure from a politician's standpoint — and that saved France. He insisted that the appropriation for the flying corps be increased—out of all reason, as the opponents insisted.

"We will have no time in which to build machines and train men when the war starts," he said in 1912. "The essence of success in a modern war is speed."

Every French general has made a study of the disastrous campaign of 1870. For 40 years the general staff has been at work preparing to meet the Germans in the next war. Joffre has always insisted that to be successful an army must remain upon the offensive. But he—alone of French generals —seems to have seen that in the first days of the war the French army would not be fit physically or morally, to assume the offensive against the powerful German machine. So that when the war began he retreated. He fought every foot, but he retreated. France was in despair. It writhed in humiliation when he let it be known that he was prepared to sacrifice Paris.

"Paris is to me only a fortified town," he said. "It must defend itself. It must play its part in the line."

He Saved France.

Now it is realised that no other policy could have saved France. If he had made a determined stand at the beginning, students of military strategy believe the Germans would have smashed through the French line. But he kept fighting and yielding and bending. The temperament of the French soldier leads him to forever attack. Because he was forced to remain on the defensive at the outset he was disgruntled and sullen. Often he retreated when he had no business to retreat. Friction arose between the French and their English allies. The men of the two armies could not meet without fighting. Neither comprehended the masterly strategy of Joffre. When they did understand, the whole situation changed.

When Joffre is in his home he is the mildest, most kindly, most courteous man you almost ever saw. He isn't talkative—it is not humanly possible for any man to say less than General Joffre or to get more directly to the target with what he does say—but he is friendly. His blue eyes gleam from beneath the great, overhanging white eyebrows. He detests all social functions, but the few who have friendly access to his house report that he lives the life of a prosperous bourgeois. He rises at 5 o'clock in the morning and goes to bed at 10. His chief pleasure is to ride his horse and to potter about his garden. Now and then he plays bridge —as a concession to bridge-playing friends. He prefers to listen to his wife read or one of his two stepdaughters play the piano.

Passion for Efficiency.

He isn't that sort of a man at all when he is in uniform.

Then he has a passion for efficiency. He is a kind-hearted man, but he does not permit his kindness of heart to sway him. The officer who is not up to the rigid standard he insists upon is dropped. When he was serving in Madagascar he once asked an officer when a given task could be completed. The other fellow didn't quite know. It was not a matter of importance.

"Two weeks, possibly," said he. "Maybe three weeks."

"See that it is done within five days," said Joffre, "or go back to France."

Since the war began he has retired approximately 30 generals. The precise number is not known, because the French war office is not at all loquacious. It is assured that they left short somewhere. In one instance it is known that one of Joffre's personal friends resented the promotion of a rival over his head. When the rival issued an order the soured general obeyed, but he obeyed grudgingly. Joffre dropped him without a word.

"Why?" said the humiliated officer. "I obeyed the orders I received.

"You might have done better," said Joffre. That was all.

Fat and Short.

Joffre is 63 years old. He is rather short, is inclined toward fat, although he has not yet reached that goal, and his hair and moustache are very heavy and very white. He speaks in a low, carefully modulated voice. He abominates noise. He walks in a heavy, lurching, ungraceful walk. His peace garb is a high hat and a short coat, but he has the vigour of a wildcat. No matter what happens, he is never tired. He fairly radiates confidence and command.

Boillet is still driving for him, unless he has been killed since these words were written. They leave headquarters at 8 o'clock in the morning, when conditions permit, and go scouting through the countryside. Joffre likes to see for himself what is going on, and in order that he may see as much as possible Boillet drives at 40 miles an hour over roads that would bog down a wheelbarrow. Two spare cars with spare drivers follow them. The Germans know the trio now and shell it when they see it. Thus far none of them have been hurt.

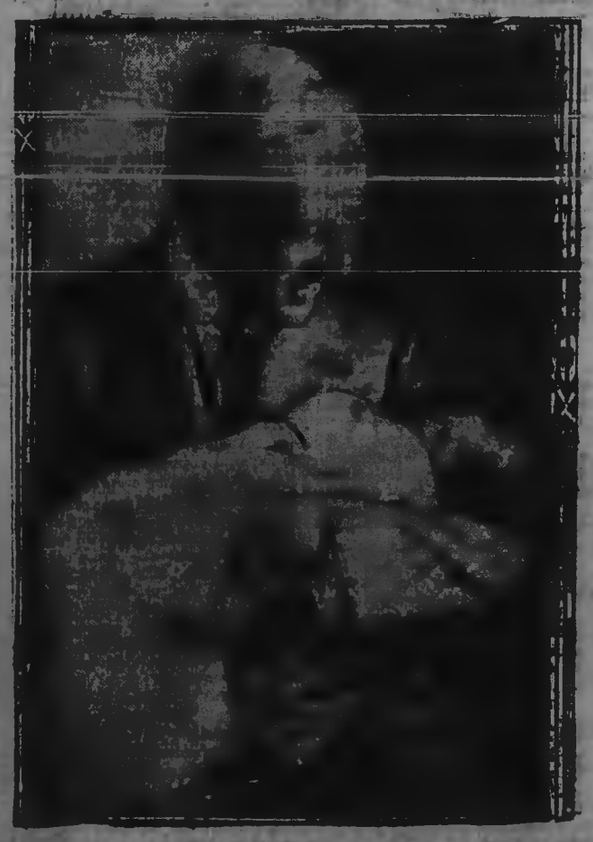
Only a King.

Perhaps it is because General Joffre wants to see his soldiers even more than he wants to see the fighting that he takes these trips. He likes to squat down by the side of a fire in one of the trenches—this heavy, white-haired, slow-spoken old man—and talk to the boys who are fighting for France. He wants to know what they are getting to eat and if the supplies of ammunition come promptly, and if more blankets are needed. Now and then a private soldier gets a step in rank during those fireside talks. The tradition that every soldier carries the baton of a marshal in his knapsack is still alive in France. The men talk to him as one of themselves. They follow him out to the car and place detaining hands upon his arm that they may finish what they have to say.

It was this same General Joffre who some years ago came into close touch with one of to-day's reigning monarchs. He saluted, but formally. At the first moment possible he escaped from the royal presence. A friend remonstrated.

"You were no more than courteous to the king," said he. Joffre ruminated. He always ruminates in conversation. Long intervals sometimes separate his sentences.

"Well," he said finally, "he was only a king."



NO NEUTRALITY HERE—THE FIRST GRANDSON. — President Wilson has just been permitted to hold his first grandson. "The White House Baby," the son of Mr. and Mrs. Sayre. It is evident that the carts of contraband merchant ships and neutrality are forgotten.

TO THE TEA TRADE OF CANADA

The year 1914 has passed, and during it we have sold the largest quantity of "SALADA" that we have in any year since it was first introduced to the public in 1892.

We have prepared a chart (printed below), which shows at a glance the vast business that has been built up on "QUALITY FOREMOST." In drawing your attention to this, we respectfully ask you to specially note the record of 1914. Notwithstanding great obstacles, our output last year was above the previous year's record—and this in spite of the raise in price, and the fact that part of the time we were without stock, and therefore unable to fill orders. The difficulties of the tea trade in 1914 were so unique that a brief survey of the facts may prove interesting.

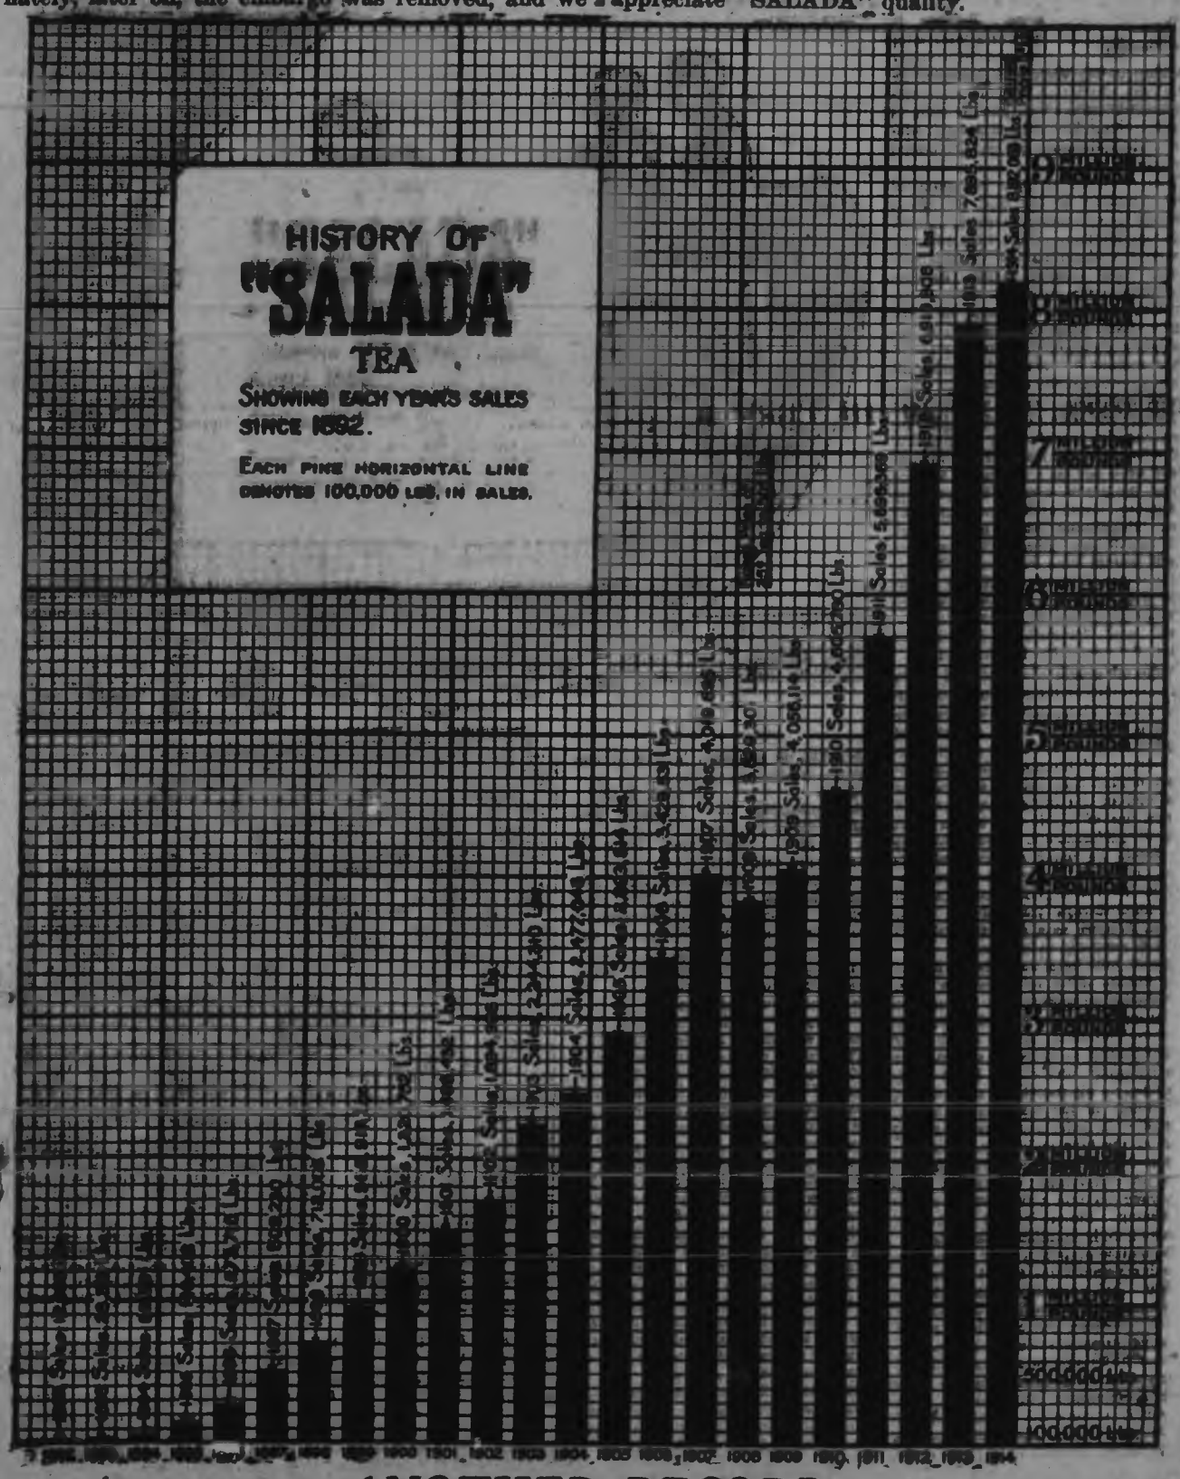
When the year was little more than half spent war broke out in Europe. Our first misfortune was the seizure at Gibraltar of the German steamship "Schiesefels," which sailed from Colombo at the end of July with a large consignment of tea for us. Our next blow was the imposition of an embargo on tea in Great Britain, which prevented all tea from leaving that country. At that time we had in London 3,000 chests, bought at auction, paid for and ready to ship, and we could neither get our tea nor our money. A few days later word was received of the sinking of the steamships "Diplomat" and "City of Winchester" by the German cruiser "Emden." These two steamers had nine million pounds of tea on board. As a result, further sailings from Ceylon and India were prohibited by the Admiralty.

Under these circumstances Canada would have been without tea in less than two months. Fortunately, later on, the embargo was removed, and we were able to get our stock in London, and after five weeks, the Emden having left the Bay of Bengal, the Admiralty permitted the resumption of sailings from India and Ceylon. Thus we were relieved of our most apparent difficulties.

However, in the trade, it is a well-known fact that Canadians have been served for years with a quality of tea at prices unequalled in the world, and the wholesale tea business in Canada has proved disastrous to many and unprofitable to all. During the past five years the market has been working steadily upwards, until just before the war we had to pay the highest prices in twenty-five years. Having in addition, extra freights, war risks and still higher prices for our quality, we had only three options—lower our quality, go out of business or advance prices. We chose the latter. In spite of this, and our inability at times, to fill orders through shortness of stock, you will note by the chart that our increase in sales in 1914 over 1913 was 286,280 pounds, an increase in consumption of more than 1,000 pounds for every working day of the year.

Last year there was imported into the Dominion 37 million pounds of all kinds of tea. We sold in "SALADA" packets nearly one-quarter of this total, viz., 8,192,063 pounds.

We look forward to a still larger trade this year, and solicit your valued co-operation in our mutual interests. We readily acknowledge that other teas show you a greater profit than SALADA, but you must admit that no other tea gives anything like the satisfaction to your customers. We are giving a character of tea the consumer cannot get elsewhere than in "SALADA" packets, and the twenty-three years it has been on sale proves that consumers appreciate "SALADA" quality.



ANOTHER RECORD

The sales of "SALADA" for the first fortnight of 1915 have been greater than the sales for any previous fortnight in our 23 years' history.

SURRENDERS

By RICHARD G. CONOVER

SURRENDER OF BURGOYNE TO GATES OCT. 17TH 1777. FROM "THE STORY OF THE REVOLUTION," BY HENRY CABOT LODGE. COPYRIGHT BY CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS.

FATE has set a date on the calendar of the new year for the surrender of one or more of the big armies of Europe now in death grapple. It may not be the entire force of either the Allies or the Germans that will lay down arms. Perhaps it will be a wing or a division of soldiery assigned to war work in a particular department, district or city. But the surrender will take place just as sure as spring and summer and autumn and winter of 1915 will come and go. Past wars forecast it.

There has never been an epoch of armed conflict of the first magnitude without its surrenders, large and small, between the boom of the first gun and the scratch of the pens on the treaty of peace. The fighting tension becomes more taut in one place than another during long campaigns and snaps to a climax at some particular spot. It is impossible to go on with a war plan in entirety so that the troops of a nation all share the same fortune of conflict. Surrender must have a certain percentage of happening the same as the battle, the retreat and the pursuit must have theirs.

The length of fighting line and the immense area not only traversed but occupied by armed men in this greatest war in the history of the world make the likely vicissitudes much more varied than ever before. Three million men on a side cannot keep constantly fighting and not run into situations and conditions that force a surrender. Sections of them are bound to be caught in the "jam" and "pinched." Germans or Allies, the occurrence is imminent.

While the charge of the pitched battle and the assault of the siege bring the victor a greater glory, nevertheless the forcing of a surrender is a feat of arms not despised by the most famous of the fighting captains of history. The great Napoleon deemed the Austrian surrender at Ulm without the firing of a single gun or the loss of a life one of his most brilliant performances. War annals do not reveal an exact duplicate of this event, although surrenders approximating it in results, with inconsequential loss, have always gratified the victor general as much as a field triumph and added as certainly to his fame.

Armies have been surrendered following a pitched battle, or following a siege, or following an assault on a fortress too briefly occupied to be deemed a siege, or following a hemming in by a larger army so that there is no chance of escape. The Ulm surrender was of the latter kind. Measured by big things the surrender of the French to the Germans at Sedan, September 2, 1870, is the greatest field event of the kind in history. The surrender of Metz and other fortresses that were its complement, during the same war, were the most noted fortress events in history. Sedan is still a fruitful source of study to military students.

The battle of Sedan that forced the French surrender was fought September 1, 1870. Bad generalship placed the defeated army in a position where finally the Germans were able to encircle it with a complete ring of belching cannon. Instead of being able to combine with the other French army, already bottled up in Metz, the troops of Napoleon III. were completely surrounded. Their force of 90,000 was opposed by 154,000 of the German allies, who had 710 guns to 408 put in service by the French. Eight thousand killed and wounded was the German loss; seventeen thousand the French. Twenty thousand prisoners were taken by the victors—among them Emperor Napoleon III. This was the status of affairs at the close of the day.

Marshal MacMahon, the French commander, was badly wounded by a bursting shell early in the day. The command devolved on General Ducrot, the only one of the French leaders who sensed what the Germans were doing and who advised a way of escape that was disdained. He at once set his army in motion toward the only route traversable to the west. At this critical time General de Wimpffen produced a commission from the Regency left by Napoleon in Paris directing him to take over the command in case MacMahon was killed or wounded. He at once reversed the marching order of Ducrot and led his army nicely and tightly within the last opening of the circle left by the Germans. Then, with more than seven hundred guns hurling death from the heights, north, east, south and west, the Emperor ordered the white flag raised.

During the morning of September 2 Napoleon sent to King William of Prussia the following historic note:—

"Mon frère:—

FROM "RIDPATH'S HISTORY OF THE WORLD" BY PERMISSION OF THE JONES BROTHERS PUBLISHING COMPANY, CINCINNATI, OHIO.

SURRENDER OF THE AUSTRIAN GENERAL MACK TO NAPOLEON, OCTOBER 20TH 1805, OUTSIDE THE WALLS OF ULM, WHERE 30,000 MEN WERE TAKEN

N'ayant pu mourir à la tête de mes troupes, je dépose mon epée au pied votre majesté. NAPOLÆON."

Acknowledging that Napoleon had tried to die at the head of his troops, as his note stated, King William very courteously prevented the Emperor laying his sword at the conqueror's feet, and treated him as a royal brother in misfortune. The two met that afternoon at two o'clock for a brief interview, and the castle of Wilhelmshohe, pear Cassel, was assigned Napoleon as a residence. The capitulation of Sedan and the entire French army was signed by General de Wimpffen for the vanquished and General von Moltke for the victors.

The extent of the surrender was: 83,000 men, 50 generals and 5,000 officers of subordinate rank; 400 field pieces, 150 fortress guns, 70 mitrailleuses and 14,000 wounded lying in the adjacent battle area. A great quantity of stores and small arms was included in the summary. In a letter dated May 12, 1872, the deposed Emperor took upon himself the whole responsibility for the surrender at Sedan. Bad generalship and see-sawing with an underhanded brand of politics between battlefield and the Regency chamber in Paris are stated by historians to have been the causes of the disaster. Unpreparedness is probably the best sum-and-total word to express the reason of this greatest of field surrenders in military annals.

On October 27, 1870, the fortress of Metz surrendered after a siege of seventy days. Marshal Bazaine, the French commander, had retired within its walls after the great battle of Gravelotte on August 18. The results of the surrender were:—173,000 men, 66 generals and more than 6,000 subordinate officers, 400 pieces of artillery, 100 mitrailleuses and 53 eagles or standards. Besides Marshal Bazaine, two other marshals, Canrobert and Le Boeuf, surrendered to the victors.

A surrender of world importance—although far from being thought so at the time of its occurrence—was that of Charles, Earl Cornwallis, the commander of the British forces at Yorktown, to the Continental commander, General George Washington, October 19, 1781. This event ended the American Revolution, for when news of it reached Great Britain it disheartened even the most bitter of the Tories and paved the way to peace. Washington marched from the vicinity of Fort Lee, New Jersey, all the way to Virginia to accomplish it—400 miles—in twenty-eight days. For boldness of conception, promptness of decision and in celerity of execution Napoleon did nothing better in his Ulm campaign, famous as it became with military analysis. The American commander crossed the Hudson August 21, and Yorktown fell just fifty-nine days later.

After the battle of Jamestown, July 6, 1781, in which Cornwallis had defeated Lafayette, the British forces were led to Gloucester and Yorktown, the better to support a British fleet that was to be sent to Hampton Roads. Lines of field fortifications were laid out.

Washington on his arrival at Williamsburg was joined by Lafayette's troops from Virginia, and a French force from Hayti, so that he assembled 16,000 men. Cornwallis' army numbered 8,316. Yorktown was immediately surrounded. Siege guns were got on shore from the French fleet. The line closed in. Night attacks were made, and finally, after a storm prevented the transportation of the British troops across the York River to Gloucester, Cornwallis opened negotiations for a surrender.

SURRENDER OF GENERAL LEE AT APPOMATTOX, APRIL 9TH 1865. SIGNING THE DOCUMENTS. FROM RIDPATH'S HISTORY OF THE WORLD, BY PERMISSION OF THE JONES BROTHERS PUBLISHING COMPANY, CINCINNATI, OHIO.

The prisoners numbered 7,157 soldiers, 840 seamen, 800 camp followers, or 8,077 in all. In addition there were 144 cannon, 6,038 muskets, great quantities of ammunition, supplies and clothing belonging to the army and four frigates, 30 transports, 15 galleys and several smaller vessels. During the siege, which began September 28 and lasted twenty-one days, the British lost 156 killed and 326 wounded, the allies 75 killed and 199 wounded. A naval battle between the British and French was fought in the Chesapeake while the siege was beginning, the British vessels retiring to New York. The French vessels, remaining in adjacent waters, aided immeasurably in the successful prosecution of operations. So this great field surrender went down into history.

Another surrender outside a fortress that marked a decided military epoch in the War of the Revolution was that of General Burgoyne to General Gates at Saratoga October 17, 1777. At Bemis Heights on October 7 Burgoyne had been defeated, with a loss of 600 men. He retreated to Saratoga and began the construction of defences. Gates followed and surrounded him. The British and Hessians marched out of their camp after the papers were signed, and laid down their arms to the number of 341 officers, 596 non-commissioned officers, 4,830 privates—a total of 5,763 men. Gates failed to say the men should be prisoners of war. They were used against the Americans later in consequence of this omission. The principal cause of the British surrender was the foolish attempt to operate an army in a hostile country when separated 180 miles of wilderness from its base of supplies. Of course, the American army outnumbered the British nearly two to one in order to surround it so effectually.

The surrender of Ulm October 20, 1805, was the climax of a series of rapid manoeuvres of Napoleon against the Austrian, General Mack. On September 7 Mack, with an army of 80,000 men, crossed the Inn and moved on Munich. Bonaparte crossed the Rhine, and by a bold and rapid movement gained Mack's rear, cutting off his communication with Vienna. In a series of engagements fought for the recovery of the Vienna roads Mack was repulsed and retired within the walls of Ulm. Two weeks later, without any intervening casualties, Mack surrendered his army of 30,000 men and sixty pieces of cannon. The remainder of his force, which had been jointly commanded by the Archduke Charles, had either been made prisoners previously or retreated to join two other Austrian armies that had been sent against the power of Napoleon. Thus in the short space of three weeks Napoleon's masterly movements had completely overwhelmed his enemy without a real battle.

The surrender of Robert E. Lee to U. S. Grant, at Appomattox, April 9, 1865, was perhaps one of the saddest sights in the history of warfare. The Confederate troops, measured by the endurance of all soldiery since the first armed force was ever arrayed, would have been justified in surrendering months before. They were half starved, in rags, barefooted and bareheaded. But they did not give up because of this. They were content to fight on with all of these handicaps so long as there was a use in fighting. It was not even starvation that beat them. It was the overwhelming force of a foe outnumbering them five to one. To continue would have not been battle, but mere massacre. So they were surrendered. There were 2,862 officers and 25,494 enlisted men, a total of 28,356, in the heroic band of fighters. Fewer than 8,000 had rifles.

The mention of Fort Ticonderoga will always bring to the American memory the brilliant capture of this place at the beginning of May, 1775, by Colonel Ethan Allen and two hundred "Green Mountain Boys." Benedict Arnold, a captain at the time, had been authorized to raise four hundred men for the purpose, but when he reached the vicinity of Lake Champlain and found Allen already under way, he joined the expedition. They arrived before the fort while it was still within an hour of dawn and gained admittance through the sally-port by a ruse. Allen called upon the commander, Captain Delaplace, to show himself and make a surrender. Out came the British officer, breeches not yet slipped on, and inquired by what authority he was asked to yield the place.

"In the name of the Great Jehovah and the Continental Congress," history says Allen answered.

The city of Paris has had severe experiences in the way of surrenders to invading armies. On March 31, 1814, the allied armies that had hemmed in Napoleon entered the French capital and occupied it with a force of 230,000 troops. After Napoleon's escape from Elba and his defeat at Waterloo the armies of the allies again entered Paris, July 7, 1815. Thus the great city had to surrender to its enemies twice within sixteen months. Fifty-five years later—January 28, 1871, the city surrendered again, this time to the victors in the Franco-German war, after a brisk bombardment. The death rate had grown to 5,000 a week and the food supply was exhausted before capitulation was made. Another city surrender of the campaign was that of Orléans, December 4, 1870. This municipality endured two occupations before the war ended.

The surrender of the city of Pekin by a traitor Chinaman October 6, 1858, was a memorable occasion in the pioneer attempts made by European and American Powers to break into the privacy of the Celestial Kingdom. The city was taken as the final act in the operations conducted by France and England during 1857, to obtain reparation for attacks made on their shipping. Canton was taken. Russia and the United States joined in the attempt to force treaties recognizing Western Powers. China finally agreed to the reception of residential Ministers of all four countries in Pekin. But all sorts of impediments were placed in the way of the Ministers entering the city. The war was renewed. Following the surrender of one of the gates the allies rushed into the city. The imperial government was forced to yield and the treaties were ratified.

SURRENDER OF THE GATES OF PEKIN TO THE ALLIES, OCT. 6TH 1858. FROM RIDPATH'S HISTORY OF THE WORLD, BY PERMISSION OF THE JONES BROTHERS PUBLISHING COMPANY, CINCINNATI, OHIO.

The battle may be the seance of conflict, but the surrender is certainly the plum of war. A capitulation is the pinning on of the medal—the proof of the soldier's fighting. The assault and the volley are the motions of the work performed; the surrender is the pay. A battle may be drawn or may mean but a meagre victory. There is no uncertainty about the value of a surrender.

The glory of fighting is the food of the spirit, but the capture of a city is the substance of substance. Napoleon's crack corps said:—"The Old Guard dies but never surrenders!" This evidences the possession of exalted martial purpose in the field, coupled with a wise determination never to let the possible victor obtain the material rewards of war. It is the final shibboleth of battle.

PEOPLE OFTEN SAY

"How Are We To Know When The Kidneys Are Out Of Order?"

EASIEST THING IN THE WORLD!

The location of the kidneys, close to the small of the back, renders the detection of kidney trouble a simple matter. The note of warning comes from the back. The kidneys become overtaxed and fail to do their work at nature's call.

Backache is the signal sent out by the kidneys the minute they become overtaxed. Those who heed the warning when it first comes, usually have but little trouble.

The danger lies in delay. Doan's Kidney Pills stimulate the action of the kidneys, and enable them to perform their duty perfectly.

Mrs. Greig Murphy, Lower Ship Harbor East, N.S., writes: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills in my family with great success, and don't think there is a better pill for the kidneys. I was very miserable with my back, and could hardly get about. I got a box, and tried them, and found that they were really good, so I took in all about six boxes, and soon found my back cured, and my kidneys as well as ever."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25; for sale at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Sometimes a Clear Conscience Needs No Accuser

By LOUISE B. CUMMINGS

I was shopping one day when a woman in the place where I was buying dry goods was arrested for shoplifting. She seemed to be a lady and very much cut up. She endeavored to convince the proprietor that she was respectable and had no occasion to steal, but he was obdurate, and the poor woman was hustled off to a police station. A few days later I saw by a newspaper that the lady was the wife of a wealthy and prominent man. She lived in another city, and, there being no one at hand to vouch for her, she spent the night in a cell. Her husband came for her, got her out and commenced suit against the dry goods firm for $100,000 damages.

This matter made so great an impression on me that I dreaded thereafter getting into such a position myself. I never went to a counter to look over goods but that I felt that the eyes of a detective were upon me.

One day while buying some goods I laid my bag on the counter to examine them. Several other persons came to the counter while I was there. When I finished making my purchases—they were to be sent home—I took up my bag and went to another counter, where I bought a spool of thread and, opening my bag to put in the purchase, noticed some bundles that I could not account for. Either they had been put in my bag or I had changed bags with some one else.

Remembering the case I have mentioned, I became terror stricken lest I should be arrested as a thief.

And here is where an innocent person is liable to incriminate himself. Unless very cool and collected there are nineteen chances in twenty that he will do the wrong thing, and there are nineteen chances in twenty that one, especially a woman, will not be cool and collected. I certainly was not, and I did not do what I should have done—that is, take the bag to the office and report the facts. My one desire was to get out of that store before the lynx eyed detective on duty should pounce upon me. I went toward the door in a great hurry, doubtless showing by my expression that I was a thief running away with goods.

I attracted the attention of a woman, who followed me out. I caught sight of her staring at me and, looking back on gaining the street, saw her coming behind me. I did not doubt that she was a detective, employed by the firm to watch shoplifters, and that I would be arrested as soon as she could secure the services of a policeman. I hurried on, she following as fast as she could. But she did not gain on me, for she was older than I and somewhat corpulent.

Seeing a cab standing beside the curb, I jumped in and told the cabman to drive me to my house. The woman, coming up as we were driving away, endeavored to attract the cabman's attention, but he did not see her. I saw her plainly enough, but I looked away, pretending not to see her. There was no other cab near, and I succeeded in getting away from the woman. When I reached home I ran in as quickly as I could, locked the door behind me, and after calling to the maid to admit no one I went upstairs to my room.

I had not been there long before there was a sharp ring at the doorbell. I remained in my room, shivering, and the summons was not answered. There was another and another ring, but after that whoever was there went away. I heard some one going down the steps and, looking out of the window, saw a policeman riding away on a motorcycle.

I determined to get away from the house before he could come back, but first concluded to examine the bag. Its contents not mine and contained a number of articles of no great value that were evidently purchases of a woman. Then I recalled that I had been at my jeweler's and brought away a valuable brooch that I had left there for repair. I had exchanged my brooch for a yard of cambric, six handkerchiefs, half a yard of dress lining and a number of other articles of no more value.

While I was preparing to continue my flight I heard a latchkey fumbling in the keyhole of the front door. I knew it was my husband and ran downstairs, opened the door and when he entered fell into his arms. In reply to his agonized appeals to be told what was the matter I finally gasped that I was about to be arrested as a shoplifter. This naturally astonished him, and he worked hard with me till he got the story.

"Nonsense!" he exclaimed. "Some woman has unintentionally exchanged bags. Doubtless while shopping at the same counter with you you both laid down your bags and she picked up the wrong bag. When you turned for yours you took what was left."

There was another ring at the doorbell, and my husband insisted on going to the door. I ran upstairs and hid in the closet. Presently I heard him calling, but I remained where I was till he came upstairs with my lost bag.

The woman who had followed me, finding that she had exchanged bags with some one and seeing me leave the store, recognized me as one she had seen shopping beside her and had tried to catch me. Failing, she had sent a motorcycle policeman after me. He had returned, reported that he had failed to gain admittance, and the woman had come to restore my bag with a $1,000 brooch in it for her own containing articles worth very little.

Apple Charlotte.

The literature of the kitchen sometimes sheds a light on the traits of historical personages. For example, it is not uninteresting to read in a book of recollections of the origin of that rather agreeable dish of breadcrumbs, fruit and spices known as "apple charlotte." It appears that the thrifty wife of George III. invented the pudding in order to use up the weekly palace crusts.

BELGIANS LOVE TOBACCO

Heaviest Smokers in the World, the Pipe Most Popular

That the Belgians, in their times of happy peace and prosperity, consumed more tobacco per head than any other country in the world will probably come as a surprise to many people. Their army of smokers, however, formed no less than one-third of the entire population of the country, their annual consumption of tobacco being 6¼ pounds per head—more than three times the amount consumed in the United Kingdom, and six times as much as in Italy.

And it was his love for a good pipe which led the Belgian to inaugurate smoking competitions, when enthusiastic devotees of "My Lady Nicotine" competed for various prizes. Nearly every village, no matter how small, could boast its "Rookersmaatschappij," which almost unpronounceable word is equivalent for what we term "smokers' Club." At these competitions it was the custom to compete for money prizes, the winners being decorated with some floral adornment pinned on their breasts, as visible proof of the honor achieved.

The premier smoking club of Belgium was the Bruges Smoking Club, which held its meetings at a café in the Grande Place. The room in which the members met was decorated with a gorgeous banner, while on the walls was to be seen an assortment of curious pipes, representing all corners of the globe. In fact, the place was a veritable museum of pipes.

Members were only permitted to enter the Bruges Smoking Club after reaching the age of eighteen. Cigars and cigarettes were tabooed, the pipe being looked upon as the only justifiable means of satisfying that craving which makes smokers slaves to the weed.

The chief object of the club was not to break records in regard to the amount of tobacco consumed, but to teach its members the use of tobacco by organising competitions and offering prizes to those who could make a pipeful of tobacco last the longest. Exactly what the record time is it is difficult to say, but it appears that one of the best performances was that of a competitor who kept his pipe alight for one hour and twenty-one minutes thirty-three seconds.

Golf Men as Trench Diggers

Dr. Mackenzie, of Leeds, who is well known as a golf architect, asked the War Office to allow him to enlist, through the Golf Greenkeepers' Association, a force of experts to act as instructors in the art of trench-making. Constructed on the scientific lines of the golf bunker, he guarantees trenches which would be invisible to an enemy 100 yards away.

The Tragedy of the Poles

The tragedy of Poland in the war is one of the most terrible in history. It is fratricide on an immense scale. There are about 600,000 Polish soldiers in the three armies, 120,000 Austrian, 80,000 German, and 400,000 in the Russian army.

The Moratorium.

When Jack and Jill go up the hill
And then come down engaged,
No wonder when she breaks her troth
That Jack should be enraged;
He starts a damage suit to find
A moratorium she has signed.

Brown calls Fits-Jones a blank, blank, blank,
Jones says that on his knees
To square the damage done him Brown
Owes him apologies.
"My moratorium, you forget,"
Quotes Brown, "it postpones ev'ry debt."

Last week I lent ten bucks to Smith
For temporary need,
And then in sudden stress I asked
Them back with greatest speed.
But to my pleadings Smith was numb,
He claimed a moratorium.

In Spite of Himself.

In Denver they tell of a young Britisher who will some day inherit a title, and who nothing ago married the daughter of a supposedly wealthy man of that town.

A month or so after the marriage the father-in-law took the husband aside. "I am ruined!" he exclaimed. "Practically every cent is gone!"

The Briton was a good loser, however, for he gave vent to a long, low whistle and exclaimed with a little laugh:

"By George! Then I did marry for love, after all."—Harper's Magazine.

Climatology.

If only sunshine stories
Were written in the sky
And only golden glories
Each year came sweeping by—

If storms were never breaking
In fierce relentless mood
Among the shadows waking
The echoes strange and rude—

If naught but sunny weather
Prevailed from north to south,
How we would get together
And howl about drouth!

"Here's one for you," said Tom to Carl. "A dog was tied to a rope ten feet long. Twenty feet away was a fat, juicy bone. How did the dog get to the bone?"

"Oh, that is an old one," said Carl. "You want me to say, 'I give it up,' and you will say, 'That is what the other cur did.'"

"No, you are wrong, for the dog got the meat."

"Well, how did he do it?"

"Why, the other end of the rope was not tied."—Indianapolis News.

Good and Bad Points.

When, as Belinda used to fare,
Upon a subway grating,
The way her skirts would mount the air
Was truly aggravating.

Now dear Belinda stands at ease
Where'er her fancy pleases.
Her tight skirt cannot climb her knees
However stiff the breezes.

But when she climbs the subway stair,
Emerging from the station,

Chamberlain and His Monocles.

While the late Joseph Chamberlain was crossing Palace yard one day some years ago he was accosted by an American girl with the cool request, "Mr. Chamberlain, please do give me your eyeglass for my cabinet at home."

It was at once handed to her guard and all, so promptly that the curio hunter apparently felt some remorse and stammered, "Most likely I'm inconveniencing you." "Not at all," replied Mr. Chamberlain as he produced from his pocket a morocco case and took from it a spare monocle, which he screwed in position, and then went on his way, smiling.—London Express

DANDRUFFY HEADS BECOME HAIRLESS

Scalp Dries — Checks out the Hair And Prevents its Growth.

If you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silk hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning most if not all of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve it and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will be silky, fluffy, lustrous, soft and look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

The Wrecks of War in Lemberg

(By Stanley Washburn in Collier's)

Lemberg is, I dare venture, the biggest hospital base that the world has ever seen. Here alone are forty-two gigantic institutions for the repair of unfortunates that come daily in trainloads from the front. The doctor in one of these huge institutions told me that, counting both Russian and Austrian, 15,000 had been cared for in that one building alone, and estimated that far more than 100,000 had passed through Lemberg since the war started.

The Russians have done extremely well with their sick and wounded. One hospital had lost forty-two patients out of 2,000 received, while another counted eighteen deaths out of over 400. The facts seem to be that the men who do not actually die on the field of battle and who have fairly prompt treatment have an excellent chance to recover entirely from their injuries. As one sees the ghastly wounds in the hospitals from which men are apparently recovering, one is amazed at the capacity of the Russian peasant to absorb nervous shock.

One beautiful nurse said to me: "What I am wondering every day is what on earth has killed the men that we hear are dead upon the battle field, for every day patients come to us with wounds that one would certainly imagine would have meant instant death. Here, for instance, is one," and she led me to the bedside of a huge, blue-eyed blond soldier with his head in bandages. "This man," she told me, "came in here two weeks ago and we thought he would die any minute. There was a hole above his left eye made by a shrapnel ball. It was so big that I could put two fingers into it up to the second joint. The ball went completely through his head and we took it out of the back of his neck. He will recover. You see, he understands quite well that we are talking about him," for the big soldier had taken her hand and gently kissed it as he gazed at her with eyes as full of devotion as those of a Newfoundland dog.

As we went from bed to bed, inspecting these ghastly wrecks that were paying the price for the readjustment of the balance of power, every one in the room followed the lead of the white-clad nurse, who seemed to know the case and history of each and soldier. After I left her I discovered that she was one of Lemberg's most prominent social figures, though in her simple uniform there was nothing to distinguish her from her more humble sisters. One is much impressed as a matter of fact by the remarkable devotion of this sisterhood. On more than one occasion I have discovered that the haggard, pale-faced little woman or girl that was moving quietly about the wards, performing the most menial tasks, was a countess or a princess, known by name all over Russia.

Here in the hospitals there seems to be neither caste nor social distinctions. Thousands upon thousands of Russia's very best women are working night and day to vindicate the debt which the whole country owes to the peasantry that are paying with their life's blood and their mangled limbs the price of war. We have seen them everywhere, and almost always of the type that makes womanhood an inspiration. On the hospital trains from the front, living in tiny cars with no comforts of civilization, they are working night and day over the hideously wounded that come each day in ahoals from the trenches. With care-lined faces and uniforms stained with blood, one sees them at two and three in the morning working unremittingly in the little station operating rooms that one finds at almost every important town. Many of these girls and women are of a class that has never known a sordid day.

Considering the enormous multitudes of wounded cared for and treated here in Russia since the war began, the organization has worked wonderfully well. The modern bullet makes comparatively few cripples. The wounds that kill usually stretch the victims dead on the battle field and the bulk of the others do not cripple their victims. Wounds made by shrapnel cases and high calibre shells are, of course, an exception. The havoc these work in human flesh is too terrible to describe.

Courts Would Acquit Airmen.

LONDON, Feb. 4.—The announcement that Russia would treat as pirates, airmen who shelled unfortified towns, has been received with great interest in England. A prominent official, however, said yesterday that Russia's action would probably not be followed here. He pointed out that aviators could act under orders from the military authorities, and it would be difficult for a court to fix the responsibility for the killing by a bomb upon a certain individual.

The official opinion in England is that a court would discharge any captured airman who came to trial, under the ordinary criminal procedure.

SAGE TEA KEEPS YOUR HAIR DARK

When Mixed With Sulphur It Brings Back Its Lustre and Abundance

Gray hair, however handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantages of a youthful appearance. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns grey and looks dry, wispy and scraggly, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundred-fold.

Don't stay grey! Look young! Either prepare the tonic at home or get from any drug store a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." Thousands of folks recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair beautifully and removes dandruff, stops scalp itching and falling hair; besides, no one can possibly tell, as it darkens so naturally and evenly. You moisten a sponge or soft brush with it, drawing this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the grey hair disappears; after another application or two, its natural colour is restored and it becomes thick, glossy and luxurious, and you appear years younger.

WITH THE FRENCH WOUNDED

The Woman's Sacrifice

LONDON, Feb. 5th. 8:30 p.m. — Away from the battlefield one sees war stripped of its glamour. We see the heroic work of nurses who are on duty day and night. There is devotion, self-sacrifice, suffering patriotism—qualities which only a great war and its terrible consequences can inspire to the highest development. The women everywhere are helping and everywhere one sees self-sacrifice and devotion to country.

The women of Canada do not know how fortunate they are. Here there are plenty of women who suffer in silence, whose strength is out of proportion to their ambition. Their hands are tied by some chronic disease common to womankind; that weak back, accompanied by pain here or there, extreme nervousness, sleeplessness, maybe fainting spells or spasms, are all signals of distress for women. She may be growing from girlhood into womanhood, passing from womanhood to motherhood. At any or all of these periods of a woman's life she should take a tonic and nervine, prescribed for just such cases by a physician of vast experience in the diseases of women. Dr. Pierce's Favourite Prescription has successfully treated more cases the past fifty years than any other known remedy. When you feel dull, headachy, backache, dizzy, or perhaps hot flashes, there is nothing you can accomplish, nothing you can enjoy. You can find permanent relief in Dr. Pierce's Favourite Prescription. It is sold by medicine dealers, or trial box by mail from Dr. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., on receipt of 50-cents, or one dollar for large box.—Adv.

BOY GIVEN UP TO RICHES BY MOTHER IS LOST

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—The stifling of a mother's love so her son could live in luxury, while she was almost in want, was disclosed yesterday after a public search began for Terrence Dudley Anderson, wealthy fifteen-year-old heir, and foster-son of Terrence L. Anderson, rich real estate operator, of No. 22 West Sixtieth street.

The boy left his home a week ago to-day, and has completely vanished. He said he was "going out in the world to make his way like a man," not knowing he was ultimately to come into possession of half the large estate left by his foster-mother, Mrs. Eva Roxanna Anderson.

His disappearance has revealed the facts concerning his birth, which were carefully concealed from him. There was but one reason for the secrecy—it was feared might insist on living with his mother, Mrs. Gladys Strain-Beeson, a nurse, No. 6 West Sixty-fifth street.

The boy is the son of Dr. Strain, of London, who died three months before the boy was born. The widow brought the boy here, and through Dr. Willard Parker obtained a place as nurse on Ward's Island. She kept the boy until January, 1907, when she advertised for a wealthy family to adopt him. She felt he was entitled to better care and wider opportunities than she could offer, so sacrificed her love to better his chances in life. Mr. and Mrs. Anderson adopted the boy eight years ago.

"After I gave him up," said Mrs. Beeson, his mother, who has since married, "I used to stand on the corner near his home and see him go to school. At night I used to go around to the tenement house in which he lived and look through the blinds to get a glimpse of him and feel that he was all right. I loved him always, and I have cursed the day I ever gave him up. But I thought it was best for him."

Mrs. Beeson says she her boy vanished Mr. Anderson has consented to her taking him back if he can be found. So she appeals to the lad to return. He was a pupil at the Pawling Institute, Heightstown, N. J. His foster-father, who loved him greatly, died several years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Levi Payne left on Wednesday last to spend two weeks visiting friends in Toronto and Woodstock.

Mr. J. M. Bygott is spending a few days this week in Port Hope.

A patriotic entertainment under the auspices of the "Soldier's Comfort Club" was held in the Town Hall on Friday evening last when Lieut.-Col. F. W. Macqueen, of Toronto, gave a most interesting lecture, entitled "Imperialistic Canada." It was a great pleasure to welcome the Colonel once more to our village, and his heartfelt words will undoubtedly instil a strong feeling of patriotism in the hearts of all our young Canadians, who were fortunate enough to hear him. Colonel Macqueen was accompanied by his son, Mr. Charles Beresford Macqueen, who delighted the audience in his rendering of a number of patriotic and other songs.

Colonel Macqueen also preached a patriotic sermon to a large congregation at St. John the Baptist Church on Sunday morning.

During their say here Colonel Macqueen and son were guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Graham.

Mr. R. C. Strickland, of Burleigh, is in the village visiting his daughter, Mrs. R. E. Cassan, at "The Cottage."

Mr. George Millyard, of Peterborough, spent the week-end at his home in the village.

The Rev. H. A. Ben-Oliel left on Monday to spend a few days at Port Hope.

Russians Moving Toward Budapest

Cossacks Gain Success in Fighting in Passes of Carpathians

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

PETROGRAD, Feb. 5.—The Russian invasion of Hungary and desperate fighting west of Warsaw are the salient features of official news from the battle fronts of Eastern Europe.

In spite of German help, the Austrians have been beaten back through the Dukla, Mezo Laborez and Lapkow Passes, and the Russian invaders are descending the southern slopes of the Carpathians to the roads that lead to Budapest. Already Russian cavalry has advanced many miles to the south. Yesterday was marked by an important success for the Russians in the Mezo Laborez region. It is reported that a battalion of the 226th German Infantry Regiment was annihilated and the Austro-German force lost heavily in cannon and supplies. It appears from official announcements that the Russian offensive is gaining momentum and that Budapest is actually threatened.

On the Warsaw front the fighting has been terrific in the past few days. The Germans, renewing their massed attacks in an effort to break the Russian line at any cost, drove the Russians back to the second line of trenches on January 31. On February 1 and yesterday the Russians recovered from the heavy blows dealt them, delivered a series of tremendous counter-attacks and recovered practically all of the ground that had been lost. The conflict centered about Borjimow and Goumine, and the Russian general staff states that the losses of the Germans were very heavy.

The campaigns elsewhere are developing less violently. The Russian invasion of East Prussia continues steadily. The corps moving toward West Prussia retain the offensive. In Southern Poland, in the Pilitza region, the Russians have been able to check an offensive movement designed to assist the German attack west of Warsaw.

ALMOST DESPAIRED OF EVER GETTING WELL.

"Indigestion is one of the worst forms of stomach trouble. The stomach becomes upset and you have a raw, debilitating feeling in it. After a meal you feel that you must get rid of that nasty, bilious, burning sensation. It is not necessary for you to be troubled with indigestion if you will only try that old and well-known remedy, Burdock Blood Bitters, which is a combination of nature's best known roots, herbs and barks for the cure of all stomach and blood troubles.

Mrs. Mary MacKay, Hunter's Mountain, N.S., writes: "I was troubled with indigestion for more than ten years. I tried several doctors' medicines claiming the power to cure, but all without success. Having heard of the many cures effected by Burdock Blood Bitters, I decided to give it a trial. After taking two bottles I was completely cured. My appetite which was very poor is now good, and I can eat most everything without any disagreeable feelings.

22. Signals—Whistle Bisnal, and War Calls.

2. The whistle will be used:—

i. To draw attention to a signal about to be made or to an order to be given—"a short blast."

ii. To denote close in wood, bush, fog or darkness, when the signal cannot be seen—"a succession of short blasts."

iii. To turn out troops from camp or bivouac to fall in or to occupy previously arranged positions—"a succession of alternate long and short blasts."

3. On a "short blast" being blown on the whistle, men will cease fire momentarily, if necessary, and will look towards their commander and remain looking at him until he has completed the signal and dropped his hand or until the order is understood. If men are on the move they will continue the movements, while looking towards the commander.

AIRSHIP SHELLS THE BRITISH TROOPS

United States May Protest To Germany

GERMAN AIR SQUADRONS BOMBARD BRITISH TRENCHES

Desperate Infantry Fighting in the Argonne Region--French Forced to Evacuate 100 Yards of Trench, Which They Recaptured by a Brilliant Charge---Two German Monoplanes Bombard Town of Furnes Six Miles Inside of Allied Lines--United States May Protest Against Blockade.

(Special Cable to The Examiner.)

PARIS, February 5.—(3 p.m. official statement.)—German aviators travelling in squadrons are raining shells on the British trenches all along the battle line in Belgium, from Nieuport south of Ypres, despatches from the battle field asserted to-day. Two German monoplanes bombarded the town of Furnes, 6 miles inside the allied lines; at the same time the Germans' artillery dropped shells from a great distance into the town; great damage was done. Several German taubes passed over the allies' trenches near Nieuport. Their objective apparently was Dunkirk, which has been the object of several aerial attacks, but the despatches from the sea coast town to-day failed to mention their arrival. The Argonne region was the scene of the most desperate infantry fighting in the last 24 hours. A German attack forced the French to evacuate more than 100 yards of trenches. During the night the French counter attacked, and in a brilliant charge they drove the Germans from the captured trenches, and rushing on captured 100 yards of German earthworks. The French artillery has been successful in silencing the German bombardment south of Arras, north east of Albert, and in the region of Noyon and Peronne.

GROUNDS FOR PROTEST.

WASHINGTON, February 5.—After examining the German proclamation creating a war zone aroung England, the Administration officials to-day were inclined to believe there is ground for a protest to Germany.

While not declaring that a protest will actually be made a high administration official ventured the guess that there would be one. He declared that the situation is likely to develop into an important matter from an American viewpoint. While the order was generally characterized as a "paper blockade," the Administration was understood to believe that in isolated instances Germany might work serious havoc to American vessels. The examination of the German order is in the hands of Solicitor Lansing of the State Department.

600 GUARDS HAVE USED THE RANGES

340 Men Have Made Scores of From 30 to 35—Good Turnout at the Weekly Drill of the Regiment

ORDERS FOR THE WEEK

The regular weekly drill of the Home Guard was held at the Armouries last night and about three hundred men turned out. After roll call the Companies were handed over to Sergt. Major C. Peters and formed into five large companies and a guard drill was indulged in. It was noticed that this method of drilling had immediate good results as there was no lost time and it was much easier to handle the small number of companies.

A meeting of the officers was held after drill and a new shooting schedule was drafted; also arrangements completed for shooting during day time in the Aromuries ranges, and drill by Company Commanders during the evenings.

Reports as to the shooting to date, was received, as follows:

Number of men who have put in part of their shooting practice—600.

340 men have made scores—30 to 35.

125 men have made scores—25 to 30.

The balance of the men are coming along first class.

The practice so far has been on targets with 1 inch bull's eye. The members who have qualified on these targets will find that the bull's eye under the new regulations will not be quite so easy to reach.

The following are the approximate dimensions for the different ranges:

	400 yds.	600 yds.	1000 yds
Bull. . . .	1 in.	3-4 in.	1-2 in.
Inner . . .	2 1-2 in.	1 7-8 in.	1 1-4 in.
Mag. . . .	4 in.	3 in.	2 in.
Outer . . .	8 in.	6 in.	4 in.

The Class of Instruction was organized last Monday night and will be continued each Monday evening until further orders Sergt. Major C. Peters will be Instructor and he promises that with good attendance and strict attention, he will turn out the officers and non-commissioned officers of the Battalion fit to take the several examinations.

The following are orders for the week:

Orders by Officer Commanding Home Guard:

Class of Instruction will meet Monday evening at 8 o'clock and each Monday evening until further notice. Officers of companies shooting that evening will arrange with Musketry Sergeant at the Ranges to take charge of their men at the Ranges.

Shooting pratio has been discontinued in the afternoons in the old Baptist Church on account of the factory underneath. The shooting schedule for companies has been re-arranged for the following evenings:

Monday—1st squad, No. 12 Company; 2nd squad, No. 11 Company.

Tuesday—1st squad, No. 3 Company; 2nd squad, No. 8 Company.

Wednesday—1st squad, No. 9 Company; 2nd squad, No. 4 Company.

Thursday—1st squad, No. 7 Company; 2nd squad, No. 10 Company.

The shooting on Thursday night will be as follows, in order that it will not interfere with weekly drill: No. 1 squad, 7 p.m. to 8 p.m.; No. 2 squad, 8 p.m. to 10 p.m.

Members who cannot attend shooting practice on nights that their Companies are scheduled for, may shoot any other night immediately after the regular squads are finished, they will be under the general direction of Musketry Sergeant on duty.

Members who cannot attend shooting evenings may shoot at the "Armouries Ranges" on Tuesday and Saturday afternoons. An officer must be present to take charge of shooting and the return of scores to Orderly Room. Rifles, ammunition and targets will be obtained from Sergt Geo. Grange, at the Armouries.

Arrangements have been made to grade the members and they will shoot as follows:

1st Marksman—1,000 yd. targets
2nd, 1st class shots—600 yd. targets.
3rd, 2nd class shots—400 yd targets.
4th, 3rd class shots, 200 yd. targets

Company officers may arrange to hold Company drill in the gun shed or Armouries any week night as long as they do not interefere with arrangements of the 57th Battalion or Overseas Force. Rifles for drill purposes will be obtained from Sergt. Grange.

Until further orders, Thursday evening drill will be as follows:

UNITED STATES MAY PROTEST

In the first section of the "Examiner," which goes to press each day at eleven o'clock in order that it may be in the hands of the rural mail carriers by noon, it was intimated that the American administration would not protest against German's creation of a war zone, fringing England and the Dutch coast. Since the receipt of that despatch it has developed that the situation is likely to develop into an important matter from the American viewpoint. The Washington officials are inclined to believe that there is sufficient grounds for a protest to Germany.

STREET LIGHTING ACCOUNT WILL BE INVESTIGATED

City Will Lose Between Six and Seven Hundred Dollars and Not $1,290 as is Generally Supposed

LIGHTS WERE "STAGGERED"

The account of $1,290 charged to the city for current said to have been supplied by the Peterborough Light and Power Company, will be the subject of a little municipal investigation. That is to the extent of finding out who is responsible for the loss of the current. The matter has been referred to the Hydro-Electric Commission of Ontario, and they have suggested that the affair be looked into. It will be remembered that a short time ago the city received a bill for the above amount, payment being withheld on the grounds that the city did not use the amount of current indicated in the account. Through some means or other the current was lost through one of the transformers as a result of which the city was paying as much for light as though the whole magnitite arc lighting system was in use, instead of only one-half the system. Every other light on the system was cut out some months ago in order to cut down expenses, it being considered that one-half of the number of lights would be ample.

While the account is for $1,290, only one-half of this amount is for current that was dissipated through the transformer. So that the city stands to lose between six and seven hundred dollars, and not $1,290, as is generally supposed.

At the recent examinations held at the Toronto Conservatory of Music, Miss Edna Stewart, 473 Bolivar Street, has been very successful in passing her second year's course in Piano, taking first class honours in Theory. She is a pupil of Miss Lillian Tate.

THE ALDERMANIC DEPUTATION BACK FROM TORONTO

Where They Were Investigating a Number of Matters of Vital Importance to the City—The Sewage Disposal Site

CONTENTION IS SUBSTANTIATED

Aldermen Johnston and Green have returned from Toronto, where they interviewed the Provincial Board of Health, the Hydro-Electric Commission of Ontario, and Willis Chipman, consulting engineer. The latter was connected with the construction of the Romaine Street sewer. The aldermanic deputation waited upon Mr. Chipman in respect to an engineering account which was said to have been incurred in connection with the work. Both Aldermen Johnston and Green were of the opinion that they had effected a satisfactory understanding, and that the matter will be straightened out at an early date. The city disputed the amount of the bill for several reasons so that the account has been dragging along for several months.

Work Will be Continued.

"The matter is no longer in doubt," said Ald. Green in respect to the understanding that the city has with the Provincial Board of Health regarding the proposed site of the sewerage disposal plant. It will be remembered that a few nights ago Ald. McIntyre suggested that work of constructing the outfall sewer be commenced on Park Street in preference to where it is being carried on now, until such time as the city was sure that the present site would be available. At that time Ald. Green said that there was little or no doubt but what the Provincial Board of Health would back up the city in its attempt to secure possession of the site selected by the city. The trip to Toronto resulted in additional confirmation of this contention, so there will not likely be any attempt to alter the present plans.

The Hydro Electric.

The Aldermen rounded out a busy day by visiting the Head Office of the Hydro-Electric Commission of Ontario in connection with an account of $1,280 for street lighting, which is disputed upon the grounds that the current was lost through one of the transformers, and therefore did not serve the purpose intended. The Commission in explanation, intimated that the bill was excessive, but before a decision was reached, would require looking into. The matter will have to be investigated from this end, as it was here that the current was supplied.

Peterboro' Pacer Beats Homer Mac—Ottawa Ice Meeting Over

OTTAWA, Feb. 5.—The Hull Driving Club's ice races came to a close here yesterday afternoon. The feature was the 2:10, which brought together Homer Mac, Grand Opera and Ed Direct. Grand Opera and Homer Mac divided first and second money, while third went to Ed Direct.

Two horses from the Toronto Repository came first and second in the five-mile grind, Mansfield winning, with Major Hunter at his heels.

Grand Opera made a race record for the track, 2:13¾, in the third heat of the 2:10 pace.

CANNOT MAINTAIN AN EFFECTIVE BLOCKADE

Impossible For Germany to Carry Out Her Threats Says United States Expert---President of Allan Line Says "We'll Go Ahead As If There Were No Germans in the World."

SPECIAL WIRE TO THE EXAMINER:

(By J. W. T. Mason, War Expert of United Press.)

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—It is as impossible for the Tuetonic submarine fleet to starve England into surrender as for the Zeppelins to terrorize Engand into submission.

The Germans of course know the risk that is being run with the neutral nations. Their unprecedented war move must therefore have a meaning. The more probable interpretation is that the Berlin government believes that Germany cannot win the war and has adopted the deliberate policy of doing all the damage possible to Britain before the inevitable happens. Against the other beligerents the Germans feel that they could succeed, but the weight of Britain turns the balance against them. Hence the bitter hatred of Great Britain in Germany and hence the final effort to inflict the utmost harm upon Englishmen—regardless of international law and the former rules of warfare.

CITY HALL PARAGRAPHS

Both Aldermen Green and Johnston are well satisfied with the result of their trip to Toronto. It may have the effect of clearing up a number of contentious matters that have been haunting the minds of the civic officials for some time past.

The Romaine Street Sewer.

The engineering account of Willis Chipman for services said to have been rendered in connection with the Romaine Street sewer is a matter that has been hanging fire ever since the Romaine Street sewer was constructed. The account represents the sum of $725.

Is Progressing.

Assistant City Engineer Hay is slowly recovering from the effects of the operation that he underwent a few days ago. City Treasurer Adams, who has also been indisposed, expects to resume his duties on Monday.

Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

FRIDAY, FEB. 5, 1915

SPORT AS USUAL.

The curling fraternity of Peterborough has extended the imperial and national slogan, "business as usual" to include "sport as usual." This week our curlers have "pulled off," or "swept off," whichever is the proper phraseology, one of the most successful bonspiels that have made him local ice; and in spite of hostile weather conditions at beginning. For three days the city has had the commercial benefit of the presence of about 175 outside curlers, with no inconsiderable economic advantages; and we have had the benefit of the sharpening of the sporting spirit, the development of good fellowship; and the curlers, local and visiting, have had a roaring good time upon the best ice the thermometer or McIntosh could make. Everybody is delighted with the success of the bonspiel. The local curlers with the highly successful way in which it worked out, and the visitors with the hospitality and good sportsmanship they met. The managers of the bonspiel are to be congratulated upon the excellent strategy that led to excellent results. But while they deserve a good deal of credit they do not deserve it all; they couldn't have done so well had it not been for the hearty support of all the local curlers, and of the splendid spirit of sport manifested by their curler guests; the whole combining to place the A No. 1 stamp upon the beautiful bonspiel of 1915.

PLAIN PIRACY.

Piracy on the high seas is the latest official announcement of German methods of waging war. In principle Germany has been against all that the civilized world holds sacred, but now she has officially arrayed herself against the world. She declares that after Feb. 18th every merchant vessel, neutral or enemy, that enters the waters surrounding Great Britain will be destroyed by means of submarine torpedoes. Such a programme may be seriously intended, but then it may be a scheme to frighten neutral shipping from Great Britain and thus create an embargo on British commerce, to compensate the embargo of German ports. The theory is thoroughly Bismarckian, but the possibility of its being carried out with any great degree of success is to be considered. Germany has had many more promising plans utterly fail. The march to Berlin and Paris was not by any means carried out according to specifications—Germany seems to be unable to keep any promise, even one made to herself. The wholesale destruction promised by Zeppelins, has not been accomplished. The threatened wearing down and piecemeal destruction of the British navy has fallen far short of realization, and it may be the same with the piratical programme. This will have the disadvantage of world-wide unpopularity. Air raids and warship raids on British coast cities is a matter of domestic and local concern, as also the destruction of British battleships by submarine torpedoes; but a blanket declaration of piracy in world shipping will interest the whole world and should evoke a protest from the whole world. Little Holland is the first to raise a note of protest, and is to ask Germany "what it means," and thinks that if the statement contains a menace to neutral shipping, "the whole world should combine in opposing such methods." Will the government of the United States "sit up and take notice?" It has kept silent under a long series of German outrages on almost every doctrine in the code of the world's civilization; and has not chirped a word of even moral protest. American shipping interests are very small for so large a country, but on principle, even one or two United States ships going under at the call of the black flag, or even the danger of such a happening would, one might think, bring Uncle Sam out of his sleep. A world-wide menace invites the whole world's cooperation in meeting it. Not necessarily material cooperation, but an expression of sentiment which, coming from powers with the force behind it to give it effect, if not heeded, would be equivalent in result to armed action.

A TWO-EDGED SWORD.

This war is a two-edged sword; it cuts both ways in its effect upon commercial and industrial conditions in Canada. Its general effect is depressing; but it has compensations. In textiles and woollens, the war helps. It is estimated that from Great Britain alone, there have been sent us orders for war supplies to the value of sixteen millions of dollars—for khaki clothing, knitted wear, shirts, haversacks, caps, tents, kit bags, etc. In addition to these we have received large orders for other military supplies—harness, saddlery, shells, etc., which have contributed to a good deal of activity. Many factories have been kept busy on orders for these supplies. Peterborough industries in some lines, have been kept very busy, and the benefits in employment and distribution of money are by no means an inconsiderable compensation for the sacrifices the people as a whole are willingly making.

It is stated that the productions we have turned out have met with approval—very warm approval in some cases; so that there is a probability of continued orders. This is a good thing. From a condition of approximate idleness some of our factories have come to employ their full capacity.

And we must provide for continuing to do work. We must do this by continuing to do honest work as we have, in the main done, in furnishing war supplies; and we must at once discontinue supplying defective goods, as there is reason to think, we have been doing in the supremely important matter of boots.

It is evident that there should be no favouritism shown in the awarding of contracts, or in the provision of means of supervision and inspection to avoid defective work. We have declared a party-truce in Parliament; we should extend that to the awarding of contracts for war supplies. No man or firm should get, or be refused a contract, because of party considerations; and every contractor should be held to strict account, no matter what his party affiliations.

In this war none are for a party; all are for the State; and the influence of party considerations if permitted to operate, will do us more harm than all the contracts will do us good, if it gets Canada a bad name—a name for shoddy workmanship.

In this matter, as well as for the regard of the imperial and military interests directly, as well as our good name as a manufacturing country, our motto, rigidly lived up to, should be "hew to the line no matter where the chips may fall"; be fair and square in the awarding of contracts—rigidly eschew favouritism, on party or personal account. Make contractors live up to the letter of their undertakings—employ rigid and incorruptable inspection, so that our soldiers in the field will have only the best that money can buy or machinery make, to the end that the health or lives of our soldiers and fellow-citizens may not be risked or sacrificed for the sake of the little paltry gain that may be got from doing bad work; and to the end that we shall maintain the good name of Canada for honest workmanship and honest methods. What monstrous inconsistency it would be for a country like Canada, that is fighting German methods, to employ German methods. If the war in its industrial influence, upon Canada, cuts both ways, we must see that it does not cut another way—back off a slice of our good name. If an honest man's the noblest work of God, an honest nation is something greater if not nobler.

FLAX-GROWING AS A FACTOR IN GREATER FARM PRODUCTION

Military strength as well as commercial strength epends on agriculture, and the problem of to-day in Canada is the augmenting of our agricultural output. A publication by the Dominion Agricultural Department, fittingly entitled "Patriotism and Agriculture," contains timely information regarding the possibilities of increasing various lines of production. There is an instructive comparison between the results of flax culture and the returns from the leading crops that make up the present Canadian output. A new and sudden demand for flax arises through the lamentable devastation of Belgium, formerly one of the Empire's leading sources of supply, and also to a greater extent from the shutting out of supplies from Russia. In 1913 Belgium exported to Britain 14,194 tons of flax and 3,811 tons of tow, also spun flax to the value of $6,000,000. Russia in 1913 supplied 81,000 tons of flax, and this export cannot be resumed until the Dardanelles are opened to her trade. The total supply used in Britain in 1913 was 112,000 tons, and the Russian and Belgian shortage combined is estimated at 99,000 tons. This, with a shortage of 5,000 tons of flax and 800 tons of tow in the Irish output, the third most important source of Britain's imports, leaves a new and open market which Canada may help to supply.

Last year the total area devoted to flax in Canada was 1,084,000 acres, a decrease of 468,800 as compared with 1913. Of the total, 868,000 acres were cultivated in Saskatchewan. This crop is grown for the seed, the great bulk of the straw being burned as worthless. Here is an opportunity for the conservation of wealth. On a small scale flax has been grown for fibre for many years along the St. Lawrence, in Quebec, and eastern Ontario. This flax, separated from the straw by crude methods, sold at prices that averaged $201 per English ton during the past four years. The average price for Russian flax was $202. A slight improvement in Canadian methods increased the price to $240. That the price of Irish flax has been $335 and for Belgian flax $405 shows what can be done by improvements in methods of separation. The average acre of flax under ordinary market conditions would yield $45 for fibre if the best modern methods of separation were adopted, and $13 for seed. This return of $58 at the point of export is a contrast to the return of $20 from the average acre of wheat. Taking market conditions into account, it is estimated that the net yield from an acre of wheat, after deducting cost of tillage, harvesting, and marketing, is $7 per acre, and the net yield from uax $14 per acre. The minimum Empire shortage would require 75,000 acres to be cultivated this year. There is here an opening for Canada as a debtor nation to make a big yearly payment to her creditors and for our farmers to make a more profitable use of the areas at their disposal. The question of necessary labour and of the effect on the soil can be fully considered and investigated by those contemplating a change of crop. Canada can grow flax for fibre wherever mixed farming can be made a success.—The Globe.

How We Can Help The Heroic Help-Work of Women in the War

From far away Newfoundland comes the news that the people who are under the charge of Dr. Grenfell, the well known missionary, are assisting the Red Cross in its work of mercy during the present grave national crisis and that recently the poor men and women of the "French Shore" on the northern point of the island held a fair at which more than four hundred dollars were raised. The success of this fair was due to the efforts of Dr. Grenfell who visited the fishermen in the locality where the "catch" had been good and asked them to do their share in providing comforts for the soldiers of the Empire who are willing to give their lives for the freedom of Europe.

From far and near the fishermen came with their wives and children, most of them on dog sleds and among their offerings were simple home-made products, such as dog whips and snow-shoes. Others brought fish, and one man, with that spirit of self-denial so evident at the present time, parted with his watch. The gifts of the women were chiefly drawn rugs with the customary figures of reindeer woven in.

The splendid spirits of self sacrifice shown by these people deserves to be known throughout the length and breadth of the land. Not blessed with an over-abundance of this world's goods they have given generously and shown that their pastor and teacher has not worked for them all these years in vain. The call came to them in far off Newfoundland and Labrador and they answered nobly. It is such a spirit that enables the Red Cross to carry on its work and bring assistance, succor and comfort to thousands who are now in need of every comfort that can be given to them. May the example that these splendid people have shown be the means of stirring others to do their share and help bear the burden that every member of the British empire is to-day called upon to undertake.

From the city of Rouen there comes a striking tale of plucky and prompt action on the part of a British Red Cross nurse. A patient suffering from a shell wound in the left arm had a severe attack of hemorrhage. Nurse Faulkner was in the ward and at once applied compression to the sub-clavicle artery; this she kept up until the surgeon could be brought when the man was chloroformed and the main artery tied. This plucky action saved the man life. There are hundreds of brave women working under the Red Cross Society to-day who can only carry on their work provided the public give generously and with the spirit of self-sacrifice.

As an example of what the people of Canada are doing for the soldiers the following, example is of interest. An old woman, Mrs. de Young by name, aged 102, a resident of Dartmouth, N.S., sent recently to Queen Mary a pair of socks which she had knitted with her own hands. The following reply was received by the old lady: "The lady-in-waiting is commanded by the Queen to thank Mrs. de Young most gratefully for her kind gift for the soldiers which is much valued and appreciated by Her Majesty and who thinks it wonderful to work at her advanced age."

The rich and the poor, the young and the old, are all doing their share in the great work on behalf of the Red Cross Society. As the war proceeds and the casualties necessarily increase, more medical supplies will be needed and the demand for comforts for the troops will be greater than ever. Already there are nearly 33,000 Canadian soldiers in England, and these will very shortly be leaving for France. They will be called upon to undergo great hardships and unless the elements are much kinder than they have been in Flanders for the past two months they will have to put up with the most appalling weather conditions ever experienced in any war.

In a city such as Toronto, where men, live in normal and comfortable conditions a pair of socks may last some weeks. Not so in the trenches in Flanders or on the mud soaked plains of Salisbury. There a pair of socks is considered very excellent if it does not wear out in three days. For the first expeditionary force alone no less than 50,000 pairs of socks are needed every week if the men are to be kept in any kind of comfort. Not only socks are needed but knee caps are wanted badly owing to the necessity of the men having to be in a kneeling posture in the trenches and while on other duty. Shirts both khaki and grey, are also wanted for the troops.

All these articles may be sent to the headquarters of the Canadian Red Cross Society, 77 King Street, East, Toronto, Ontario.

U-21 BACK IN HARBOR.

Kaiser Confers Iron Cross Upon Members of Crew.

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 5—A despatch received here from Hamburg says that Emperor William arrived at Wilhelmshaven yesterday morning. His Majesty inspected the German submarine U-21, going over the vessel personally. He bestowed the decoration of the Iron Cross upon the members of the submarine's crew. U-21 is undergoing repairs at Wilhelmshaven following her recent exploits in the Irish Sea.

The Emperor also inspected the units of the fleet at Wilhelmshaven. The men on the various warships line the decks and cheered his Majesty loudly as he made his appearance.

The town council of Wilhelmshaven last night gave a dinner in honor of the Emperor.

Was Killed in Action in France

Lieut. Nelles, at One Time Attended Lakefield Preparatory School

Special to The Examiner:

Mr. Harton Walker has received a cablegram notifying him of the death of his cousin, Lieut. Norman C. Nelles, a son of Col. Charles M. Nelles, who was with the Northampton Fusiliers at the front. Other than the fact that his regiment went into action on the 20th of November, no particulars are known.

The late Lieutenant, who was a native of Brantford, and a resident of Toronto, left here to join his regiment going to France on his 21st birthday, in London about the end of October. He was a second-year cadet at the Royal Military College, Kingston, and at the outbreak of the war he was granted a commission instead of completing his three-year course. About two years ago he graduated to the R. M.C. from the Trinity College School, at Port Hope. His brother, Lieut. Percy Nelles, is serving on H. M. S. Suffolk, with the South Atlantic fleet. His father left Toronto in command of the Royal Canadian Dragoons with the first Canadian contingent, and is now at Salisbury Plain. Previous to that he was in charge of the garrison at Stanley Barracks.

Lieut. Nelles, when a boy, attended the Lakefield Preparatory School, and many friends in this city and in Lakefield will be sorry to hear of his death.

All Food Contraband

British Government Replies to Berlin's Seizure of Wheat

LONDON, Feb. 5.—Great Britain has decided that, if the American steamer Wilhelmina, now on her way with a cargo of foodstuffs for Germany, is intercepted, her cargo will be submitted to a prize court, so that the new situation arising out of the action of Germany in ordering that all grain and flour shall be placed under control of the Government may be regularized. In a statement issued last night the British Foreign Office says:

"The new German decree makes it evident that all grain and flour is to pass under control of the German Government, and it must, therefore, when imported, be regarded as virtually consigned to the German Government, or to the authorities under their control.

"This creates a novel situation and it is probable that if the destination and cargo of the Wilhelmina are as supposed, the cargo will, if the vessel is intercepted, be submitted to a prize court in order that the new situation created by the German decree may be examined and a decision reached upon it after full consideration.

"There is no question of taking any proceedings against the vessel, and the owners of the vessel will be indemnified for any delay caused to it, and the shippers of the cargo compensated for any loss caused to them by the action of the British authorities.

"The apparent intention, however, of the German Government to sink merchant ships by submarines, without bringing them into port or providing accommodation for their crews, and regardless of the loss of civilian lives and the attempt to effect this even against a hospital ship has raised very seriously the question whether Great Britain should adopt in retaliation more stringent measures against German trade."

FELL ON STREET

High County Constable Geo. Cochrane Victim of Painful Accident

High County Constable George Cochrane fell on the street this morning and injured his hip, necessitating his removal to his home and medical attention. The extent of the injury is not known yet, but it is thought no bones are broken.

Was Crossing Track.

Mr. Cochrane was crossing the street car track at the corner of George and Hunter Street, when he slipped and fell on his left hip. He was unable to rise and some passersby carried him into the Kent Drug Store. He felt better there and did not think it necessary to have medical attention until he got home. His son, Mr. Wm. Cochrane, was summoned from the Quaker Oats Co. plant. P. C. Slade secured a cutter and with Mr. Wm. Cochrane assisted the injured man to his residence, 765 George Street.

Dr. Scott was summoned, but could not respond at once, and had Dr. Morgan make an examination. When Dr. Scott arrived the pain was very great. He could not determine at once if any bones were broken, but does not think there were.

On Way to Court.

Mr. Cochrane was on his way to attend a sitting of the County Police Court, where a Smith man was appearing before Magistrate Langley on a charge of vagrancy. The case was adjourned until Tuesday, pending the recovery of Constable Cochrane.

His many friends join in wishing him a speedy recovery.

Said and Suez, according to despatches received to-day. The Turks are delaying a general advance upon the British positions pending the arrival of the strong Ottoman forces reported coming up in their rear. Preliminary skirmishes continue near El Kantara and at several points farther south. The British who at first minimized the importance of the Turkish movement, are now giving it more consideration. Reinforcements are being sent from Cairo.

MONTREAL, Feb. 5.—Canadian shipping interests do not expect to be materially affected by the German announcement that their ships may be sunk on sight in British waters. The intention of the Germans to destroy British commerce and "starve Britain," is in the opinion of Montreal steamship men only a pronouncement after all—just talk. "We will go ahead as if there were no Germans in the world," said Andrew Allan, and this seemed to be the general opinion among the shipping men.

BERLIN, via wireless, Feb. 5.—The German Admiralty to-day issued new warnings to neutral shipping. Vessels approaching the continental ports were advised to take the track north of Scotland into the North Sea to avoid being struck by mistake by German submarines off the northern and western coasts of France.

"Britain is on the eve of shipping numerous troops and large quantities of war material to France," said the official statement from the Admiralty. "Against these transports we shall proceed with all the means of warfare at our disposal."

The German public received this latest communication from the admiralty with fresh evidences of approval.

OTTAWA, Feb. 5.—Since the Princess Pats went into action shortly after the New Year, 9 men have been killed outright or died of wounds received in trenches or in the charge at the front. One death is reported from cause unknown and one man died in the hospital at Bologne from spinal meningitis—making a total of 11 casualties. It is evident that special attention is being paid to officers by the enemy's sharpshooters. The Canadian troops, including those at the front and those at Salisbury, have suffered a death total of 80. Considering that the troops, comprising nearly 35,000 men, have now been recruited for six months, the proportion of deaths is considered to be very small.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—"The United States must become the ocean's ruler, supplanting Great Britain," Representative Hobson declared in the House to-day, arguing for more battleships. "We must have a navy bigger than England's and Japan's combined," he insisted. "Instead of Great Britain's two-power policy it must hereafter be an American two-power policy." Hobson also asserted that America must protect China from exploitation by Japan.

LONDON, Feb. 5.—The allies' aviators have bombarded Zeebrugge, the German submarine and Zeppelin base, according to a Rotterdam despatch received this morning. The extent of the damage done is not stated.

MR. LANGLEY MAKES REPLY

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Will you kindly allow me to reply to Paul Penman in last evening's issue?

I can show him what the Peterborough Branch of the Industrial Association has done in 14 years—secured work for the registered applicants for employment, which has produced 4,000 dollars by honest labour.

H. V. Scully, Esq., of the Chief Office in Toronto, testifies that the Peterborough Branch has achieved greater results than any other city in the Province of Ontario. The "splendid results of other cities" are a dismal failure behind the showing of this City. We are not below, but at the very top of the City, and "I can prove it" by similar documentation.

So Paul Penman, don't kick about employing the unemployed, as many world problems, besides these are the very methods which have proved successful and adopted by up-to-date world-beaters.

EDWARD LANGLEY,
Sec. of the Peterborough Labour Bureau.

Few German Waiters Released.

LONDON, Feb. 5. — The Home Secretary, Reginald McKenna, put an end yesterday to an agitation which has been conducted by certain London newspapers, because, they alleged, thousands of German waiters who had been interned as alien enemies were released recently and were returning to work in London hotels. Mr McKenna said in the House of Commons that the actual number released in January was three. In the last four months thirty were released after a careful investigation of their records.

To Fight For Depositors.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Feb. 5. — In the Legislature yesterday afternoon, Attorney-General Bowser, speaking of the Dominion Trust failure, said the Government had decided to employ E. P. Davis, K.C., of Vancouver, as a special counsel for depositors, and it believed the latter could be reinstated in their position amongst the general creditors of the company. Many depositors are now without funds and in order to assist their position the Government will, if necessary, said Mr. Bowser, fight the case to the Privy Council.

Turk Torpedo Boats Sunk.

ATHENS, Feb. 5. — Despatches from Mitylene says that Turkish torpedo boats made a sortie from the Dardanelles to attack the Anglo-French fleet bombarding the forts. Two of the Turkish ships were sunk and a third badly damaged. The rest gained the protection of the forts.

ALLIED FORCES DRIVE GERMANS FROM TRENCHES

Long-Range Artillery Strengthens the French Position at Critical Points Near Soissons—Allies' Advance at Albert Will Force More Retreats on Part of Enemy

PARIS, Feb. 5.—French successes in the neighborhood of Albert, south of La Bassee and Armentieres, were recorded yesterday. First the French artillery destroyed a number of German blockhouses and next the infantry captured about 300 yards of the enemy's trenches, near Heburterne, north of Albert. The success thus gained permitted the guns to be pushed forward sufficiently to reach German convoys and assembling points and create big execution.

This development will have the effect of forcing the Germans to withdraw from their advanced positions along this section to take up new lines and be constantly exposed to a heavy fire all the time this operation is being carried on.

Long-range artillery has also been put in place by the French in the Aisne Valley, and they are now able to dominate the German guns. Efficient marksmanship put a number of batteries out of action, blew up caissons with their ammunition, and dispersed parties of men engaged in construction work Wednesday. German aeroplanes which attempted to do some scouting were fired at so accurately that they had to take to ignominious flight.

Verdun was also the scene of the destruction of a German aeroplane, which was brought down by gun fire, and the aviators taken prisoners.

In Belgium, heavy artillery fire has thundered along the lines. North of Arras, along the Lys, and to the north of Nieuport, the duel of big guns has been terrific.

Three infantry attacks on the French trenches in the vicinity of Perthes were made by about one thousand men at each point. French artillery fire dispersed the first two assaults, and although a mine explosion forced the French to fall back north of Massiges, the lost ground was recovered in a counter-offensive, and new trenches were dug a few yards from the old ones, which had been rendered incapable of occupation.

The afternoon report said:

"To the north of the Lys there was in the vicinity of Nieuport a particularly spirited artillery engagement.

"At Notre Dame de Lorette, to the southwest of Lens, a determined German attack the morning of Feb. 3 was driven back by the fire of our artillery. The French guns also put an end to a bombardment of the road between Arras and Bethune.

"In the region of Albert and Dompierre-en-Santerre we destroyed several blockhouses. Throughout the entire Aisne valley there was on Feb. 3 an artillery engagement in which the advantage rested with us.

"The three attacks reported Wednesday night against our trenches in the vicinity of Perthes, Mesnil-les-Hurlus and Massiges were carried out by forces of the enemy which equalled a battalion (1,000) men at each point. The first two attacks were completely dispelled by the fire of our artillery. The third, which took place north of Massiges, took advantage of a mine explosion to make headway. Later we captured these locations. We built new trenches at a few yards distant from those which had been blown up by the Germans and which had become untenable.

"Feb. 3 passed quietly in the Argonne.

"In the Woevre district and in the valley of the Seille, we were successful in some outpost encounters, and we dispersed certain of the enemy."

VON HINDENBURG HURLS HIS TROOPS AT RUSSIAN CENTRE

Perils of Defeat on North and South Ends of Long Eastern Front Compel German General to Get Through Russian Centre at Warsaw

PETROGRAD, Feb. 5.—A series of battles, with full strength on both sides, is developing along the entire front. Their swaying fortunes are immediately registered in the cockpit around the junction of the Bzura and Rawka rivers, in front of Warsaw, where the most hardened men of the opposing armies in central Poland are thrown within bayonet-thrust of each other. The measure of increasing danger to the Germans in north Poland and the elaborate Austro-German combination in the eastern Carpathians are marked by the rapidly-growing fury of Von Hindenburg's attempt to drive a wedge through centre Russia to a stationary position between the Bolimoki and the Bzura.

The cost of this desperate plan is appalling; but it is the only alternative left. About 50,000 of their best infantry, which the backing of an incredible mass of artillery, were sent by the Germans into a narrow front among the shattered farms around Humin. All day Tuesday was a continuous succession of charges, without the gain of a foothold of the way into Russian entrenched line. No tactical manoeuvring was attempted. There were only headlong rushes, the men bending over their bayonets.

More than half of them were shot down before reaching within 50 yards of the frozen ditches where the Russians lay waiting, and then sprang on the Germans with bayonets and butt ends of rifles. In the short, silent, death grapple the issue was decided, and the surviving Germans were sent reeling back underground.

To cover this supreme sacrifice of Mackensen's best troops, is the necessity of an Austrian compact. Von Hindenburg has no railway system over which an army can be sent round to be in time to convert the Austrian column in the Carpathians into a victorious army. He must consequently, by gigantic frontal assaults on the heart of the Russian position in Poland, try to compel his enemy to bring up substantial forces from the Galician side of the Carpathians and so relieve the Austrians.

He has an even more immediate motive for hammering at the Russian centre. His army in North Poland is in a worse position than any purely German force in the eastern theatre of war. The Austrians already confess themselves unequal to their task. German reserves already have been brought up chiefly by railway from Munkacs, in Hungary, and distributed among the Austrian columns to try to prevent them from yielding. This transference of the German contingent in Hungary was readily made when the Austrians saw the last hope of attacking Servia extinguished by the flooding of the Danube and Save to an extent that precludes the idea of a campaign for several weeks. The Austrians maintain their defence south of the Uzhok Pass, while the projected offensive, with principal German supports east of the Beskid Mountains has been repulsed.

In the vicinity of Tilsit and southward of the Masurian Lake region in East Prussia and on the right bank of the Vistula between Plotsk Dobrzyzin and Lipno, daily skirmishes are reported.

This fighting is chiefly between cavalry and artillery and each side apparently is only intent on discovering the weakness of the other's line, or preventing flanking attempts.

It is announced that the Russian troops on Feb. 3 occupied Vollachidlowska (Wola Szydlowiecka) to the east of Bolimow, Poland.

Emperor Nicholas left Tsarskoe Selo yesterday for the front. He was accompanied as far as the station by the Empress Alexandra and his daughters.

ELLIOT'S

Will Seize Food For Germany

First Cargo of This to Be Taken Over Will Be That of the American Ship "Wilhelmina"

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, Feb. 5.—The action of the German Government in seizing and administering all the grain and flour supplies of the Empire has given Great Britain legal warrant for declaring all such supplies contraband when destined for Germany. Acting on this theory, the cargo of the American ship Wilhelmina will be seized and sent to a Prize Court for adjudication. The following official announcement on the subject was issued to-night by the Press Bureau:

"From the German decree it is evident that all grain and flour pass under the control of the German Government, and must, therefore, when imported, be regarded as virtually consigned to them or to authorities under their control. This creates a novel situation.

Depends on Destination.

"It is probable that if the destination of the cargo of the Wilhelmina is for Germany the cargo will, if the vessel is intercepted, be submitted to a Prize Court in order that the situation created by the German decree may be examined and a decision reached after due consideration.

"There is no question of taking any proceedings against the vessel. The owners of the vessel will be indemnified for any delay and the shippers of the cargo will be compensated for any loss caused to them by the action of the British authorities.

"There is no truth in a statement made in the press that it has been decided that other such consignment vessels should be seized, and without compensation to neutrals. No decision has yet been taken to depart from the previously existing rules and practice.

Consider Neutral Ships.

"It is apparent that it is the intention of the German Government to sink merchant ships by submarines, not bringing them to port, not providing accommodation for the crews, and regardless of the loss of civilian lives; and the attempt to effect this even against a hospital ship raises the question of whether Great Britain shall adopt relatively more stringent measures against German trade. It is recognized that when any such decision is reached care must be taken not to inflict loss upon neutral ships which sailed before warning had been given and the decision announced."

Peterboro's Sewage Disposal Scheme

Will Meet the Requirements of the Commission Who Seek Power to Order the Installation of Disposal Plants

TORONTO, Feb. 5—Either by direct legislation or by the widening of the jurisdiction of the Joint International Commission on Waterways to authorize it to order action, every municipality discharging sewage into the Great Lakes and connecting rivers will, in the next few years, be compelled to remove that menace to public health.

This, it is understood, is the opinion concurred in by the members of the commission, who have wound up a two-days' session in Toronto. With the reports of the engineers before them revealing the extent to which the discharge of untreated sewage has been polluting boundary waters, the commission has been at work trying to arrive, not at a solution of the problem—the solution, the prohibition of untreated sewage discharges, was recognized from the first—but at the most effective means of applying it. The commissioners are ready to recommend that every municipality dumping sewage into boundary lakes or rivers, or waterways flowing into them, be compelled to establish plants to treat or dispose of sewage discharges. The engineers are now engaged in studying the requirements of individual municipalities, in order to provide a basis for action.

Just how the municipalities will be required to handle their sewage problems has yet to be decided. The commission may content itself with recommendations to the Governments interested, and leave to them the task of ordering disposal or treatment plants, or, as was intimated in the exchange of opinions by Hon. Mr. Hearst and the commissioners on Wednesday the powers of the commission may be extended by the United States and Canadian Governments to allow them to order municipal action.

The commission is also taking up the question of protecting the water from pollution from vessels. A similar plan was adopted by the Ontario health authorities for the Muskoka Lakes and Kawartha Lakes, two or three years ago, with excellent results.

The commissioners commented favourably upon the Toronto sewage disposal plant, stating that Toronto had gone much further than was contemplated as a general regulation. Before leaving Toronto the members visited provincial laboratory, and inspected the equipment for testing water for pollution.

The Commission also dealt with the question of protecting some of the smaller lakes and rivers such as Stoney Lake and the Otonabee River. Peterborough is preparing to meet the latter difficulty by expending over one hundred thousand dollars in the construction of a sewerage disposal plant.

Cases In The Division Court

To-day's Session Only Lasted a Few Minutes

To-day was Division Court day, the day upon which claims ranging from one dollar to one hundred dollars are adjudicated upon by His Honour Judge Huycke. To-day's session was one of the smallest that has been recorded in months, lasting only a few minutes. Judgment was given for the plaintiff in the case of George Sooney versus James McWilliams, for nine dollars and fifty cents. One or two minor cases will be heard this afternoon and will be followed on Monday by a jury sittings if circumstances warrant.

The Fighting Qualities of the Princess "Pats" Impressed Tommies

Men Behaved Nobly Under Galling Fire-Canadians Highly Praised by Commanding Officers

LONDON, Feb. 5.—Stirring stories of how Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry went into action and of how gallantly the men behaved under fire are told in private letters received here from officers of the regiment. The Princess Pats have been subjected to more criticism than any other Canadian unit, but the fact remains that they have lived up to the name they have been given, and their baptism of fire brought honour to the regiment and to the Dominion of Canada.

It is unreasonable to credit the Patricias with a wonderful achievement, such as a leading London morning paper did by publishing a story of how the Canadians dislodged the enemy from a long line of trenches and drove them back a mile. But still they behaved themselves in a way that deserves unbounded praise. There was nothing particularly sensational about the way they went into action. It was on the sixth of January, three weeks after they left camp at Winchester. From Southampton they sailed to Havre, and from there were gradually worked up to the firing line.

For a week the men had been billeted in a village some miles behind the line, but within the sound of the firing. They were impatient to "do their bit," and when the order came they were as happy as school boys. It was on a dark night that they took their places in the trenches, and every man was keyed up to a high pitch as they carefully approached their position, taking advantage of every bit of cover. Finally they were in the ditches up to their knees, and in some places up to their waists in mud and water. The Germans maintained a desultory artillery fire throughout the night. The British batteries answered. The darkness was filled with the hiss and crash of shells, with the whine of bullets and the occasional gasp of a wounded or dying soldier. The British Tommies, hardened to the ordeal, slept or stood on guard as required, but there was no sleep for the Patricias on that night of all nights. They were far too excited.

With the first lightening of the darkness in the east, the bombardment of the night was increased a hundredfold. The experience of the first few hours seemed as nothing. One man said it was a hell in itself. Shells crashed and sang all around and there was a hail of rifle bullets from the opposite trenches. It was then that the real test of the Canadian regiment came. There were those who thought the Patricias would flinch, but they stood up under it in a way that won the admiration of their English comrades.

Heroic Conduct.

For ninety-six long hours the Princess Pats stuck to their posts. In that time one officer and three men laid down their lives for their country. The officer was Captain D. O. C. Newton, M.V.O., late A.D.C. to the Duke of Connaught. He was shot through the stomach on the last day the regiment was in the trenches and died a few hours later. Private George Bellinger, an Ottawa man, was shot through the heart and died instantly. The bullet that killed him first wounded Sergeant-Major Brierley, of St. Chair avenue, Toronto, in the nose. Corporal Henry Fry, also of Toronto, was one of the heroes of the day. He attempted to get back to bring up a fresh supply of rations but before he reached cover a German bullet struck him in the abdomen, inflicting a fatal wound. The name of the other man had not been given out at the time of this writing. Twelve members of the regiment were wounded.

THE PROVINCE WILL BE DIVIDED INTO FIVE DISTRICTS

Provincial Secretary Hanna to Introduce Drastic Liquor License Reform in Legislature—Peterboro' Commissioners Will Be Dispensed With—New Board to Consist of Five Men

At the coming session of the Ontario Legislature the Hon. W. J. Hanna, Provincial Secretary, will, on behalf of the Government, introduce legislation abolishing the present system of liquor license administration and instituting in its stead a commission of at least five men. This commission will take charge of the license branch of the Provincial Secretary's Department and have absolute control over it, in much the same manner as the Workmen's Compensation Board administers the Workmen's Compensation Act.

The bill which will be introduced by Mr. Hanna will provide for the dividing of the Province of Ontario into at least six districts. The local license commissioners in the many cities, towns and municipalities of the province will be abolished and the commission have absolute control. The licenses for each district will be issued on a different date, so that the commission can have ample time to hold court at the various districts and deal with licenses.

Government in Favour.

It is learned that Mr. Hanna has been working on the scheme for some years and that in view of the needs of advanced legislation he submitted the proposal of the Government. The majority of the members were in hearty accord with the idea, and it was practically decided to submit the bill at the coming session.

On the License Commission the Provincial Secretary will see that only the names of men who are beyond reproach receive consideration. The usual commission consists of three men, but in this case the Government is of the opinion that more than that number are required.

Have Charge of Licenses.

The commission will work on the same principle as the railway commission. Instead of allowing the hotel licenses of a certain municipality to be considered by three local commissioners, who meet in some nook where the general public cannot penetrate, the Provincial License Commission will hold court in the principal place of each district. On the date set for the granting of licenses for that district, the hotel men will be compelled to come before the court and openly apply for a renewal of their privileges. In this way the general public will be given an opportunity of voicing any objection to the granting of a renewal, and the board will be able to deal with the case impartially.

Wide Powers.

In the new act the commission will be given very wide powers, but no charge will be made on the municipalities for the administration of the act. At the present time part of each license fee collected by a municipality goes to the Government, and no extra charge will be levied. The Government will pay the commissioners. The object of the appointment of such a commission is to remove the liquor license question from the scope of political attack.

From a reliable source it is learned that the Hon. W. J. Hanna has advocated the commission reform for at least five years. The Hearst Government now thinks the time has arrived for the introduction of the scheme.

Evils Pointed Out.

About fourteen hundred hotels in the province are now governed by local commissioners. Three residents of each district are appointed a commission to manage the hotel licenses of that district. It is no secret that the evils of this form of administration have been impressed on Mr. Hanna from time to time, and that he has pointed out to the Government the necessity of immediate reform.

The present license department will probably be abolished and its officers placed under the jurisdiction of the commission. During the past week the Government has been devoting considerable time to the question, and it is understood that Mr. Hanna's scheme has been practically accepted in its entirety.

The Peterborough commissioners who will be dispensed with in event of the enactment of the aforesaid mentioned legislation, are M. A. Morrison, chairman, James Kendry, and Richard Sheehy.

Annual Meeting of Knox Church Held

The annual meeting of Knox Presbyterian Church was held on Wednesday evening in the Lecture Hall, adjoining the church. There was a large and enthusiastic gathering of members, who listened with interest to the very encouraging reports in connection with the church and its different organizations.

Every branch of the church is in a very flourishing condition, and there is great promise for the work in the ensuing year.

Beware of Trouble

It is the wisest thing you can do to have your watch examined at this time of the year.

The cold weather is apt to harden the oil—that creates the engineering and adhesive action.

A hot chicken pie supper was given on Monday evening in the Methodist Church by the Ladies' Aid. Unfortunately, a high wind and a furious snow storm placed the roads in such a condition that very few from the country were able to attend, and consequently the proceeds were not so great as had been expected. However, with what was taken at the door, and subscriptions given in place of baking, there were $100.45 realized.

On account of the number of cakes, pies, etc., which were left over, it was decided to have a social on Tuesday evening, but as the storm had in no way abated, but in fact, had become worse, it was postponed, until Wednesday evening.

The supper on Monday evening was followed by a programme of music by the choir, and very excellent addresses by Rev. Noble, of the Anglican Church; Rev. Wolland, of the Presbyterian Church, and Rev. W. A. Buchanan, of Millbrook, a former pastor, on this circuit.

Mrs. McDowell left on Wednesday to visit at her home in Michigan.

The regular quarterly service will be held on Sunday in the Methodist Church.

The preparatory service of the Presbyterian Church was held on Wednesday evening.

A GRAPHIC STORY OF THE FALKLAND ISLAND NAVAL BATTLE
500 KILLED ON ONE SHIP

Germans Intended to Seize Islands for a Base: When They Discovered the British They Ran for Life—"Invincible" Suffered Damage; Deck Was Like a Pepper Box—Ship Got Too Hot to Live In.

Special to The Examiner:

The following letter contains a detailed description of the Battle of the Falkland Islands. It was written by Lieut. A. P. MacMullen on H. M. S. "Invincible," Admiral Sturdee's flagship, and addressed to his father, Mr A. R. MacMullen, Dixie, Ont.:

H.M.S. Invincible, Dec. 11, 1914.

We had a nice trip out to the Falkland Islands, and arrived there 27 days after leaving Plymouth.

We arrived on the 7th inst., and some of us went ashore that day, as we were coaling next day, when another ship had finished. The inhabitants are very nice people, all English or Scotch, and mostly engaged in sheep-farming. They were much afraid that the Germans would pop in, but the Canopus had fortified the place.

Next morning we started coaling at six o'clock. There were the Invincible, Inflexible, Carnarvon, Kent, Cornwall, Bristol, Glasgow, and the armed P. and O. liner, Macedonia in harbour.

At 8.30, whilst at breakfast, the Canopus' shore station reported a four-funneled cruiser in sight. We got orders to raise steam for full speed at once.

We were under way, full speed, by 9.15, which was a wonderful bit of work, as all the boilers were being cleaned except four, and we were at four hours' notice. Oil fuel did it! and the boilers stood it.

Enemy Went to Prayers.

The enemy consisted of the Scharnhorst, Gneisenau, Leipzig, Nurnberg, and Dresden, with three transports or colliers, and intended, the prisoners say, to take the Islands and use them as a base.

When they saw four tripod masts they got a bit of a shock, but thought they were dummies at first; then, that they were Japanese (as some Japanese light ships have tripods), but when they discovered we were British (one of their officers told us), they went off praying.

When outside, the Bristol and Macedonia went after the three merchantmen that captured them, the others ran after the Germans.

We had not much coal on board, which favoured us, as we were of lighter draught and, therefore, managed to knock 27 knots out of her—not so bad for a 25-knot ship.

We got within range, 15,000 yards, about 1.60 p.m. We first fired a few rounds at the Nurnberg and hit her stern, I believe, after which we left the three smaller ones to our lighter ships, and then with the Inflexible engaged the Gneisenau and Scharnhorst, opening fire at about seven sea miles and not till the end getting closer than six miles.

Took Enemy's Fire for Five Hours.

We, being the Flagship, came in for the greater part of both ships' fire for five hours. Although their gunnery was marvellous we did not give them much chance, as we had the advantage of speed and chose the range.

Ships Went Down.

The Scharnhorst sank about 4 p.m., but we could not stop to pick up the survivors as the Gneisenau was still in action.

At about six o'clock p.m., however, the Gneisenau sank, and we steamed to the spot.

I think there must have been about and shall never forget the sight. The water was thick with men and wreckage all around us, and the wailing noise was terrible.

We lowered all the boats that would float and threw lines to others, but they were all absolutely numb, although only fifteen minutes in the water (temperature of water 38 degrees).

We managed to save over 100, but 20 died from shock. In all, about 180 were picked up by our ships from the Gneisenau's crew.

The Glasgow had the consolation of sinking the Leipzig, the Kent sank the Nurnberg The Dresden got away, but whether damaged or not we don't know yet.

800 Killed on Ship Before she Sank.

The German Doctor on the Gneisenau (we have seven officers aboard), told us that 600 had been killed before she sank, and that our shells tore the whole side and upper deck away when they burst and the ship was so hot that they could not stand on her, so they opened a torpedo tube to sink her more quickly at the end.

I tink there must have been about 1,500 rounds of 8-inch fired at this ship alone, but although their shooting was so fine, their shells were falling at an angle of 45, so not many hit us.

Invincible's Deck Like a Pepper-Box.

I should think we were hit about thirty times above armour, and although nothing vital was hit, we were a good deal damaged about the upper works. The ward room was completely wrecked and an enormous hole in the deck. It is like a pepper pot, all the bulkheads riddled by fragments of shell.

The more one sees, the greater marvel it is that there is not a single casualty in this ship, except the Commander whose foot is very slightly damaged. In all about 12 killed in the fleet and not many more wounded.

One of our 4-inch guns, which was not manned, was shot right in two.

Fires were promptly dealt with by the stokers' fire brigade. Owing to the great range, none of their shells pierced our armour and only just made a mark on it. I was in the boiler room all the time, and the men worked splendidly although we heard shell hitting side of bunkers.

South American British Breathe Freely Again.

It really is astonishing how thankful the British in South America are, and how good they were to us. They have not had a good time since the Good Hope action. We got a fine lot of New York Heralds from a liner we searched the other night. The various accounts of our action were very diverting and mostly inaccurate.

Tragic Death Of Caretaker

Died Alone in His Own Home—Had No Friends

MANILLA, Feb. 5.—The village was shocked to learn of the sudden death of an old citizen in the person of Mr. Robert Simpson.

Mr. Simpson has been caretaker of the school for a number of years. When some of the first pupils arrived at the school they found the door locked and no fire on. One of the pupils went to the caretaker's house and finding the door locked, called the neighbours. The door was forced, and Mr. Simpson was found lying dead just inside the door. He was all dressed to go to the school, and had just taken in some coal when he was overcome.

Mr. Simpson has lived here for a great many years, coming here from Ireland when a young man. Nobody knows his exact age, and he has no friends. He was a member of the Church of England, but was not an active member. He was a quiet, inoffensive man, of a quiet disposition and liked by everybody.

Close Games In Church League

Ten Minutes' Overtime Necessary to Decide Between Murray Street and St. Andrew's

There were three fast games at Brock Street rink last night in the Senior Church Hockey League, St. Luke's, George Streets and Murray Streets being returned winners.

In the first game St. Luke's defeated St. Paul's 4 to 1 in a very fair game.

George Street defeated St. John's 2 to 1 in the second fixture. As the score indicates, the teams were fairly evenly matched. The checking was very close and a little roughness was sandwiched in with some of the play.

The last game was the best of the evening. Murray Street Baptists and St. Andrew's Presbyterians battled ten minutes overtime, finishing in a 1 to 1 tie, the Baptists doing the trick.

The half time score was 1 to 0 in favour of the Baptists, and before the end of the second period the Presbyterians evened up.

Harold Morrow refereed all three contests.

St. Luke's Church League team will play Warsawe at Brock Street Rink, between 7 and 8 o'clock. The following will represent St. Luke's:
Goal—J. Butcher.
Defence—Hagerman and Regan.
Rover—Carter.
Centre—Butcher.
Right wing—Stewart.

HEAVY FINES WERE IMPOSED

HAVELOCK, Feb. 5.—Ernest Brunton, of Seymour, realizes that it does not pay to get drunk in a local option municipality. For that offence he was fined $20 and costs by the local magistrates on information laid by License Inspector Williams. Brunton pleaded guilty.

On Friday afternoon Wm. Leng, of town, was charged by a C. P. R. Constable under the Railway Act, with supplying liquor to a C. P. R. employee, while the latter was on duty. Mr. Leng pleaded guilty to giving the employee a drink and was fined $7.00 and costs. The aftermath was a charge against the employee, Mr. C. Graham, of being drunk in a local option municipality, laid by License Inspector Williams. Mr. Graham pleaded guilty and was fined $10 and costs.

CURLING

the way, tied up on the tenth, and was left of the closest of the bonspiel. At that it had nothing on the Morrow—Carley clash.

Robert Neill's rink went through four games in the Consolation, yesterday, winding up with the veteran, Flavelle. Neill had the widest margin of the bonspiel, winning by 25—8, from McCallum of Fenelon Falls.

Andy Webb, who played first stone for Neill, had a ding-dong battle with M. H. Sisson, Mr. Flavelle's lead. Both rinks were evenly matched. Jack Wiley and W. McCracken completed Neill's rink.

George Morrow's loss to Carley of Lindsay was by a single point. It was a nice game all the way, with the Lindsay rink pulling themselves out with six shots on the last two ends.

Skip Ed. Hinds of Orillia is a good curler as he was a defence player on the Orillia lacrosse team, some years ago.

With his very last stone Sam Sharpe saved himself from a "duck-egg" at the hands of the Hinds' boys. He went down before Farwell in the semi-finals of the primaries and dropped back to the Consolation. He was blanked for eleven ends and Hinds lay shot well guarded. Sam's last stone went straight through a narrow port, removed the Hinds' stone and lay two up. "I thought they had me Chicagoed" said Sam who went down smiling and tickled with the sport he had enjoyed. He left last night for Ottawa to take up the more serious business in the House.

BILLY CARLEY DEFEATED.

Carley's rink went down before DeLaney, of Cobourg, this afternoon, but not without the old fighting spirit that carried him so far. He made another strong finish, but DeLaney had built up a neat defence and the raise seeded to tie up the game went wide of a DeLaney stone by several inches. It was a hard game to lose. The score was as follows:

DeLaney	10003101001G—11
Carley	01010020130?— 9

HOCKEY

Central School defeated Queen Mary School last night in a fast, clean game of hockey. Mahood, the Central goal-tender, stopped a number of hot ones. Cherrett and Frost were the fastest men on the ice. Soden and Williamson, for Queen Mary, were also fast.

The line-up:

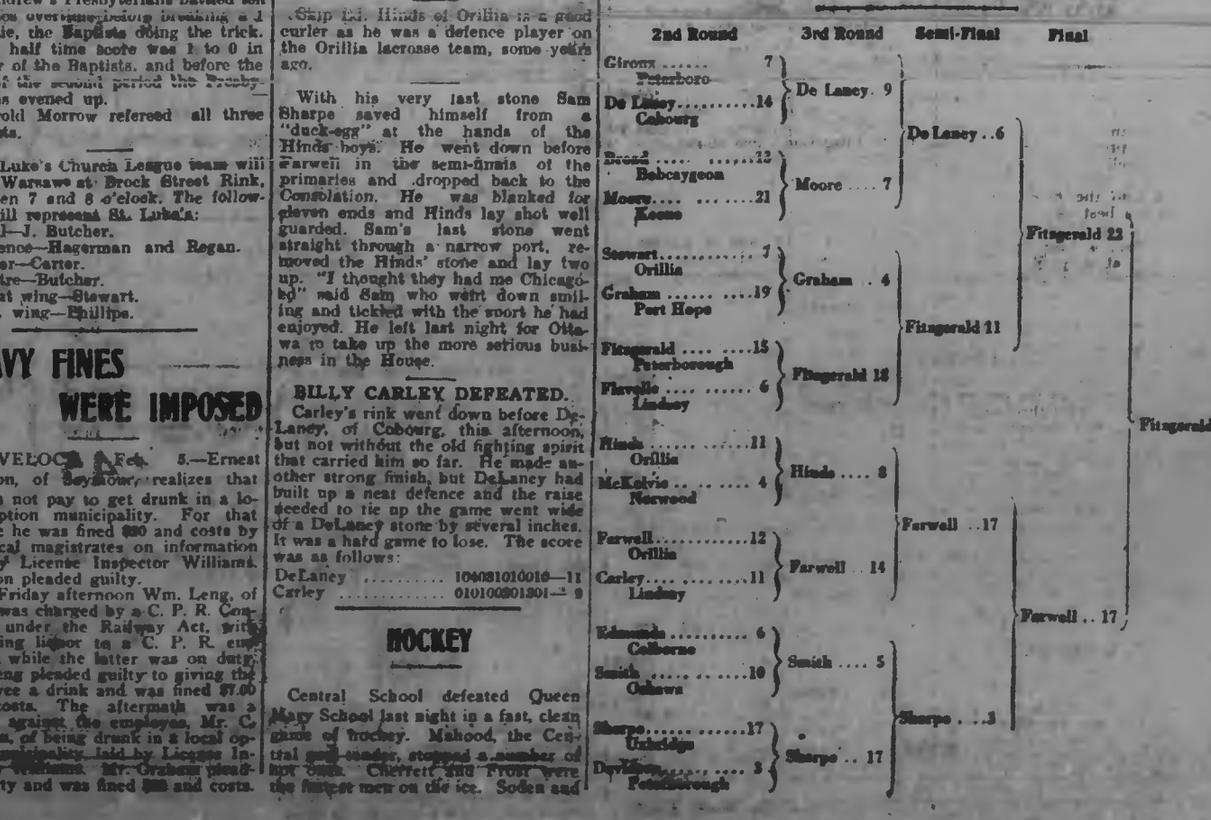
Last night the Mark Street team defeated St John's in a fast game in the Junior Church League, by 8—3. The stars for St. John's were Pidgeon (goal-keeper), and Heard and Soward, while McIntyre, Lipsett and Gillespie played well for Mark street. Mr. George Bain refereed. The teams:

Mark Street — Goal, Nellist; right defence, Lipsett; left defence, McIntyre; rover, Gillespie; centre, Whitehouse; right wing, Hagerman; left wing, Cook.

St. John's—Goal, Pidgeon; right defence, Soward; left defence, Eccobechon; rover, Heard; centre, Parks; right wing, Common; left wing, Flowers.

PRIMARY SERIES FOR GRAND CHALLENGE CUP
AND FIRST HONOURS AT BONSPIEL



THE WORLD OF SPORT

PICTON ARE WINNERS OF THE DISTRICT

Surprised Themselves and the Petes Last Night in the Return Game at Picton by Winning 6 to 1, Giving Them the Round by One Goal.

Peterborough's championship hopes faded into thin air last night at Picton when Walter Knox's Pirates tucked the Petes away with a 6—1 score, giving Picton the round by the narrow margin of one goal. The result was a big surprise, not only in Peterborough, but also in Picton, where the canning town fans conceded their pets but a very faint chance of overcoming the Petes' lead of four goals. There are no alibis possible. Picton played far the better hockey last night and deserved to win by an even larger margin than the figures show. Bad as the Petes were in the first two periods against Picton here, they were worse last night and there was no last period rally, either.

The first period saw the score 1—1, with the goal in each case disputed and a change made in goal umpires. Picton took the lead a minute after play commenced in the second period and a moment before the session ended found the nets again. That left it 3 to 1, and the Petes were still hopeful of coming to life and holding their lead in the last period. They failed to show the looked for improvement, however, and Picton quickly tied up the score on the round. With everything even for the district, the teams battled along until with four minutes to play Picton scored their sixth goal, and it was good-night for the blue and white.

At no stage did the Petes get going. They failed individually, and as a team, to make any headway and were not dangerous more than half a dozen times. Picton checked them in grand style, and the Petes seemed hopelessly at sea. There is no use in going into details—the team played bad hockey and Picton, who looked better than in their last game here, won easily, and are entitled to the honours on the play last night. They shot wickedly from all angles, backed each up well, and were always tearing in on the nets.

Janes gave a fine exhibition in the nets or the score would have been worse. He blocked a host of shots several times, with the yellow and black outfit in on top of him, while several of the shots that beat him were through a tangle of players and sticks and he never had a chance to handle them.

The Petes had another new line-up. Ray Rose was substituted for Knapman on right wing, because it was thought the latter was too light for a small rink. The former junior centre, who is a left hand shot, tried hard, but he was handicapped considerably by being on his wrong wing.

For Picton, Scott in the nets, Hubbs, the elongated defence man, and Burns and Hudgins, the two wings, were the stars. Scott easily took care of the Petes' shots, while Hubbs' rushing and shooting were features.

A new referee in the person of Jacobi of Beaverton, handled the bell and made a pretty fair job of it. A big crowd saw the battle, many coming in from Trenton, Belleville and other points for the game. The teams were:

Picton		Peterborough
Scott	Goal	Janes
Hubbs Hefferman	Defence	Hunter Pethick
R. Burns	Rover	Haipin
Taft	Centre	Park
Hudgins	Right Wing	Rose
B. Burns	Left wing	Kelly

There was little doing in the scoring line in the first period. Picton had the better of the going and although they were held out pretty well, they kept Janes busy warding off their accurate shots from outside. Finally after a scrimmage around the Peterborough nets, the Picton goalkeeper raised his hand. The Petes complained that the puck had slid under the nets from the side, but the goal was allowed. It was found that the nets could be raised up from the bottom and the Petes refused to go on until they were fixed. Both teams left the ice and the game was held up fifteen minutes until first aid methods had been applied to the nets. Just before the period ended the Petes got their only goal, Rose scoring on a nice shot. Picton disputed the goal, but it was counted.

Early in the second period, with Rose on the fence for chopping, Picton took the lead. Taft swept in while Hunter was trying to figure which way to head with the puck, and scored. There was nothing more doing until the last minute of the period, when Hubbs scored on a combination rush.

In the last period, Hubbs opened the ball by beating Janes with a side shot in one minute. That made it 4—1, and two minutes after B. Burns scored on a long shot. The Pirates pressed vigorously and Janes was kept busy. Four minutes before the end of the game, Hudgins took the rubber away from Halpin when he tried to carry it out from the corner and slammed the winning goal past Janes.

J. E. A. FITZGERALD'S RINK WON FIRST HONOURS OF BONSPIEL

Defeated Farwell of Orillia Last Night, the Local Skip Distinguishing Himself---Won Grand Challenge Cup and Each Man of the Rink Gets Pair of Curling Stones --Presentation of Prizes Last Night.

PRIMARY FINALS.

Orillia.	Peterborough.
W. Rollins	A. Archibald
Dr Carson	R. Best
Dr. J. M. Marvie	H. Foote
Ed. S. Farwell, Skip—17	J. E. A. Fitzgerald Skip—22

Score by ends—

Fitzgerald ..... 10100020122020—22

Farwell ..... 00010100100000—17

The curling final in the primary round was a grand finish to a bonspiel which has been unanimously declared an unqualified success. Round after round furnished close scores and feature shots, but to all of these the final, which was scheduled 16 ends, proved a lively climax. Skip E. Farwell of Orillia made short work of Sam. Sharpe in semi-finals, and went into the finals recognized as one of the best skips in the play. He and J. E. A. Fitzgerald staged a final that held a large gallery until the last shot at midnight. The Orillia rink opened up a wide margin, getting five on the second end and four on the fifth. On the sixth Fitzgerald was down nine. He hung on, however, and throughout displayed what is generally termed a nerve that showed best in the tightest pinches. He closed up the gap by getting eight on his next three ends, tied up the game in the eleventh, and was two up on the 12th. Farwell showed his class by coming right back for five on the next two ends and it seemed to be all over but the cheering, only two ends remaining, and the visitors believed to have the edge. Once more Fitzgerald came from behind and, with a five-end completely changed the situation. A perfect running shot through a difficult opening removed the Orillia shot and left "Fitz." five up. The thrills of the game followed in unbroken succession For instance, Farwell's draw shot was a perfect stone that cleared the guards and moved into the inner rings just when it appeared that Fitzgerald had an end for three or four. And "Fitz." showed his stuff right there with a fast shot, that while not impossible, had to be right in a grove, for the stones in front lay with a mighty narrow space to pass through to the rings. Farwell remarked afterwards that he did not think the shot would be made.

Farwell was game and even on the last end made a strong effort, but stones that appeared to be swinging into Fitzgerald's two stones, near the button, just touched a guard, and went wide. The little Orillia player "checked back," but his shots went narrow. He put up a fine game all the way, played steadily, consistently and carefully, and on all sides received well-deserved compliments upon the work of himself and his rink.

Mr. Fitzgerald and his rink had a difficult task from the preliminary round, and his path was strewn with the remains of splendid rinks. He has seldom displayed better curling than his best work in the present bonspiel. In the final, it was the gameness or determination of the local rink that flashed throughout. They kept on coming from behind, and refused to be downhearted, even when the score was wide. The Skip made the crucial shot in a pinch. That's the white heat test in any athletic contest.

Vice-Skip Harry Foote played a strong game throughout and lent material assistance in deciding the demands of the various ends. The whole rink was on edge.

Alex. Archibald wasted very few stones and regularly placed the leads where called for. Ray Best played a great second, being up against Dr. Carson, a Tankard man. All told it was a game that scintillated with good curling and the high-pitched interest induced by the finals.

Presentation of Prizes.

After the game the prizes were presented in the Assembly Room, up stairs, where the curlers gathered to honor the winners.

Mr. W. G. Morrow, President of the Bonspiel Committee, presided. On behalf of the Peterborough Club he welcomed the visiting rinks and spoke of the pleasure felt upon the large number of entries. The curlers had displayed the most sportsmanlike spirit throughout. The rounds were played off without a single discordant note, and it was felt that everyone had thoroughly enjoyed the Bonspiel. Mr. Morrow congratulated Skip Farwell and his rink upon their splendid performance, and then presented the players with the sets of dinner knives and forks, the prizes to the runners-up in the primary.

Mr. Farwell replied that the Orillia curlers had enjoyed every moment of the bonspiel. They felt they had been defeated by a better rink. They offered the heartiest congratulations to the Fitzgerald four and hoped for would have the pleasure of meeting them again.

Vice-Skip Dr. Harvie also spoke a few words of a complimentary nature to the Peterborough Club on the success of the bonspiel and added his congratulations to the Fitzgerald rink.

Mr. Morrow called upon Mr. Flavelle to present the first prize. He remarked that Peterborough curlers had a high regard for Mr. Flavelle, and said they were pleased with representation from the Lindsay Club

Mr. Flavelle congratulated the Orillia curlers and pointed out that they had rinks in the finals of both the primary and consolation series. To Mr. Fitzgerald and his rink he said it was a pleasure to him to present the first prize honours The rink had proven themselves worthy only after a strenuous series of games. He knew, to his cost, that the winners were worthy, and he congratulated Mr. Fitzgerald on behalf of the Peterborough club and visiting rinks, and then presented him with the Grand Challenge Cup and the four pairs of curling stones.

Mr. Fitzgerald and Mr. Foote replied briefly expressing their appreciation of the previous remarks and of the pleasure they had enjoyed throughout the games. Mr. Fitzgerald offered he Farwell rink whole-hearted compliments upon the fight they had put up.

Mr. Robert Neill observed that the bonspiel had been most harmonious. He was deeply gratified with the spirit displayed, both on and off the ice, making special reference to the sobriety of the men and the complete absence of contention of any kind

CONSOLATION SERIES.

Something of an anti-climax was provided this morning when Billie Carley's "Dube" defeated Mr. Flavelle's good rink by 16?14 in an extra end.

The score by ends was as follows:

Carley ..... 10020010120041—15

Flavelle ..... 03402102000200—14

Mr. Flavelle opened strong, but his club-mate from Lindsay got a five end that evened it up. Flavelle went out in front again and on the 11th end was up four. Carley drew even with a four end, and finished with one on the extra. The 12th end was a hummer, especially when Carley's chances became apparent. He was lying four and simply picked off the Flavelle shots. He had the last stone and worked it as he did the others. It was a startling finish, but Carley has had to fight all through the bonspiel.

The following are the scores of some of the later games in the Consolation Series:

CONSOLATION—FOURTH ROUND.

Morrow ..... 02201010200—10

Carley ..... 10020102000—11

CONSOLATION—FIFTH ROUND

Flavelle ..... 03200102213—14

Neill ..... 12002000000—10

CONSOLATION—SEMI-FINALS.

Hinds ..... 11211211120—14

Sharpe ..... 00000000200— 2

CURLING NOTES

Congratulations to the Fitzgerald rink.

Likewise to the Peterborough Curling Club upon the success of their bonspiel.

There were enough thrills packed away in the two series for a whole winter's play.

Quite a gallery of ladies saw last night's primary final.

The audience applauded the good shots of both rinks.

DeLaney's stones went home with the other Cobourg rinks' last night.

As a result he was playing the semi-finals in the Consolation this afternoon with a decided handicap.

Skip Eddie Hinds "sizes up" an end as quickly as any of them.

The Farwell rink consisted of players from other rinks from Orillia, who came down last Monday for the Neill-Sheppard games. Tuesday morning they sat for one hour and a half at the G.T.R. station waiting for a home-bound train. They began to talk about the bonspiel and finally decided to remain in Peterborough, and forthwith secured their stones from the baggage room, returned to the rink with the other Orillia rinks. Two games, one in the primary and another in the consolation was all they expected. However, they went the whole primary route to the finals.

Carley, of Lindsay, defeated two Tankard rinks from his own home town. One was George Little's, and the other J. D. Flavelle's. He had to take the most of his games at the bayonet point, as it were.

Two stalwarts clashed when Neill met Flavelle. It was a hard game all

COMPLAINS OF THE ATTENDANCE

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—It is well known that the fighting men of every nation have certain national characteristics, and that the British army is always appreciated with "dogged perseverance," "bulldog tenacity," "steady endurance," "indomitable courage," and "inflexibility of purpose." If it is really true, as I believe it is, that the honour of the British Empire is now being upheld by an army largely civilian in personnel, then the company of the Royal Guards to which I belong has no claim whatever to consider itself even remotely connected with such an army. Is patriotism an animating purpose or is it a mere notion? When the Home Guard was formed I felt that it was a credit to the City that one company should be composed wholly of professional men, and to me it was an inspiring sight to see ministers, lawyers, doctors, dentists, teachers and bankers in line to do their duty to King and country. We did not expect to have to defend our City from invaders, but we did expect that our ranks would encourage those who had gone to fight our battles across the seas, and perhaps discourage those [illegible] from [illegible]. Is it [illegible] that the Motherland in this hour of national peril. No. 7 Company was a failure in relation to those who really realized at the time the idea of professional men getting themselves to the real task of [illegible] their military efficiency.

I say it was proper to refuse to train a company. Why I am ashamed, heartily ashamed, of those who joined never turned out only that one night. Others turned out a night or two after, and in a while. Leaving aside the "professional" company who [illegible] by one banker (the captain), one teacher, and one lawyer, with the exception of clerks or tea pots, who are not technically professional men at all. And let it be said to their credit, that the men in this company who are not really professional men have been the most regular in their attendance. What I can reply to this: Does the reason for [illegible] the Home Guard still hold good? If there was a need then, how is it about [illegible] to-day? Of course it is much more pleasant to sit around the dressing on a cold night, reading the latest war news, than to turn out to drill; but what about our men in the trenches? It is a cruel and glorious thing to die for one's native country, but it is an awful business to live for her. And, after all, if the task of the morning is taken up by three fifty-cent [illegible] by the grace of the brave, why not leave it to them? They have a-wake done it only Sirs!—Yours truly,

PRIVATE, NO. 7 COMPANY.

STUDYING OUR OWN METHODS.

Actual value is one of the hardest things in the world to determine. Most of us are easily fooled on half the things we buy. In a large percentage of the goods we purchase we permit ourselves to be assured we are right by the smooth blandishments of a salesman. Probably in most cases the salesman is right. But in many cases he has nothing but hearsay to back him. In the case of foreign goods he may have read in some paper, or may have been assured by the literature of the buying agent abroad, that such and such goods are exactly what people in this country want. He may have all sorts of printed guarantees that in such places as are mentioned in the labels on the goods they never make anything but the best for the best price, and always make goods of the highest value for the money paid.

But when it comes to goods made in our own country by our own people, the assurance is a different matter. When we speak of goods made in Canada we refer to goods made under conditions with which we are all more or less familiar. We get a mental picture of the place where certain goods are made; of the people who make them; of the materials they use and where they come from; of the economic advantage of having the money paid for such goods circulate in our own country for our own benefit.

And that is a sort of value that we are able to appreciate; because it is part of our own personal and national life.

O'Reilly's Liquor Store Burglarized

Lindsay Again Visited by Burglars —Wet Goods Stolen

LINDSAY, Feb. 5.—The liquor store of Mr. J. O'Reilly, Kent Street, was broken into on Wednesday night and about $30 worth of liquors, including some cigars and money, were taken.

Mr. O'Reilly was the first to discover that his store was burglarized, which was made on entering it in the morning at about eight o'clock. The door, which opened into the rear shop, where empty bottles are kept, was thrown back and Mr. O'Reilly could see two small apertures in the door which led to the back yard. The store was littered with papers, that were torn from the bottles of liquor stolen.

Manner of Entrance.

The entrance was first tried on the back window, one pane being broken, but a strong shutter which was on the inside was securely protected with an iron bar. The thieves concluded that there would be less resistance offered by going through the door. At this point they started to make their ingress with a chisel and hammer. The door was secured by four iron bolts which are in general use on ordinary doors. This blocked their easy access to the place by way of forcing the door open, but being equal to the emergency a hole sufficiently large to insert the hand and arm was cut, and by this means the bolt was reached and withdrawn.

Only Clue.

The only clue left by the burglars was a case knife, which is now in the hands of Chief Short. Blood stains on the door where the operator cut himself with the chisel used in making an opening to reach the bolt might furnish another clue.

The Albert Medal For Havelock Man

Brakeman Carter, of the C.P.R., to be Rewarded for Heroism

HAVELOCK, Feb. 5.—Brakeman J. J. Carter is to be presented with an Albert medal of the second class for his heroism in saving the life of a little three year old girl in Tweed on May 10th last.

It will be remembered that on that day the child's life was saved by Mr. Carter at the risk of his own life. The little tot was standing on the track with a monster locomotive thundering down upon her. There was not time to stop a big engine and Mr. Carter ran to the pilot, jumped and caught the little one in his arms and threw himself clear of the track.

Reeve Kindred took the matter up some time ago with C. P. R. officials and the Secretary of State. On Saturday he received a letter from General Manager MacTier of the C.P.R. stating that he had written Gen. Supt. Arundel of Toronto, advising that official that the C.P.R. had received official notice from Mr. Thomas Mulvey, Under Secretary of State, that he has been advised by the Colonial Secretary that King George had been pleased to award an Albert Medal of the Second Class to Brakeman Carter.

Mr. Carter will be presented with the medal later on by the C.P.R. officials.

A Great Record

On page three of to-day's Examiner is shown the record growth of the sale of Salada Tea in Canada. The year 1914 holds the record for the number of pounds sold, which is remarkable in face of business conditions. Still more remarkable is the sale of Salada tea during the first two weeks of January, which is bigger than any previous two weeks' record in the history of the Company. Quality must go a long way in making such a showing.

WEDDING BELLS

CONROY—SUMMERHAYES.

The San Francisco Examiner of January 28th, has the following account of the marriage of Dr. Robt. Conroy, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Conroy, Hunter Street east:

Miss Helen Summerhayes and Dr. Robert Conroy, of Medford, Oregon, were married last night at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. Aurelius Buckingham, in Jackson Street. Rev. Father Leo of Medford, an old friend of Dr. Conroy's, read the ritual. Albert George Luchsinger, cousin of the bride, gave her away.

Her gown was fashioned of the same handsome materials that have formed the bridal dress of Mrs. Buckingham. It was of brocade and silver, draped with Venetian point lace, with a tulle veil covering it to the end of the train. Mrs. Michael Campion and Miss Alice Summerhayes were the bride's attendants. Dr. J. Emmons, of Oregon, was best man. Dr. and Mrs. Conroy will return from their honeymoon within a week to attend the wedding of Miss Alice Summerhayes and Neil Cornwall of Berkeley.

The Buckingham home was beautifully adorned, roses in several shades adorning the rooms. The wedding reception and supper were attended only by the relatives and a few family friends.

U.S. WILL NOT SUBMIT TO GERMAN "WAR ZONE" ORDER

It Will Investigate to Get Accurate Texts of Two Notes Published in Berlin--Will Act to Save American Commerce

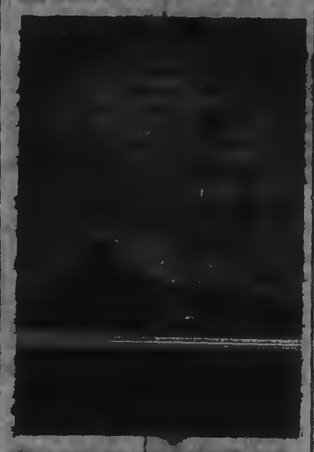
SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—The United States will not submit silently to Germany's "war zone" order. First, it will investigate to get accurate texts of two notes, published from Berlin. Then it will act to save American commerce from demoralization. These facts were made emphatically plain to-day by official intimations. The State Department prepared to day to inquire as to the authenticity of the two notes given out by the Berlin government. Thus far its only information is a "warning"—not a notice of blockade—that neutral shipping is endangered on the northern and western coasts of France by reason of proposed German sorties against English troop ships. The Department has no reason to believe the more extensive zone around England is not authentic. When it gets at the truth of Germany's proposals, it will seek protection. If Germany does not offer proper conveys through "war zones" the United States undoubtedly will voice a vigorous protest.

Toronto General Trusts Corporation

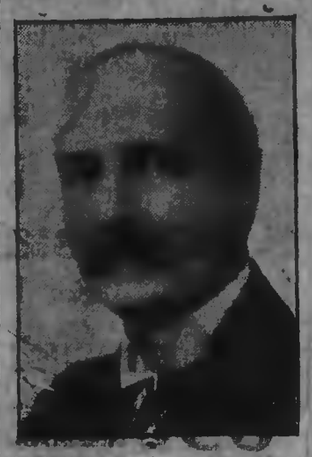
Annual Meeting of Shareholders Held at Company's Head Office, Toronto, Wednesday, Feb'y 3rd

In another column we publish the full Annual Financial Statement of the Toronto General Trusts Corporation including the address of Mr. J. W. Langmuir, the retiring General Manager.



Mr. J. W. Langmuir, Vice-President, who retires from the General Managership after thirty-three years with this Corporation which he helped to organize.

The Financial Statement would be a most creditable one even in flourishing times but for a year of depression the report shows a wonderful record of success. The Net Profits for the year were [illegible]. New business amounts to $4,285,207.



Mr. A. D. Langmuir, who assumes the General Managership of the Corporation is successful to his father.

The position of General Manager left vacant by the retirement of Mr. J. W. Langmuir will be filled by Mr. A. D. Langmuir, his son, who has been for many years Assistant General Manager and is thoroughly trained in the policy followed by the Corporation for so many years and which has been responsible for its success. The position of Assistant General Manager will hereafter be filled by Mr. W. G. Watson.

Mr. W. G. Watson, who is promoted from Secretary to be Assistant General Manager.

There will be practically no change in the conduct of the business on account of the retirement of Mr. J. W. Langmuir who will remain on the Board as Vice-President as the entire staff will otherwise remain the same. It is safe to say that no institution has so completely deserved and won the confidence of the investing public of Canada.

"SINK BRITAIN'S TRANSPORTS" WAR CRY OF GERMAN PRESS

Thousands of British Troops Are Being Moved Across the English Channel in Preparation for the Spring Campaign

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

BERLIN, Feb. 6.—"Sink Britain's transports" was the war cry taken up by the German press to-day. Aggressive action was urged upon the Admiralty in lengthy articles that approved all the steps taken by Admiral Von Tirpitz and his staff in launching his new policy of starving out Britain by means of submarines. Thousands of British troops are being moved across the Channel daily in preparation for the spring campaign in Flanders and northern France. Spies brought word here to-day that fresh British regiments are being concentrated near Boulogne. Boulogne itself has been turned over to the British military who have taken over the city administration according to reports brought here. The exploits of U-21 in the Irish Sea have aroused the greatest confidence here in the ability of the newest German submarines. The newspapers demanded to-day that a submarine flotilla be sent into action in the English Channel at once to stop the troop movement that has been under way since the middle of January.

Britain Will Add Oil Bearing Products to Contraband List

LONDON, Feb. 5.—Gradually the economic phases of the war are becoming more apparent in Great Britain. The military activities, which monopolized attention at the opening of the struggle, are now overshadowed at times by the blockade of the North Sea and the strict measures the navy is enforcing against German commerce and trade with the neutralg adjoining Germany which have hitherto been supplying foodstuffs to Germany and Austria.

From time to time the contraband list has lengthened, as it became possible for English officials to make a their adversaries and the probable sources of supplies. Every week England is also increasing the list of articles whose exportation from the British Isles is prohibited. The latest commodity to go on this list was copra, or dried cocoanut. Immediately after the exportation of copra was forbidden the price fell appreciably in England, as little of the material is consumed here. The Germans extract an oil from the cocoanut which is used as the basis for oleomargarine.

Reign of Terror Sweeping Bohemia

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

LONDON, Feb. 6.—A reign of terror is sweeping Bohemia because of Austrian defeats, the Berne correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph wired today. His information, he said, came from reliable sources in Prague.

PAPA'S COMING."

"He swung on the gate and looked down the street,
Awaiting the sound of familiar feet.
Then suddenly came to the street childs' eyes
The marvellous glory of morning

For a manly form with a steady stride
Drew near to the gate and opened it wide
As the boy sprang forward and joyously cried,
'Papa's coming!'

"The wasted face of a little child
Looked out at the window with eyes made wild
By the ghostly shades in the failing light
And the glimpse of a drunk man in the night
Cursing and reeling from side to side.
The poor boy, trembling and trying to hide,
Clung to his mother's skirts and sighed,
'Papa's coming!'"

Fine gardens grow fine teas; that is, gardens whose altitude is at least 4,000 feet. Salada tea is composed of selected leaves grown at least at such a level. Hence its unrivalled flavour.

RUSSIANS CONTINUE TO MEET WITH SUCCESSES

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

PETROGRAD, Feb. 6.—The bulletine transmitted to-day by the generals commanding the regions of most violent fighting contain news more pleasing to the Russian people than has been received since the Germanic allies threw the weight of their strength to the battle fronts of Eastern Europe. The Russians have seized both banks of the head waters of the River Inster, in East Prussia, a success which enables them to deliver a flank attack on Insterburg from the north, while the forces that have passed the Angerap to the south advance straight west; the army which drove the Austrians from the Dukla Pass in the Carpathians has reached the River Laborcza, in Northern Hungary; while the Germans west of Warsaw have been repulsed after the most savage fighting.

The Russian armies to-day tok the offensive directly west of Warsaw, at the junction of the Vistula and the Bzura, crossing the latter river and dislodging Germans from a bridgehead a Dakbowa. It seems apparent that the Russians have assumed the initiative in this quarter as a direct result of the severe reverse they inflicted on the Germans yesterday in the Bolimow region when a three-day battle reached its climax.

Upon a front of seven miles, with Bozjimow and Gousnine as centres of attack, the Germans concentrated seven divisions yesterday and hurled more than [illegible] of their finest infantry against the Russian line. They delivered attack after attack, reverting to methods which characterized their earlier operations in Belgium and France, and deploying great masses of men over open ground, careless apparently of the terrible cost in killed and wounded if the way to Warsaw could be opened. A detail which illustrates the violence of the effort is the official statement that some of the German divisions of 15,000 men charged the Russian line on a front only a verst (two-thirds of a mile) wide. In these sections the German infantry advanced in close-pressed mass, attacking at the double-quick shoulder to shoulder.

To Inspect Headquarters For Canadians At The Front

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

OTTAWA, Feb. 6—Sir George Perley, Acting High Commissioner for Canada, in London, has gone to France, and will visit the front. Information to this effect reached the Government to-day. Sir George, it is understood, is already in France, and probably now at his destination, the British Army Headquarters in the north While there he will acquaint himself with the arrangements made for the Canadian expeditionary force before it goes into the trenches.

The departure of the Acting High Commissioner and the nature of his mission indicate the course of military movements of speical interest to Canada. The Canadian Government, through Sir George Perley's inspection, will be made thoroughly acquainted with the conditions under which the first Canadian contingent will go into action.

WILL INFORM THEIR RELATIVES

Friends in Canada Will Hear as to Condition of Sick Soldiers From Time to Time

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

LONDON, Feb. 6.—The Canadian Red Cross arrangements for keeping friends in Canada and elsewhere informed concerning the condition of the sick and wounded will be in full working order within the next few days. A strong ladies' committee has been formed, including the wives of many leading London Canadians. Ground floor offices will be open in Trafalgar Square. The committee will probably not make first intimation of illnesses or wounds to next of kin, this being undertaken by the Militia Department, but will keep friends informed of progress of cases and will watch over the sick and convalescent, aiding them in every possible way.

Naval Losses On Both Sides

Naval Military Record Publishes a Revised List

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, Feb. 6.—The naval military record have published a revised list of the naval losses. England and her Allies have lost twenty-four ships, about 152,300 tons, while Germany and her [illegible] lost sixty units, over 170,000 tons.

Figures Millers Cite To Prove Prices of Wheat Are Fictitious

Figures which millers and bakers say prove present wheat prices are "fictitious, sentimental and speculative," and based upon a shortage which cannot actually occur, if at all, before next May, nine months after the price began to soar:

	Bushels.
United States Wheat crop for 1914	819,817,000
Carried over from 1913	77,000,000
Available supply	896,817,000
	Bushels.
Per capita consumption of flour, one barrel annually, or 100,000,000 barrels needed by the country. Five bushels of wheat needed to produce each barrel. Total needed for food	500,000,000
Need for seed wheat (Government estimate)	84,000,000
Total Requirements	584,000,000
Surplus for export	312,817,000
Exported July 1 to February 1	203,000,000
Available for export	109,817,000

Present average rate of export is 8,000,000 bushels a week, which shipping experts say cannot be increased because vessels cannot be obtained. At this rate the export supply cannot be exhausted before some time in May, shortly before 1915 wheat begins to be harvested.

Bakers and millers assert these figures prove the price, which began to go up last July, has been boosted nine months before a possible shortage would justify famine prices.

Experts say relief of the Dardanelles blockade of Russian wheat or better facilities for handling the Argentine surplus probably will relieve the situation long before an actual shortage exists.

FRANCE WILL TRIUMPH SAID DYING GENERAL

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, Feb. 6.—The Temps publishes the following story of the death of General Bridoux, taken from the notebook of an army surgeon just returned from captivity in Germany:

"I passed recently through one of the most touching experiences of my life," the surgeon writes. "General Bridoux, in command of our cavalry corps, died in my arms. I have seen many deaths in twenty years, and I have read of the deaths of Plutarch and of the generals of the Empire, but I am convinced that no noble a soul as that of Gen. Bridoux has rarely animated a mortal.

"The battle was raging in fog so thick that one could see no farther than 200 yards. In order better to watch the operations, the General and his staff were approaching the lines in their automobiles. Coming into a clearing the party sustained a heavy musketry fire from a party of Germans concealed fifty yards away in a thicket.

"Two chauffeurs and two ordnance officers were killed outright, before the cavalry escort could intervene and drive the Germans away. Gen. Bridoux fell back in his seat with his hand to his breast. A bullet had shattered his shoulder, penetrated the body and pierced a lung.

"We carried him into a log hut in the thicket. 'I suffer,' he exclaimed, 'I feel very ill.' Then he talked of his wife and children to the chaplain, but to us he spoke of the army, of his soldiers, of his 'corps of cavalry that must be without reproach and of which all the men are heroes.'

"Gen. Bridoux, who commands a division under Bridoux, arrived. 'My dear Buisson,' said the dying General, 'I am about to die for my country, and I am almost happy since that will give you a command of which you are worthy. Do not forget that our role is to advance, always advance and that we should do all the harm possible to the invaders who seek to annihilate our beautiful France. I have confidence in the final victory and I regret to have contributed so little to it.

"'I die joyfully for my country,' he resumed after a paroxysm. 'Tell the cavalry corps that the sacrifice of my life should serve as an example.'

"Another paroxysm, another lucid interval and then the General expired with these words on his lips: 'I die—I am happy—my country will triumph.'"

DANDRUFF AND FALLING HAIR

Itching, Burning, Irritated Scalp Kept Awake at Night. Used Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. Now Head Is Well.

"26 De Salaberry St., Quebec, Que.—"About six years ago dandruff began to form on my scalp. At first I didn't notice it, but my hair began falling out gradually and it kept getting worse. The itching and burning were so bad that I scratched and irritated my scalp. I was kept awake at night by the irritation. [illegible]

"I used [illegible] and [illegible] Oil; also a few other oils and they did no good. I then tried a sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment, washed my head with the Soap and warm water, and applied the Ointment. After the first time my hair stopped falling. I got one cake of Cuticura Soap and one box of Ointment. I continued using them for a few months and my head is now well." (Signed) Miss Myrtle Davis, June 2, 1914.

[Samples Free by Mail]

For pimples and blackheads, the following is a most effective and economical treatment: Gently smear the affected parts with Cuticura Ointment, on the end of the finger; but do not rub. Wash off the Cuticura Ointment in five minutes with Cuticura Soap and hot water and continue bathing for some minutes. This treatment is best on rising and retiring. "THE BATTLE CRY"

Charles Neville Buck

"I reckon ye haven't seen the castle lately," he said. "Ye wouldn't hardly know it. It's gettin' all cleaned up an' made civilized. The eagle's nest is turnin into a sure-'nough bird-cake."

"Who's changing now?" she bantered. "Am I civilising you or—" her eyes danced with badinage—"are you preparing to get married?"

His face flushed and then became almost surly.

"Who'd marry me," he savagely demanded.

"I'm sure I don't know," she teased. "Whom have you asked?"

He bent a little forward, and said slowly:

"Once ye told me I was wastin' my youth. Ye 'lowed I ought to be captain of my soul. If I found a woman that I wanted and she wouldn't have me—what ought I to do about it?"

"There are two courses prescribed in all the correspondence schools, and both are perfectly simple," she announced with mock gravity. "One is to simply take the lady first and ask her afterward. The other is even easier: get another girl."

"Oh!" he said. He was hurt because she had either not seen, or had pretended not to see, his meaning. She had not grasped the presumptuous dream and effrontery of his heart.

His voice for a moment became enigmatical as he said, "Sometimes I think ye've played hell in these mountains."

Usually on their rambles she carried a small book, and now it pleased her to ignore his surly comment and to perch herself on a high and mossy rock and open her little volume. He stood down below with his elbows propped on the top of the bowlder, wearing such a face as Pygmalion may have worn before his marble Galatea turned to rosy flesh and stepped down from her cold pedestal.

"Now listen and I'll tell you what Mr. Browning once had to say on the subject," she ordered and opening the book, she began to read from "The Statue and the Bust."

Slowly, the man, at first impatient of so impersonal a thing as a poet's abstractions, found his interest chained and a fire began to burn in his eyes. Was she reading him that old romance as any woman to any man or as one woman giving a soul-deep hint to one man? As she came to the moral of the story of the Duke who delayed too long in taking what he wished, the man's breath was coming fast and his fingers were clenched.

" 'Be sure that each renewed the vow,
No to-morrow's sun should arise and set
And leave them then as it left them now.' "

She let the book drop for a moment and her eyes strayed. The man felt his body stiffen, and after a while she took up the little volume and began to read once more he fancied with a little sigh.

"But the next day passed and the next day yet,
With still fresh cause to wait one day more
Ere each leaped over the parapet.' "

He was sure this time that from her half-parted lips a high had broken, and that there was a personal wistfulness in the little line between her brows. He bent closer and prompted in a voice which he knew came hoarsely, "Go on."

" 'So. While these wait the trump of doom,
How do their spirits pass, I wonder,
Night and days in the narrow room.

" 'I hear you reproach, "But delay was best
Since, their end was a crime." "Oh, a crime will do
As well," I reply, "to serve for a test.

As a golden virtue through and through
And the sin I impute to each frustrate ghost,
Is the unlit lamp and the ungirt loin. . . ' "

She shook her head as one who would shake off a thought which carries a deep hurt, and then, looking up at Anse Havey, she gave a little start an forced a smile.

Suddenly it had come to the man that perhaps, after all he, too, had repeated the Duke's mistake. He, too, had one youth which was passing and could not be renewed. He could not even set up a statue in the memory of his love. Slowly the veins in his temples swelled into cords. His eyes caressed and devoured the face of the girl perched there above him on the rock. One of her hands rested on the moss and toward it his own hand crept. Then it was that she looked at him with a start and smiled. The man's hand came back and in his chest rose a groan which did not reach his lips. Though she had been reading at him she had not been reading to him. She had been thinking all the time of another—of Roger Malcolm, he supposed—and when she had looked up and realised after her revery that he was there, it had been almost as if he had come suddenly and surprised her. From such thoughts as those he was an exile.

"So you see," she said blithely enough, "Mr. Browning seems to favour the first course recommended by the correspondence schools, rather than the second."

"The case ain't just the same sort, I reckon," he said with an effort. "The lady loved him, too, ye see . . . and besides he was a king . . . or pretty nigh a king."

"Every man can be a king if he will," she declared and the furrow came back. "I knew a man once who was like a Duke. He waited."

Anse Havey gripped his teeth together.

"I'm obleeged to ye for the advice," he said. "Will ye lend me that book? I reckon I'll read that thing over again sometime."

That spring silent forces were at work in the hills; as silent and less beneficent than the stirring sap and the brewing of showers.

Three men in the mountains were now fully convinced that what the world needs the world will have, and they were trying to find a solution to the question which might make their own people sharers in the grain, instead of victims. These three were Anse and Milt and Jeb, and their first step was the effort to hold landowners in check, and make them slow to sell and guarded in their bargaining.

Jim Fletcher, a mountain man who had for years drifted between Tribulation and Winchester, trading in cattle and timber, made a journey through the hills that spring, and was everywhere received as "home-folks." For him there were no bars of distrust and he was able for that reason to buy land right and left. Though he had paid for it at a price above the average it was a price far below the value of the coal and timber it contained—and Jim had picked his land.

Anse Havey and his associates knew that Jim Fletcher had been subsidized; that the money he spent so lavishly was not his own money; and that he came as a stalking horse, but they did not know that he had been to Louisville and had conferred there with Mr. Trevor. Neither did they know at once that he had visited the cabins of every malcontent among both the former factions and that he was a mischief-maker adroitly laying here in the hills the foundation for a new feud.

Jim had a bland tongue and a persuasive manner and he talked to the mountain men in their own speech, but he was none the less the advance agent of the new enemy from down below; the personal fulfilment of Juanita's prophecy to Roger Mal-

At the school things were going on actively and hopefully, with now and then a marring note of discouragement.

One Friday afternoon the sullen boy came in. His face was flushed and his appearance hinted of drinking. He said no word, made no apology, but with his manner of defiance for any question, went to the rack, and took out his rifle and his revolver.

The next day was Saturday and that afternoon Bad Anse Havey was walking with Juanita.

The girl had anxiously told him about the coming of the sullen boy to withdraw his rifle from her shrine. "What does it mean, Anse" she demanded. He had laughed.

"I reckon," he retorted, "it means that ye can't change nature in a day nor grow a poplar tree in a flower pot."

Then while they still talked there was a yell from the road and a clatter of hoofs. They looked out to see one of those old mountain demonstrations that used to punctuate Saturday afternoons.

A party of drunken horsemen were galloping with their bridle reins in their teeth and firing off rifles and pistols in the air with both hands. They were "ridin' about, huntin' trouble." They were attacking no one, unless some one should venture to smile or frown at them. They were showing themselves free-born citizens and a law to themselves and they were all full of whisky and quarrel.

They passed the school and their shots and shouts went around the turn of the road. At their head rode the sullen boy who studied with passionate ardour and zest.

Juanita sighed, but Bad Anse only smiled.

"Let 'em be," he said philosophically. "They'll sober up after a while. Just be right glad at the progress ye've made—"

"Anse," she suddenly exclaimed. "You must counsel your people not to take their guns away."

"Me!" he exclaimed. "Ain't ye pushing our contract right far? When did I ever stand for clipping an eagle's claws?"

And yet the feud-leader did cause a word to go from cabin to cabin, to the effect that the public bearing of arms was now unnecessary, and showed a lack of confidence in Young Milt McBriar, who was no longer an enemy, but a friend.
